PREFACE

As might have been expected, the difficulties in obtaining recent information concerning belligerent, and especially enemy, states have not decreased during the past year. We have, however, succeeded in overcoming some of the difficulties, and have been able to give the latest available information in several sections of the enemy countries. The other countries have been revised as usual, certain of them having been specially overhauled. The Introductory pages include a further list of books relating to the war, and also a diary of its principal events. Special attention is directed to "Additions and Corrections" for information that reached us too late to embody in the book. For the section on Arabia, in the "Additions and Corrections," we are indebted to Mr. Leonard W. King, F.S.A., of the British Museum, who has also revised the map of that country. The British Empire pages have once more passed through the hands of Mr. A. D. Webb.

To all who have co-operated with us in preparing this, the fifty-fourth, edition of the Year-Book, we express our very warm thanks.

Total . . . . .	2,505	1,899,943

X.—FINANCE AND COMMERCE OF VARIOUS COUNTRIES.

The following statistics relating to the financial and commercial condition of various countries have been put together for convenience of reference, not for the purpose of comparison. Revenue and expenditure, which in some States are raised and expended by local authorities, are in others included in the national accounts. Debt in some countries is incurred for the sake of profitable investment, while in others it is unproductive and burdensome. With respect to trade, the figures in general show the special imports (or those for home consumption) and the special exports (or those of home produce and manufacture). Specie and bullion are generally excluded.

The statistics are for the most part for the calendar year 1916, or the financial year 1915-16.

XI.—ELECTORAL REFORM IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

In 1916, at the suggestion of Members of the Government, the Speaker of the House of Commons called together a conference of Peers and Members of the House of Commons, representative of divergent views, to consider the questions of a reform of the franchise, of the registration of electors, of the method of elections, and the redistribution of seats. A number of resolutions were passed, most of them unanimously, of which the more important are summarised as follows:—

1. Registration of Electors :—

The qualifying period to be reduced to six months.

The register to be revised every six months.

The cost of registration to be borne equally by the State and the local authorities.

2. Reform of the Franchise :—

"Every person of full age, not subject to any legal incapacity, who, for the qualifying period, has resided in any premises, or has occupied for the purpose of his business, profession, or trade, any premises of a clear yearly value of not less than 10*l.*, shall be entitled to be registered as a Parliamentary elector."

Removals within the same or contiguous boroughs or counties not to disqualify.

A person to vote in only one constituency, except that he may have one additional vote as a University elector, or in respect of the occupation of business premises in another constituency.

3. Redistribution of Seats :—

As a general rule one member per 70,000 of the population in July, 1914, is suggested as the standard. A variation of 20,000 from this figure to be allowed to counties or boroughs, and the City of London to continue to have two members.

Contiguous boroughs to be formed into a single constituency, if the whole is then entitled to return from 3 to 5 members—this is conditional on Proportional Representation being adopted.

Ireland is not covered by these redistribution proposals.

4. University Representation :—

Oxford and Cambridge to continue to return two members each, but the electorate to be widened, and each voter allowed only one vote. Other English and Welsh Universities to be combined into one constituency, and those of Scotland into one constituency, returning three members each, elected on the system of a single transferable vote.

The obtaining of a degree to be the basis of electoral qualification.

5. Method and Costs of Elections :—

In single constituencies formed to return three to five members, the election to be on the principle of proportional representation, and each elector to have one transferable vote. In single member constituencies where there are more than two candidates, election to be on the system of alternative vote. Absent voters to be allowed to vote.

All polls to be on one day.

Returning Officers' charges to be paid by the State on a fixed scale.

Every candidate to deposit £150 at time of nomination. This is to be forfeited if the votes polled by a candidate are below a certain proportion of the total number of voters polling.

The maximum scale of expenses to be reduced to from 4*d.* to 7*d.* per elector, according to nature of constituency.

Outside persons or organisations not to interfere in elections, unless their expenditure is authorised by the candidate, and returned as part of his expenses.

The Ballot Act to be made permanent.

6. The Local Government Register :—

Six months' residence to January 15, or July 15, as owner or tenant of any land or premises, to qualify for registration. Neither sex nor marriage to be a disqualification but husband and wife not to be both qualified in respect of same premises.

This applies to England and Wales only.

7. Soldiers and Sailors :—

To be qualified to vote in area in which ordinarily resident.

8. Woman Suffrage :—

Any woman on the Local Government register, or whose husband is on that register, to be registered and to vote as a Parliamentary elector, if of a certain age (30 or 35 suggested). Such a woman may further vote as a University elector.

9. Miscellaneous :—

Poor relief for less than thirty days not to disqualify.

† Including 271 tons of calc spar in 1915 and 67 tons in 1916.

‡ Including 4,297 tons of ganister in 1915, and 8,497 tons in 1916.

§ In addition, 355 tons of undressed tin ore were obtained in 1915.

It must be borne in mind that the above figures do not in all cases represent the total production of the minerals for the year. Large quantities of several important minerals, such as iron ore, limestone, sandstone, slate, clay, &c., are obtained from quarries under the Quarries Act and from other open workings, the returns from which are not yet (April, 1917) available. The totals for coal and for the ores of copper, lead, and zinc may, however, be regarded as substantially complete.

The Army Council.—An Order in Council, published in April 1917, defines the duties of the members of the Army Council. It declares that the Secretary of State is to be responsible to his Majesty and Parliament for all the business of the Army Council, and all business, other than business which he specially reserves to himself, is to be transacted in the following principal divisions:—

The Chief of the Imperial General Staff shall, in addition to performing such other duties as may be assigned to him by the Secretary of State, be responsible for issuing the orders of his Majesty's Government in regard to military operations.

The Deputy Chief of the Imperial General Staff shall be responsible for the performance of such duties as the Chief of the Imperial General Staff may assign to him from time to time.

The following members are responsible to the Secretary of State for duties assigned to them by him relating to the following matters:—

The Adjutant-General, the Quartermaster-General and the Master-General of the Ordnance—Administration of business relating to the organisation, disposition, personnel, armament, and maintenance of the Army.

The Civil Member—Administration of business affecting the Territorial Force Associations, the Volunteer Force, and War Department lands, and other business assigned to him by the Secretary of State.

The Finance Member—Finance of the Army, and other business assigned to him.

The Director-General of Military Aeronautics—Administration of the Army Air Service not subject to the control of either the Air Board or the Ministry of Munitions.

The Director-General of Movements and Railways—Transport by rail or inland waterways at home or abroad of the personnel and material of the Army.

The Surveyor-General of Supply—Commercial administration of Army supplies not under the control of the Ministry of Munitions.

The Secretary of the War Office will act as Secretary of the Army Council, and will be charged with the interior economy of the War Office, and the preparation of all official communications of the Council, and with such other duties as the Secretary of State may assign to him.

During the period of the War the Military Members of the Army Council shall have precedence among themselves according to their Army seniority.

Naval Administration.—In May, 1917, certain changes were introduced into the Naval Administration. Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, the present First Sea Lord, was given the additional title of Chief of the Naval Staff, and other appointments were made. The object of the changes was (1) to free the First Sea Lord and the heads of the Naval Staff from administrative work so that they may concentrate on the important issues relating to the naval conduct of the war, and (2) to strengthen the Shipbuilding and Production Departments of the Admiralty.

Duration of Parliament.—Under the Parliament and Local Elections Act, 1917, the life of the present Parliament is extended to November 30, 1917.

London County Council, Finance 1917-18.—The estimated total gross expenditure on rate and debt accounts is 10,991,520*l.*

UNITED STATES.

Estimated population.—The following table, which gives the estimated population of the United States, also throws light on the figures in this issue on p. 442 and those given in the issue of 1916 on p. 440. The first line includes, besides the Continental United States, the following outlying possessions:— Alaska, Guam, Hawaii, Panama Canal Zone, Philippine Islands, Porto Rico and Samoa, and also persons in military and naval service stationed abroad.

United States . . . . .	112,444,620	110,715,400	108,988,394	107,271,076	105,543,313
Continental United States . . . . .	102,017,312	100,399,318	98,781,324	97,163,320	95,545,336

Woman's Suffrage (see p. 437).—The suffrage so far as State officers are concerned is controlled by each State Constitution, and members of Congress are elected by those who can vote for the State House of Representatives, and by those only. But the national Constitution allows the electors of President and Vice-President to be appointed in each State "in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct." That puts it in the power of a legislature to allow women to vote for President without the formality of an amendment of the Constitution.

In 1913 women in Illinois were in this way granted (by legislative act, not by constitutional amendment) the right to vote for all officers except congressmen and State officers. They thus gained the privilege of voting for electors of President and Vice-President. In 1917 the legislatures of Indiana, Ohio, and North Dakota have adopted a similar device which admits women to vote in the choice of President, but not in elections to Congress. In 1917, also, Arkansas granted full suffrage to women in effect, by allowing them the vote in "primary" elections—those for the choice of candidates. As there is virtually no "opposition" in the southern States, the result of the primary election makes the subsequent actual election a mere formality.

AUSTRIA.

Parliament (see p. 675).—On April 23, 1917, the Houses were summoned to meet on May 30, 1917.

HUNGARY.

New Cabinet.—The Tisza Cabinet resigned on May 24, 1917.

RUSSIA.

TURKEY.

ARABIA.*

In view of recent events in Arabia, the following statement may be of service.

Large areas in Arabia consist only of desert and steppe, occupied by Bedouin tribes, who are forced to adopt a nomadic existence and own allegiance only to their tribal groups. Considerable portions of the Nefud, or Northern Desert, and the whole of the Ruba el-Khali, or great Southern Desert of soft sand, are quiet uninhabitable. But the oases of Central Arabia and the fertile coastal districts are occupied by settled communities, under eight independent systems of government.

1. The Kingdom of Hejaz, which has attained its independence during the course of the war (see p. 1849), may be regarded as the most important principality in Arabia in virtue of its possession of Mecca and Medina, the Holy Places of Islam. Formerly included in the * See Map.

Turkish Vilayet of Hejaz, which extended from Akaba in the North to Asir in the south, it was the chief centre of Ottoman influence in Arabia; and by means of the Hejaz Railway, with its terminus at Medina, the Turks were enabled to maintain garrisons in the ports and the chief towns of the interior. But the Sherif, or Emir of Mecca, as hereditary keeper of the Holy Places, wielded great influence throughout the Moslem world. Ottoman control was largely maintained in the past by the payment of an annual subsidy, but the presence of the Turks and their maladministration was always resented. Early in the war the British Government guaranteed their protection of the Holy Places, and on June 5th, 1916, HUSSEIN IBN ALI, the present Emir, headed a revolt of the Hejaz and some of the northern tribes and proclaimed his independence. The Turkish garrisons at Mecca, at the ports and at Taif were captured and Ottoman influence has since been restricted to the neighbourhood of the Hejaz Railway. In November, 1916, the Emir Hussein issued a proclamation assuming the title King of Hejaz.

II. The Emirate of Nejd and Hasa, the more powerful of the two Central Arabian principalities, has its capital at Riyadh, whence the Saud dynasty exercises jurisdiction over the neighbouring groups of oases. It is the modern representative of the Wahabite Empire founded about 1745 by Mohammed ibn Saud, Sheikh of Daryyah. The present Emir of Riyadh, ABD EL-AZIZ ES-SAUD, who maintains an intermittent conflict with the neighbouring Emirate of Jebel Shammur, expelled the Turks from Hasa in 1913, and has extended his influence to include Hofuf in the region of the Persian Gulf.

III. The Emirate of Jebel Shammur, which lies to the north of Nejd, was formerly within its jurisdiction; but since the middle of last century it has maintained its independence under the Rashid dynasty. It has its capital at Hail and is far more Bedouin in character than its southern rival. The present Emir of Hail is SAUD IBN ABD EL-AZIZ ER-RASHID.

IV. The Principate of Asir, on the west coast of Arabia between Hejaz and Yemen, has its capital at Sabi'ah in Southern Asir. The principate is in the hands of the Idrisi family, the present ruler being MOHAMMED IBN ALI EL-IDRISI.

V. The Imamate of Yemen, which is centred at Sana, is of considerable antiquity, the Imam tracing his descent to the Prophet's daughter Fatimah, and being credited by his Zeidist followers with infallibility and esoteric knowledge. Since the rebellion of 1891 Turkish influence in Yemen has been maintained with difficulty. The present Imam is YAHYA MOHAMMED HAMID ED-DIN.

VI. The British Protectorate of Aden, to the south of Yemen and in the south-western corner of Arabia, dates from the capture of Aden in 1839. For administrative purposes the Aden Settlement forms part of British India and is under a Political Resident whose influence extends north and west to the Anglo-Turkish frontier of Yemen and eastward to include the district of Hadhrumaut (see p. 100).

VII. The Sultanate of Oman (see p. 1161).

VIII. The Sultanate of Kuwait, on the north-western coast of the Persian Gulf, acquired considerable importance during the discussion of the Baghdad Railway. The Sultan is subsidized by the British Government, which maintains a Political Agent at his Court. The present Sultan, SALIM IBN MUBARAK, succeeded his brother in 1917.

PALESTINE

The total area is about 9,500 square miles (6,000 square miles west of the Jordan and 3,800 square miles east of the Jordan). Population about 500,000 Moslems (mostly Arabs), 120,000 Jews and 100,000 Christians. The principal towns are Jerusalem, with a population of 100,000 (65,000 Jews); Jaffa, 50,000 (12,000 Jews); Gaza, 40,000; Nablous, 28,000; Haifa, 20,000 (2,000 Jews); Hebron, 20,000 (1,000 Jews); Saida, 18,000 (10,000 Jews); Bethlehem, 16,000; Nazareth, 15,000; Tiberias, 10,000 (8,000 Jews).

The principal industries are oil pressing, soapmaking, and the manufacture of wines and brandies. The country produces grapes, oranges, lemons, olives, figs and dates; the forests contain oak, sycamore, pine, cedar and eucalyptus trees. The railways in 1914 had a length of 496 miles, as follows:—Jaffa—Jerusalem, 53 miles; Haifa—Dera'a, 98 miles; Damascus—Dera'a, 75 miles; Dera'a—Ma'an, 208 miles; and Damascus—M'zerib 62 miles.

For the Jewish colonies in Palestine see p. 137.

HAGUE TRIBUNAL.

The list is omitted in this issue. For the composition of the Court on May 16, 1916, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 1439.

- I. Princess Holena, born May 25, 1846; married July 5, 1866, to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein. Living offspring:—Albert John, born Feb. 26, 1869; Victoria, born May 8, 1870; Louise Auguste, born Aug. 12, 1872, married to Prince Aribert of Anhalt July 6, 1891: the marriage was dissolved December 13, 1900.
- II. Princess Louise, born March 18, 1848; married March 21, 1871, to John, Marquis of Lorne, who became Duke of Argyll, April 24, 1900, and died May 2, 1914.
- III. Prince Arthur, Duke of Connaught, born May 1, 1850; married March 13, 1879, to Princess Louise of Prussia, born July 25, 1860; died March 14, 1917. Offspring:—(1) Margaret Victoria, born Jan. 16, 1882, married June 15, 1905, to Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden; (2) Arthur, born Jan. 13, 1883, married Alexandra Victoria, Duchess of Fife, October 15, 1913; (3) Victoria, born March 17, 1886.

IV. Princess Beatrice, born April 14, 1857; married July 23, 1885, to Prince Henry (died January 20, 1896), third son of Prince Alexander of Hesse. Offspring:—(1) Alexander Albert, born Nov. 23, 1886; (2) Victoria Eugénie, born Oct. 24, 1887; married May 31, 1906, to Alfonso XIII., King of Spain; (3) Leopold Arthur Louis, born May 21, 1889; (4) Maurice Victor Donald, born October 3, 1891.

The King's legal title rests on the statute of 12 and 13 Will. III. c. 3, by which the succession to the Crown of Great Britain and Ireland was settled on the Princess Sophia of Hanover and the 'heirs of her body, being Protestants.' By proclamation of May 9, 1910, under the Royal Titles Act, 1901, the title of the King is declared to be 'George V., by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.'

The Regency Act, 1910 (10 Edw. VII. and 1 Geo. V., ch. 26) appointed Queen Mary to act as regent in the event of the demise of the King and his succession by any of his children under the age of 18 years.

Provision is made for the support of the Royal household by the settlement of the Civil List soon after the commencement of each reign. (For historical details, see YEAR-BOOK for 1908, p. 5.) By Act of 10 Ed. VII. and 1 Geo. V. c. 28 (August 3, 1910), the Civil List of the King, after the usual surrender of hereditary revenues, is fixed at 450,000*l.*, of which 110,000*l.* is appropriated to the privy purse of the King and Queen, 125,800*l.* for salaries of the Royal household and retired allowances, 193,000*l.* for household expenses, 20,000*l.* for works, 13,200*l.* for alms and bounty, and 8,000*l.* remains unappropriated. The same Civil List Act of 1910 also provides for an annuity of 70,000*l.* to Queen Mary in the event of her surviving the King. Should the Prince of Wales marry, the Princess of Wales will receive an annuity of 10,000*l.*, and should she survive the Prince of Wales, this annuity will be raised to one of 30,000*l.* Further, there is to be paid to trustees for the benefit of the King's children (other than the Duke of Cornwall) an annual sum of 10,000*l.* in respect of each son (other than the Duke of Cornwall) who attains the age of 21 years, and a further annual sum of 15,000*l.* in respect of each such son who marries, and an annuity of 6,000*l.* in respect of each daughter who attains the age of 21 or marries. The First Commissioner of the Treasury, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Keeper of the King's Privy Purse are appointed the Royal Trustees under this Act. Queen Alexandra, the Queen-Mother, receives the annuity of 70,000*l.* provided by the Civil List Act of 1901. Civil List pensions may be granted, but are not chargeable on the sum paid for the Civil List. All these payments are charged on the Consolidated Fund, into which the surrendered hereditary revenues are carried. The King has paid to him the revenues of the Duchy of Lancaster, the payments made therefrom in 1915 being 63,000*l.* for His Majesty's use.

On the Consolidated Fund are charged likewise the following sums allowed to members of the royal family:—25,000*l.* a year to the Duke of Connaught; 6,000*l.* to Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein; 6,000*l.* to Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll; 6,000*l.* to Princess Henry (Beatrice) of Battenberg; 3,000*l.* to the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz (at present suspended); 6,000*l.* to Princess Helena of Waldeck, Duchess of Albany; 6,000*l.* to the Duchess of Edinburgh; and 6,000*l.* to each of the late King's daughters.

The Heir Apparent has an income from the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall, the payment in 1915 on his account being 82,548*l.*

1. THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

Constitution and Government.

1. IMPERIAL AND CENTRAL.

The supreme legislative power of the British Empire is by its Constitution given to Parliament. Parliament is summoned by the writ of the sovereign issued out of Chancery, by advice of the Privy Council, at least thirty-five days previous to its assembling.

The annual session used to extend from the middle of February to about the middle of August, or occasionally later, but during the war the sittings of Parliament have been interrupted only by comparatively short intervals. Every session must end with a prorogation, and by it all Bills which have not been passed during the session then lapse. A dissolution may occur by the will of the sovereign, or, as is most usual, during the recess, by proclamation, or finally by lapse of time, the statutory limit of the duration of the existence of any Parliament being five years. The life of the present Parliament, which would otherwise have ended in January, 1916, has, however, been extended to April 30, 1917, by the Parliament and Registration Act, 1916, and the Parliament and Local Elections Act, 1916.

Important alterations were made in the Constitution by the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 and 2 Geo. V, ch. 13). Under this Act, all Money Bills (so certified by the Speaker of the House of Commons), if not passed by the House of Lords without amendment, may become law without their concurrence on the royal assent being signified. Public Bills, other than Money Bills or a Bill extending the maximum duration of Parliament, if passed by the House of Commons in three successive sessions, whether of the same Parliament or not, and rejected each time (or not passed) by the House of Lords, may become law without their concurrence on the royal assent being signified, provided that two years have elapsed between the second reading in the first session of the House of Commons, and the third reading in the third session. All Bills coming under this Act must reach the House of Lords at least one month before the end of the session. Finally, the Parliament Act limits the maximum duration of Parliament to five years instead of seven. (But see above as to duration of the present Parliament).

The present form of Parliament, as divided into two Houses of Legislature, the Lords and the Commons, dates from the middle of the fourteenth century.

The House of Lords consists of peers who hold their seats—(i) by hereditary right; (ii) by creation of the sovereign; (iii) by virtue of office—Law Lords, and English archbishops (2) and bishops (24); (iv) by election for life—Irish peers (28); (v) by election for duration of Parliament—Scottish peers (16). The full house would consist of about 670 members, but the voting strength is (January, 1917) about 660. There are, besides, 19 peeresses of the United Kingdom and 5 Scottish peeresses in their own right, and 19 Scottish and 56 Irish peers who are not peers of Parliament.

The House of Commons consists of members representing County, Borough, and University constituencies in the three Divisions of the United Kingdom. No one under 21 years of age can be a member of Parliament. All clergymen of the Church of England, ministers of the Church of Scotland, and Roman Catholic clergymen are disqualified from sitting as members: all Government contractors, and all sheriffs, and returning officers for the localities for which they act, are disqualified both from voting and from sitting as members. No English or Scottish peer can be elected to the House of Commons, but non-representative Irish peers are eligible.

In August, 1911, by resolution of the House of Commons, provision was first made for the payment of a salary of 400*l.* per year to members, other than those already in receipt of salaries as officers of the House, as Ministers, or as officers of His Majesty's household. Payment began as from April 1, 1911. This provision does not extend to the House of Lords.

Every elector must be of full age, and must be registered in the electoral lists. Property qualifications are restricted to counties and to such boroughs as have county privileges. In England they are: the holding of an estate (1) in freehold of the annual value of 40 shillings (not applicable in Scotland or Ireland); (2) of lands in life: more of the annual value of 5*l.* (in Scotland and Ireland, 10*l.*); (3) held on lease of at least 60 years of the annual value of 5*l.* (in Scotland, 57 years and 10*l.*; in Ireland, 60 years and 10*l.*); or of at least 20 years of the annual value of 50*l.* (in Scotland, 19 years and 50*l.*; in Ireland, 14 years and 20*l.*). Throughout the United Kingdom, in counties, occupation of a tenement which is rated for the support of the poor, and for which the rates have been paid by the prescribed date, constitutes a qualification, but in English boroughs the occupation franchise is associated with 6 months' residence, and in Scotch boroughs with 12 months' residence. Every inhabitant occupier who has for 12 months, within the United Kingdom, inhabited a rated dwelling-house for which the rates have been paid is entitled to registration, and lodgers occupying for 12 months the same lodgings of the value of 10*l.* a year, may have a vote. There are, besides, some ancient franchises, such as that of the liverymen of the City of London companies, and there are 6 university constituencies in which graduates on the electoral roll are electors. Disqualified for registration are women, infants, peers, idiots and lunatics, aliens, bankrupts, persons who within a year have received parochial poor relief, and some others.

About one-sixth of the population are electors. By an annual act voting is by ballot.

The numbers of members and of registered electors for England and Wales, Scotland, and Ireland respectively, in 1915, were as follows:—

1915	COUNTIES.		BOROUGHs.		UNIVERSITIES.		TOTAL.

(For the heads of the Administrations see p. 9.)

The executive government of Great Britain and Ireland is vested nominally in the Crown, but practically in a committee of Ministers, commonly called the Cabinet, whose existence is dependent on the possession of a majority in the House of Commons. An Act to establish a separate Parliament in Ireland, with an executive responsible to it, was passed in 1914, but its operation has been postponed pending the termination of the European War. The Cabinet, prior to December, 1916, consisted of the political chiefs of the principal Government Departments, and exceeded twenty in number. With the formation of the present Government, however, the Cabinet was reduced to only five members, two of whom are "without portfolio."

The head of the Ministry is the Prime Minister, a position first constitutionally recognised, and special precedence accorded to the holder, in 1905. No salary is attached to the office of Prime Minister, as such, and it is usually held in conjunction with some other high office of State, generally that of First Lord of the Treasury. His colleagues in the Ministry are appointed on his recommendation, and he dispenses the greater portion of the patronage of the Crown.

The present Ministry (appointed December 11, 1916) consists of the following members :

(a) THE WAR CABINET.

1. Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury.—Right Hon. D. Lloyd George, born 1863; admitted a solicitor in 1884; M.P. for Carnarvon District since 1890. ## II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

England and Wales.—In each county the Crown is represented by H.M. Lieutenant for the county, who is generally also custos rotulorum, or keeper of the records. The recommendation of persons for appointment by the Lord Chancellor as justices of the peace rests with the Lieutenants, but local advisory committees are set up, as and when required, to advise the Lieutenants and the Lord Chancellor on these appointments. The Lieutenants are the presidents of the County Associations formed under the Territorial and Reserve Forces Act, 1907, and their duties as such relate to the organisation, equipping and maintenance of the Territorial Forces. Otherwise their duties are almost nominal. There is also a sheriff, who represents the executive of the Crown, an under-sheriff, a clerk of the peace, coroners, who are appointed and paid by the County Councils, and other officers. The licensing of persons to sell intoxicating liquors, and the administration of the criminal law—except that which deals with some of the graver offences—are in the hands of the magistrates.

For the purposes of local government England and Wales are divided into sixty-two administrative counties, including the county of London, differing in area from the old geographical counties, which except for historical purposes do not now exist. The new counties are administered by the justices and by a popularly-elected Council, called a County Council, who co-opt a prescribed number of aldermen, either from their own body or from outside it. Aldermen are elected for six years, half of them retiring every third year. A councillor is elected for three years. Women are eligible. The jurisdiction of the County Councils includes all the administrative work formerly performed by the justices and many new powers conferred by recent Acts of Parliament, the principal items being the making of county and police rates; levying of duties on licences for carriages, armorial bearings, guns, dogs, killing and dealing in game; borrowing of money; supervision of county treasurer; management of county halls and other buildings; licensing of houses for music and dancing, and of racecourses; maintenance and management of pauper lunatic asylums; maintenance of reformatory and industrial schools; management of bridges and main roads; regulation of fees of inspectors, analysts, and other officers; control of officers paid out of the county rate; coroner's salary, fees, and district; Parliamentary polling districts and registration; contagious diseases of animals, allotments, weights and measures, sale of food and drugs. Under Acts of 1902 and 1903 the County Councils are also the local education authorities, and other recent acts have in minor matters extended their jurisdiction. The control of the county police is vested in a standing joint committee composed of an equal number of magistrates and members of the County Council. The London Metropolitan police are, however, under the control of the Home Secretary.

The administrative counties, with the exception of the County of London, are subdivided into 'County Districts' which are either 'Urban' or 'Rural,' as the case may be. Generally speaking, an urban district comprises a town or a small area more or less densely populated, and a rural district takes in several country parishes. Women may be elected to these District Councils, but cannot be magistrates; the District Councils administer the Public Health and Highway Acts, and also exercise powers under the Housing Acts. Urban District Councils may also take over main roads from the County Councils; provide burial grounds, allotments, baths and washhouses, libraries, open spaces, museums, isolation hospitals, &c.; exercise powers under Provisional Orders or Private Acts for gasworks, tramways, electric light and power works, &c. Any urban district with 20,000 inhabitants may also be a local education authority. The Rural District Councils may also provide allotments, cemeteries, &c.; make arrangements for an adequate water supply; and exercise any 'Urban powers' conferred on them by the Local Government Board.

In every civil parish in a 'rural district' there is a Parish Meeting, at which every parochial elector may attend and vote. In such parishes of over 300 inhabitants there is in addition a Parish Council. Women are eligible for election. Parishes of less than 300 inhabitants may have Parish Councils if authorised by the County Council. To these Parish Councils have been transferred all the civil powers of the old Vestries, including the election of overseers, and in addition very considerable powers over charities, allotments, and other public matters. Where there is no Parish Council some of these powers, including the appointment of the overseers, are exercised by the Parish Meeting. Urban District Councils can, by petitioning the Local Government Board—which is the supreme Local Government authority—obtain part or all of the powers of a Parish Council. Only Parish Meetings may have power to adopt the Public Libraries Acts, the Baths and Washhouses Acts, the Lighting and Watching Acts, the Burials Acts, and the Public Improvements Acts.

The main central authority in London, the capital of the Empire, is the County Council, created by the Local Government Act of 1888. It has considerable powers in regard to public health, housing, bridges and ferries, asylums, street improvements, parks, main drainage, fire brigade, sanitary control, education, and numerous other matters. It is also the tramway authority for the county. The City Corporation have powers respecting sanitation, police, bridges, justice, &c., in the City of London. London comprises the ancient city with an area of one square mile, and an area of 118 square miles beyond the city, which is divided into 28 metropolitan boroughs, under the London Government Act, 1899, each with a mayor, aldermen, and councillors (women are eligible). The Councils have powers in regard to public health, highways, rating, housing, education, &c., but they are not boroughs in the statutory sense as in the rest of the Kingdom. The County Council has certain powers of control over them. It sanctions loans, approves the construction of sewers and the carrying out of local improvements, and has considerable public health duties in connection with the boroughs.

In all the great towns, local business is administered by a municipal Corporation, which derives its authority from charters granted by the Crown, as modified by the Great Municipal Corporations Act of 1837, and the Act of 1882. There are three kinds of boroughs, county boroughs, quarter session boroughs, and small boroughs of special and generally ancient jurisdiction. The County Boroughs are outside the jurisdiction of the County Councils, but in other Municipal Boroughs these Councils have certain powers and duties. A municipal Corporation consists of the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses, and acts through a Council elected by the burgesses—practically by the ratepayers. The councillors serve for three years (women are eligible), one-third retiring annually; the aldermen are elected by the Council, and the mayor, who serves for one year, also by the Council. A municipal Corporation has practically all the powers of an urban district council, and in some cases municipal boroughs have a separate commission of the peace and maintain their own police force. As to Poor Law and Education administration, see 'Pauperism' and 'Instruction.'

Scotland.—By the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, a Local Government Board for Scotland was constituted. It consists of the Secretary for Scotland as President, the Solicitor-General of Scotland, the Under Secretary for Scotland, and three other members nominated by the Crown. The Local Government Act which was passed for Scotland in 1889 followed in its main outlines the English Act of the previous year. The powers of local administration in counties formerly exercised by the Commissioners of Supply and Road Trustees were either wholly or in part transferred to the new Councils, which took over their duties and responsibilities in 1890. The Act of 1894 provided that a Parish Council should be established in every parish to take the place of the Parochial Boards and to exercise powers similar to those of the Parish Councils in England. Municipal bodies exist in the towns of Scotland, as in those of England, with bailies and provosts instead of aldermen and mayors. There are in Scotland five kinds of burghs—(1) Burghs of barony; (2) Burghs of regality (no practical distinction between these two); the councils of these two classes of burghs ceased to exist in 1893 by statutory enactment; (3) Royal Burghs, representatives of which meet together annually in a collective corporate character, as the 'Convention of Royal Burghs,' for the transaction of business; (4) Parliamentary Burghs, which possess statutory constitutions almost identical with those of the Royal Burghs; (5) Police Burghs, constituted under general or local Police Acts, in which the local authority is the Police Commissioners. These two latter burghs, by Acts passed in 1879 and 1895, are enabled to send representatives to the convention.

Ireland.—The principal county authority for local government used to be the grand jury, appointed under the Act 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 116; but, by the Local Government (Ireland) Act, 1898, provision was made for the establishment of popularly elected Councils for counties and rural districts. The councillors are elected for three years, and the Council of each county and rural district, immediately after any triennial election, may choose additional members to hold office till the next triennial election. The administrative business formerly managed by the grand juries and presentment sessions has been transferred to these Councils, and in addition County Councils have now certain powers and functions with regard to the maintenance of asylums and infirmaries. The appointment of coroner is now also vested in the County Council. The business relating to public health and to the assessment and collection of rates formerly vested in the Board of Guardians now devolves on the Rural District and County Council respectively. In urban districts the Councils of these districts administer matters relating to public health and rates, in addition to business transferred to them from the grand jury and presentment sessions. The administration of the poor relief Acts is exercised by Boards of Guardians. Each Board comprises the councillors of each rural district in the union, together with specially elected representatives of each urban district in the union. The cities of Dublin, Belfast, Cork, Limerick, Londonderry, and Waterford, which already possessed representative councils, are county boroughs, and are exempt from some of the special provisions of the Act. The towns are partly corporate and partly governed by Commissioners. Certain boroughs have a mayor, aldermen, and councillors, whose powers are regulated by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 108. The ordinary affairs of the borough, such as lighting, watching, and cleansing, are administered by the Council, which has power to levy rates for these purposes. In such towns as have no charter of incorporation, the local affairs are administered by a body of Commissioners (appointed under the Towns Improvement Act, 1854, or by a local Act), who have powers generally to discharge the usual municipal functions, and are empowered to levy rates to defray the cost of administration. Towns must have 1,500 inhabitants to enable them to obtain municipal government under the Towns Improvement Act, 1854, and any municipal town may be constituted an urban sanitary district.

Under the Local Government Act of 1898 and the Local Authorities (Ireland) (Qualification of Women) Act, 1911, women are eligible for election as members of all local government elected bodies in Ireland in the same manner and on the same conditions as men.

In 1911, in Wales and Monmouthshire 190,292 persons 3 years of age and upwards, or 7·9 per cent. of the total population, were able to speak Welsh only, and 787,074, or 32·5 per cent., able to speak Welsh and English. Thus 977,366 persons, or 40·4 per cent. of the total population, could speak Welsh. In 1901 the number returned was 939,824, or about 46 per cent. In 1911, in Scotland, 18,400 persons 3 years of age and upwards, or 0·4 per cent. of the total population, could speak Gaelic only, and 183,998, or 3·3 per cent., could speak Gaelic and English. Thus 202,398, or 4·3 per cent., could speak Gaelic, and of these, 48,780 were in Inverness Co., 46,916 in Ross and Cromarty, 31,695 in Argyll, and 24,947 in Lunark. In 1891 the number was 254,415, or 6·3 per cent., and in 1901, 230,806, or 5·2 per cent. In 1911, in Ireland, 16,873 or 0·39 per cent. of the population, could speak Irish only, and 565,573, or 12·9 per cent., could speak Irish and English. Thus 582,446, or 13·3 per cent., could speak Irish. In 1891 the number was 680,245, or 14·6 per cent., and in 1901, 641,142, or 14·4 per cent.

The municipal and parliamentary City of London, coinciding with the registration City of London, has an area of 675 acres, and in 1901 had a night population of 26,923, and in 1911, 19,657. A day census of the City of London, taken on April 25, 1911, gave a population of 354,061. The previous day census, taken in 1891, gave a total of 301,384. The registration County of London (the London for purposes of the Census, the registration of births, deaths, and marriages, and for poor law purposes), coinciding with the administrative county, has an area of 74,816 acres, and nearly coincides with the collective area of the London parliamentary boroughs. The population of registration London, of the 'Outer Ring,' and of 'Greater London,' (the area covered by the City and Metropolitan police), according to the census returns of 1891, 1901 and 1911, and the estimated population in 1914, were:—

Of the total population in 1911, 91·7 per cent. were born in Scotland, 3·47 per cent. in England and Wales, 3·67 per cent. in Ireland, 0·52 per cent. in foreign countries, and 0·64 per cent. elsewhere.

Inhabited houses 1911, 1,013,369; uninhabited, 89,060; building, 4,718; total, 1,107,147. The average number of persons to each inhabited house was 4·92 in 1891; 4·82 in 1901; and 4·70 in 1911.

The 'urban' population of Scotland in 1911 is defined as the population of localities containing over 1,000 persons, and are burghs, special scavenging districts, or special lighting districts. On this basis the 'urban' population was 3,591,276 or 75·4 per cent. of the total, and the 'rural' population 1,169,628 or 24·6 per cent. Population of the principal burghs :—

The Registrar-General's estimate of the population prior to 1912 was based on the assumption that the rate of increase which prevailed in the intercensal period immediately preceding, had since been maintained. Later figures, however, make allowance for migration.

In 1916 the proportion of male to female births was 1,049 male to 1,000 female.

The proportion of male to female births in Ireland in 1915 was 1,064 to 1,000.

2. Emigration and Immigration.

In the thirty-eight years 1815-1852, the total number of emigrants from the United Kingdom was 3,463,592. Up to 1852 the emigration returns made no distinction between British subjects and foreigners; but from 1853 onwards the number of emigrants of British origin, and the total number, including foreigners, to places out of Europe are given as follows:—

The number of Irish who emigrated from Ireland was in 1911, 30,573; in 1912, 29,344; in 1913, 30,967; in 1914, 20,314; in 1915, 10,659; the total number from May 1, 1851, to September 30, 1916, was 4,314,781.

Religion.

1. England and Wales.

The Established Church of England is Protestant Episcopal. Civil disabilities on account of religion do not attach to any class of British subjects. An Act was passed in 1914 disestablishing the church in Wales and Monmouthshire, but the disestablishment has been postponed until after the termination of the European war.

The King is by law the supreme governor of the Church, possessing the right, regulated by the statute 25 Hen. VIII. c. 20, to nominate to the vacant archbishoprics and bishoprics, the form being to send to the dean and chapter of the vacant see the royal licence, or congé d'élire, to proceed to the election, accompanied by the King's letter naming the person to be elected; and afterwards the royal assent and confirmation of the appointment are signified under the Great Seal. But this form applies only to the sees of old foundation; the bishoprics of Manchester, St. Albans, Liverpool, Truro, Newcastle, Southwark, Southwell, and Birmingham are conferred direct by letters patent from the Crown. The King, and the First Lord of the Treasury in his name, also appoint to such deaneries, prebendaries, and canonries as are in the gift of the Crown, while a large number of livings and also some canonries are in the gift of the Lord Chancellor.

There are 2 archbishops (at the head of the two 'provinces' of Canterbury and York) and 38 bishops, and 36 suffragan and assistant bishops in England and Wales. Each archbishop has also his own particular diocese, wherein he exercises episcopal, as in his province he exercises archiepiscopal jurisdiction. Under the bishops are about 32 deans and 100 archdeacons. For the management of ecclesiastical affairs, each province has a council, or Convocation, consisting of the bishops (forming an Upper House), archdeacons, and deans, in person, and a certain number of proctors, as the representatives of the inferior clergy (forming the Lower House). These councils are summoned by the respective archbishops, in pursuance of the King's mandate. When assembled, they must also have the King's licence before they can deliberate; as well as the sanction of the Crown (Parliament) to their resolutions (canons), before they are binding on the clergy.

The number of civil parishes (districts for which a separate poor rate is or can be made) at the census of 1911 was 14,614. These, however, in most cases, do not coincide with ecclesiastical parishes, which, during the present century, have lost their old importance, the ancient parishes having been cut up in many cases into districts, each of which is virtually an independent parish ecclesiastically. Of such parishes there were (1911) 14,387, inclusive of the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands. Each parish has its church, presided over by an incumbent or minister, who must be in priest's orders, and who is known as rector, vicar, or perpetual curate, according to his relation to the temporalities of his parish. Private persons possess the right of presentation to about 8,500 benefices; the patronage of the others belongs mainly to the King, the bishops and cathedrals, the Lord Chancellor, and the universities of Oxford and Cambridge. In 1916 there were about 13,500 beneficed clergy, and 7,000 curates, etc. The voluntary offerings in the Church of England in 1914-15 amounted to 7,531,000*l.*

Of 32,652 churches and chapels registered for the solemnisation of marriage at the end of 1914, 15,995 belonged to the Established Church and 16,657 to other religious denominations. Of the marriages celebrated in 1914, 58.3 per cent. were in the Established Church, 4.7 per cent. in the Roman Catholic Church, 12.2 per cent. were Nonconformist marriages, 0.03 per cent. were Quaker marriages, 0.67 per cent. Jewish, and 24.1 per cent. civil marriages in Registrar's Office.

The following summary of statistics of Nonconformist churches (England and Wales, Channel Islands, and Isle of Man) in 1915 is taken from the 'Free Church Year-Book' for 1916. It only claims to present an approximation to the actual condition. Figures relating to the Anglican Church are appended :—

The Unitarians have about 350 places of worship, the Catholic Apostolic Church about 80, the New Jerusalem Church about 75. The Salvation Army, a religious body with a semi-military organisation, carries on both spiritual and social work at home and abroad, and had (December, 1915) about 23,700 officers and employees, 9,635 corps and outposts, and 65,000 local officers; their places of worship in the United Kingdom have about 550,000 sittings. There are about 245,000 Jews in the United Kingdom with about 200 synagogues.

Roman Catholics in England and Wales are estimated at 1,900,000. There are (1916) three archbishops (of whom one is a cardinal), thirteen bishops, and three bishops auxiliary; about 3,900 priests (not all officiating); and about 1,890 churches, chapels, and stations.

2. Scotland.

The Church of Scotland (established in 1560 and confirmed in 1688) is presbyterian, the clergy all being equal. There is in each parish a kirk session, consisting of the minister or clergyman, and of several laymen called elders. There are 84 presbyteries (formed by groups of parishes), meeting frequently throughout the year, and these are grouped in 16 synods, which meet half-yearly and can be appealed to against the decisions of the presbyteries. The supreme court is the General Assembly, which consists of over 700 members, partly clerical and partly lay, chosen by the different presbyteries and royal burghs, and by the universities. It meets annually in May (under the presidency of a Moderator appointed by the Assembly, the Sovereign being represented by a nobleman known as Lord High Commissioner), sitting for ten days, the matters not decided during this period being left to a Commission.

The number of parishes is 1,449, and the number of churches, chapels, and stations about 1,700. The parishioners are allowed under certain regulations enacted by the General Assembly to choose their own ministers. The entire endowments of the Church from all sources, including manse and glebes, amount to about 373,300*l.* per annum. The voluntary contributions of the congregations for religious and charitable purposes in 1915 amounted to 487,000*l.* The number of communicants in 1915 was about 721,000; ministers, about 1,800; lay missionaries, 105; Sunday scholars, 211,000.

On October 31, 1900, the Free Church of Scotland and the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland (formed by secessions at various times from the Church of Scotland) constituted themselves into the United Free Church of Scotland. A minority, representing 26 congregations, regarding themselves as the Free Church of Scotland, claimed all the property and endowment funds. A Royal Commission reported that the Free Church was unable adequately to carry out all the trusts of the property. The Churches (Scotland) Act, 1905, was passed for the apportionment of the church property between the Free and the United Free churches by an Executive Commission of five, and the result was that funds amounting to 459,469*l.* were allocated to the Free Church (310,000*l.* for general provision and the remainder for College provision and various other purposes). The United Church had, on December 31, 1915, 1,521 congregations, and 35 preaching stations; 516,000 members, besides adherents; 2,203 Sunday schools, &c., with 23,163 teachers and 217,000 children in attendance. The church courts are the General Assembly, 12 synods, 64 presbyteries, and 2 continental presbyteries. Annual revenue from free-will offerings is about a million sterling. The Church has three theological colleges (at Edinburgh, Glasgow and Aberdeen) with 18 professors and lecturers. The Free Church had in 1916, 177 congregations and stations, 98 ministers and probationers, and one college. Contributions to schemes amounted to 14,509*l.*, and congregational incomes to 12,708*l.* There are in Scotland some small outstanding Presbyterian bodies and also Baptists, Independents, Methodists, and Unitarians. The Episcopal Church in Scotland has 7 bishoprics, 407 churches and missions, 368 clergy, and 56,000 communicants.

The Roman Catholic Church had in Scotland (1916) two archbishops with one archbishop coadjutor, and four suffragan bishops; 586 priests, 454 churches, chapels, and stations, and about 546,000 adherents.

The proportion of marriages in Scotland according to the rites of the various Churches in 1914 was: Established, 41·8 per cent.; United Free, 23·6; Roman Catholic, 11·3; Episcopal, 2·9; others, 7·8; irregular, 12·6.

3. Ireland.

The principal religious professions in Ireland, as recorded at the census of 1911, are as follows:—

	Leinster	Munster	Ulster	Connaught	Total
Roman Catholics . . .	990,045	973,805	690,816	588,004	3,242,670

Presbyterians . . .	12,866	4,180	421,410	2,069	440,525
Methodists . . .	8,068	4,175	43,816	1,323	62,382
Other Professions . . .	10,888	2,689	53,881	578	68,031
Total . . .	1,162,044	1,033,495	1,511,696	610,984	4,300,219

The Roman Catholic Church in Ireland is under four archbishops, of Armagh, Cashel, Dublin, and Tuam, and 23 bishops, besides a bishop auxiliary. On a vacancy the clergy of the diocese nominate a successor in whose favour they postulate or petition the Pope. The bishops of the province also present the names of two or three eligible persons to the Pope. The new bishop is generally chosen from this latter number; but the appointment virtually rests with the cardinals. The emoluments of a bishop arise from his parish, which is generally the best in the diocese, from licences of marriage, &c., and from the cathedralicium, a small contribution paid by incumbents of parishes. The incomes of all classes of the Roman Catholic clergy of Ireland arise partly from fees, but principally from Christmas and Easter dues, and other voluntary offerings. Number of priests in Ireland (1916), about 3,730.

The Church of Ireland (Protestant Episcopal) ceased to be 'established by law' by Act of Parliament (1869) 32 & 33 Vict. cap. 42. It has (1916) two archbishops, 11 bishops, and 1,500 clergymen; 1,400 churches. Previous to disestablishment its income was 600,000*l.*, and its entire capital was estimated at 14,000,000*l.* By the Disestablishment Act about 7,600,000*l.* was allotted to it by way of commutation, and 500,000*l.* in lieu of private endowments. The Church is governed by a General Synod—bishops, clergy, and laity having the right to vote separately. There are also 23 diocesan synods. The funds of the Representative Body on December 31, 1915, amounted to 9,321,354*l.*

The largest Presbyterian body consists of 36 presbyteries, and has 650 ministers and 563 congregations, with 104,000 members; contributions during year 1915-16, 227,600*l.*; total church income, 295,000*l.* This Church has two colleges, one in Belfast purely theological, the other (Magee College) in Londonderry with theological, literary, and scientific departments. The two together have 15 professors and lecturers.

The proportion of marriages in Ireland in 1915 according to the modes of celebration was: Roman Catholic, 71·8 per cent.; Church of Ireland, 14·6 per cent.; Presbyterian, 10·0 per cent.; civil contract, 1·6 per cent.; other denominations, 2·0 per cent.

Instruction.

University Education.

In England the highest education is given at the ancient universities of Oxford and Cambridge, the former having 22 colleges and 3 private halls, and the latter 17 colleges and 1 hall; the university of Durham, founded in 1831, with a college of medicine, and since 1871, a college of science at Newcastle; the university of London founded in 1836 and reorganised in 1900 so as to be a teaching as well as an examining body, with 24 colleges or schools giving instruction in 8 faculties; the Victoria University (Manchester), founded in 1880; the Birmingham University, founded in 1900; the Liverpool University, founded in 1903; the Leeds University, founded in 1904; the Sheffield University, founded in 1905; and the Bristol University, founded in 1909. There are also University Colleges at Exeter, Nottingham (founded 1881), Reading (started with the establishment of art classes in 1860), and Southampton (founded 1850). There are special Agricultural Colleges at Carlisle, Cirencester, Glasgow, Newport (Shropshire), Kingston-on-Soar (Derby), Wye (Kent), Uckfield (Sussex), and Ripley (Surrey). The university of Wales, founded in 1903, has 3 colleges (Cardiff, Aberystwyth, and Bangor). In Scotland there are 4 universities, viz., at St. Andrews, founded 1411; Glasgow, 1450; Aberdeen, 1494; Edinburgh, 1582. The Carnegie trust, founded in 1901 with a capital of 2,000,000*l.*, has an annual income of 100,000*l.*, of which half is devoted to the equipment and expansion of the Scottish Universities and half to assisting students. In Ireland is the university of Dublin, founded 1591. In 1909 was founded in Dublin the National University of Ireland, and in Belfast the Queen's University of Belfast. The former has 3 constituent colleges, viz., the University Colleges of Cork, Galway, and Dublin. The following table gives the approximate number of professors, lecturers, &c., and students of the Universities in the United Kingdom for 1916-1917. The war has depleted the numbers considerably:—

At most of the Universities and University Colleges women students are admitted on equal terms with men. There are, however, several colleges exclusively for female Students:—Bedford, Royal Holloway, and Westfield Colleges in London; Newnham (210 students) and Girton (160 students) Colleges in Cambridge; Lady Margaret Hall (76 students), Somerville College, St. Hugh's College, and St. Hilda's College, in Oxford.

Secondary and Technical Education.

In England and Wales by recent Acts of Parliament the councils of counties, of county boroughs, of non-county boroughs with population over 10,000, and of urban districts with population over 20,000, are constituted local authorities for higher education. The new authorities are required, after consultation with the Board of Education, to supply or aid in supplying education other than elementary, and to promote the co-ordination of all forms of education. To these purposes they may apply money raised by rates, besides devoting to them the residue under the Local Taxation (Customs and Excise) Act, 1890, and they may borrow money. They have power to provide scholarships and to pay fees; in schools provided by them they must not pay for religious instruction; in schools not provided by them they can neither impose nor forbid religious instruction.

The secondary schools acknowledged by and receiving grants from the Board of Education are under various forms of management. In 1914-15, there were in England and Wales 1,047 recognised secondary schools on the Grant List, with 198,884 full-time pupils (105,096 boys and 93,788 girls). Besides these schools on the Grant List, there were 129 other secondary schools recognised by the Board of Education as efficient. The number of pupils was about 23,450 (including about 8,930 girls).

The Board of Education also recognise a number of institutions providing technical instruction courses, and day technical classes; schools of nautical training; university tutorial classes; schools of art; and evening and other part-time schools. Examinations in science and art are held by the Board of Education, and scholarships, exhibitions, &c., are awarded to successful competitors.

In Scotland, the burgh schools of various names, grammar schools, high schools, &c., are administered by the school boards. There are also endowed schools and schools under private management which give secondary education. In 1914-15 there were 56 grant-receiving secondary schools, of which 35 were under school boards. There were 19,866 pupils on the rolls in 1915, an average attendance of 18,448 in 1914-15, and 1,393 teachers. The number of schools receiving Government grants in 1914-15 included (besides the secondary schools) 196 higher grade schools or departments, with 29,488 enrolled pupils, and an average attendance of 27,102.

For Ireland there is an Intermediate Education Board, with an income of 85,119*l.* in 1915, including 833*l.* in respect of 1914. Its functions are to examine all candidates who present themselves. In 1915, 10,480 students (6,392 boys and 4,088 girls) presented themselves for examination, as compared with 10,176 in the previous year, and 9,706 in 1913. The number passed in 1915 was 6,538 (3,914 boys and 2,624 girls). In 1915 the school grant in respect of examinations paid to managers of schools amounted to 39,428*l.*, besides prizes and bonuses to schools.

Technical instruction in Ireland is controlled by the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, with the advice of a Technical Instruction Board and a Consultative Committee of Education. The Department aims at the co-ordination of its work with that of other educational authorities, and in 1913-14 grants of 45,913*l.* were paid to technical schools and classes in respect of 30,147 students; 25,619*l.* to 272 day secondary schools in respect of 12,953 students in experimental science, 11,050*l.* in drawing, 2,343 in manual instruction, and 1,487 in domestic economy; and 1,900*l.* to 97 primary schools in respect of 16,155 scholars in drawing (average attendance), and 1,211 scholars under manual instruction. Central institutions under the Department are the Royal College of Science, Dublin, with 133 students (1913-14), the Metropolitan School of Art, with 340 pupils (1913-14), the Irish Training School of Domestic Economy, 33 students. The Killarney school of housewifery had 36 students (1913-14). Throughout Ireland technical instruction is organised under the Councils of county boroughs, urban districts, and counties. In urban and county schools and classes (1913-14) there were 45,377 young men and women studying non-agricultural subjects. There is an annual grant (out of the Department's Annual Endowment Fund) of 55,000*l.* for technical education, of which 26,000*l.* is allotted for technical instruction in county boroughs, and 29,000*l.* for similar and related purposes elsewhere. A grant of 16,500*l.* for manual instruction and domestic economy in rural districts, and 3,000*l.* for classes in lace and crochet making and other rural industries, was made by the Agricultural Board in 1913-14.

Elementary Education.

England and Wales.—Elementary education in England and Wales is under the control of the Board of Education. Sufficient school accommodation must be provided in every district for all the resident children between the ages of 5 and 14. Under Acts of 1899 and 1900 children between 12 and 14 years of age may (if it is so provided in local bye-laws) conditionally obtain partial or total exemption from school attendance, but for children employed in agriculture the lower age limit for partial exemption is 11. (In January, 1916, over 8,000 children were, owing to the scarcity of adult labour, excused from school attendance for the purpose of agricultural employment in county areas.) An Act of 1899 requires the school authorities to make provision for the compulsory education of defective children to the age of 16 years. Under the Education Acts of 1902 and 1903, the local administration of education is in the hands of the Councils of counties, of county boroughs, of non-county boroughs with population over 10,000, and of urban districts with population over 20,000. The last two authorities can transfer their powers to the local county councils. The education authorities must establish educational committees, each in accordance with its own scheme, which must be approved by the Board of Education. The schemes must provide for the appointment by the Council from its own members of a majority of the committee (unless in the case of counties the Council determine otherwise), for the appointment by the Council of other persons with special qualifications, and for the appointment of women on the committees. Schools provided by county councils have managers in the proportion of 4 appointed by the Council and 2 by the borough, district, or parish served by the school. Councils of county boroughs, &c., may appoint any number of managers for their provided schools. Schools aided, but not provided by local authorities, have 4 'foundation' managers and 2 managers appointed by Councils. Women may be managers.

The local education authorities maintain all public elementary schools and control the expenditure necessary for this purpose. The only financial responsibility resting on the managers of 'non-provided' schools is to supply the buildings. In the case of schools not provided by the local authorities, their directions as to secular instruction (including the number and qualification of teachers) must be complied with; they have power to inspect the schools, and they must receive, free of charge, the use of the school-house for elementary school purposes. The Acts prescribe the funds from which expenditure is to be met, and give borrowing powers. Income from endowments for such purposes of elementary education as fall within the scope of the local education authorities is paid to these authorities and applied in aid of the rates. Section 10 of the Education Act, 1902, provides for the payment to local education authorities of a fixed grant of 4s. for every scholar in average attendance in public elementary schools, and also for a variable grant which ranges from 9d. to 6s. 9d. per head. The grants paid under this section are called aid grant. In addition to aid grant there are the grants payable under regulations for public elementary schools, of which the chief is annual grant, at the rate of 13s. 4d. for children under five years of age, and 21s. 4d. for children over five; grants for special instruction in cookery, handicraft, &c.; grants paid for areas having exceptionally small populations; grants paid to certain exceptionally small infants' schools; and grants for higher elementary schools. In addition to the annual grants, there is the fee grant which is paid, approximately, at the rate of 10s. per head for all scholars in public elementary schools complying with the conditions of the Elementary Education Act of 1891.

Provision is made by local education authorities for the medical inspection of children, under the Education (Administrative Provisions) Act, 1907, and for the supply of meals, under the Education (Provision of Meals) Act, 1906.

The number of separate local authorities for educational matters on July 31, 1915, was 318, namely, 62 Councils of administrative counties (including London); 82 county boroughs; 125 self-governing municipal boroughs; 48 self-governing urban districts; and one for the Scilly Isles.

On July 31, 1915, the number of Council schools in England and Wales for ordinary elementary education was 8,603, with accommodation for 4,289,134 pupils. The number of voluntary schools was 12,439 with accommodation for 2,750,472 pupils. Total schools, 21,042; accommodation, 7,039,606. The number of scholars on the books of these schools on January 31, 1915, was: 283,366 aged under 5; 4,689,244 aged 5 and under 12; 1,136,038 aged 12 and over; total, 6,108,648.

In 1914-15 there were 21,042 ordinary public elementary schools, with an average attendance of 5,355,000. There were in the same year 49 higher elementary schools with 9,889 registered pupils on the last day of the school year. 'Special' schools in England and Wales comprised, in 1914-15, 48 for the blind with accommodation for 2,684 pupils; 49 for the deaf with accommodation for 4,531 pupils; 186 for mentally defective children with accommodation for 14,626 pupils; 107 for physically defective children with accommodation for 8,305 pupils; 6 for epileptic children with accommodation for 496 pupils; and 60 'certified efficient' schools. There were also 67 poor law schools, on March 31, 1915. In 1914-15, there were 89 training colleges for elementary schools in England and Wales with altogether 10,900 students.

Scotland.—By the Elementary Education Act of 1872, the Scotch Education Department was instituted, and each burgh and parish or group of parishes was required to have a school board to administer both elementary and middle-class schools. Elementary education is compulsory between the ages of 5 and 11, with exemption, on conditions, for children over 12. In 1889, by a capitation grant, education was made free for the compulsory standards. In 1897 provision was made for grants in aid of voluntary schools.

The table includes higher grade schools in receipt of grants. In 1915 these numbered 195; accommodation, 41,359; average attendance, 27,102; on register at end of year, 29,488.

There were in 1914-15 20,262 certificated teachers, 413 provisionally certificated and assistant teachers, and 17 pupil teachers. In 1915-16 there were at 4 training centres and 2 training colleges, 2,472 students. In 1915-16 there were 899 continuation class centres. In 1914-15 there were 1,072 centres, with 134,115 grant-earning scholars.

Ireland.—Elementary education in Ireland, since 1845, is under the superintendence of a body of 'Commissioners of National Education in Ireland.' The following table gives statistics of elementary schools for five years :—

Year ended Dec. 31	Primary Schools in operation	Accommodation	Pupils on Rolls at end of year	Average Attendance

1915	8,163	--	679,041	500,002

Of 8,249 schools in 1912, 2,303 were mixed Roman Catholic and Protestant with 177,519 pupils (123,973 Roman Catholic and 50,546 Protestant) ; 4,397 were Roman Catholic with 373,154 pupils ; and 1,549 were Protestant with 117,985 pupils on December 31, 1912. In 1915 there were 7,728 principal teachers, 5,743 assistants, besides workmistresses and junior assistant teachers. There are 7 training colleges with 1,174 King's scholars (1915-16).

The sums expended for education in Great Britain from Parliamentary grants, and in Ireland from Parliamentary grants and rates, are given for recent years as follows (years ended March 31) :—

	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14	1914-15	1915-16
	£	£	£	£	£
England and Wales	11,302,839	14,332,019	14,308,794	15,096,235	—

Ireland	1,700,040	1,765,837	1,797,179	1,837,901	1,840,680

In addition to the grant, these schools derive an income from endowment, school fees, local rates, voluntary subscriptions, and other sources.

Justice and Crime.

England and Wales.

The principal courts having criminal jurisdiction are the petty sessional courts, the general or quarter sessions, the courts of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, more popularly known as 'assizes,' and the Central Criminal Court. Two or more justices of the peace sitting in a petty sessional court house, the Lord Mayor or any alderman of the City of London, or any metropolitan or borough police magistrate or other stipendiary magistrate sitting in a court house, constitute a petty sessional court. The courts of quarter sessions are held four times a year by the justices of the county. Similar courts can be held at other times, and are then called 'general sessions.' Two justices constitute a court, but usually a larger number attend. Certain boroughs have a court of quarter sessions, with similar jurisdiction to the county justices in quarter sessions assembled, in which the recorder of the borough is the judge. The assize courts are held four times a year in various towns throughout the country by 'commissioners' nominated by the Crown. These commissioners are generally judges of the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, but sometimes King's Counsel of good standing are appointed. The trial takes place before a single commissioner. The Central Criminal Court is the court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery for the City of London and a large surrounding district. The sessions of this court are held at least twelve times a year, and more often if necessary. The Recorder and the Common Serjeant, and, if the number of the prisoners makes it necessary, the judge of the City of London Court, sit on the first two days, after which they are joined by the judges of the High Court on the rota, for whom the more serious cases are reserved. A petty sessional court deals summarily with minor offences. Cases of a more serious nature are usually investigated by a petty sessional court before being tried at the sessions or the assizes. To every sessions, assize, and to every sitting of the Central Criminal Court, the sheriff cites 24 of the chief inhabitants of the district, of whom not less than 12 and not more than 23 are sworn and constitute a grand jury. The grand jury examines the bill of indictment against the accused person, hears the evidence of witnesses for the prosecution, and if they think a prima facie case for trial is made out they endorse the bill 'a true bill.' All criminal trials, except those which come before a court of summary jurisdiction, take place before a judge and a petty jury of twelve men. Appeal is allowed in criminal cases: (i.) on a point of law; (ii.) on a question of fact, or other sufficient ground if the judge certifies the case as fit for appeal, or the Court of Criminal Appeal grants leave to appeal; and (iii.) against the sentence (if not fixed by law) with the leave of the Appeal Court. No man can be tried again for the same crime after a petty jury has found him 'not guilty.' On a conviction the judge can, if he think fit, reserve a question of law (but not of fact) for the Court of Criminal Appeal, which can reverse, amend, or affirm the judgment. The only other method of securing the revision of a sentence is by the Royal prerogative, exercised on the advice of the Home Secretary, by which a sentence can be modified or annulled. Nominally all the judges are appointed by the King, but in practice the Lord Chancellor (who is a minister, ex-officio president of the House of Lords, and goes out with the ministry), the Lord Chief Justice, the Lords of Appeal, who sit in the House of Lords and on the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and the Lords Justices of Appeal who sit in the Court of Appeal, are appointed on the recommendation of the Prime Minister, and all the other judges on the recommendation of the Lord Chancellor.

The courts having jurisdiction in civil cases are the County Courts, created in 1846, Assizes, and the High Court. Above the High Court is the Court of Appeal, and above that the House of Lords.

Scotland.

The High Court of Justiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland. It consists of all the judges of the Court of Session, and sits more or less frequently, as the number of cases before it may require, in Edinburgh or in the circuit towns. One judge can, and usually does, try cases, but two or more preside in cases of difficulty or importance. It is the only competent court in cases of treason, murder, robbery, rape, fire-raising, deforcement of messengers, and generally in all cases in which a higher punishment than imprisonment is by statute directed to be inflicted; and it has moreover an inherent jurisdiction to punish all criminal acts, both those already established by common law or statute, and such as have never previously come before the courts and are not within any statute.

The sheriff of each county is the proper criminal judge in all crimes occurring within the county which infer only an arbitrary punishment, and if the case is tried with a jury the High Court has no power of review on the merits. Even in cases indicted to the High Court the accused is, under the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act of 1887, regularly asked to plead in the sheriff court, and minor objections to the indictment can be wholly or in part disposed of there. Borough magistrates and justices of the peace have jurisdiction in petty cases occurring within the burgh or county, and in a number of minor offences under various statutes.

The Court of Session exercises the highest civil jurisdiction in Scotland, with the House of Lords as a Court of Appeal.

Ireland.

In Ireland persons charged with crime are as a rule brought before a court of petty sessions. In most cases one magistrate is sufficient to form a court to try a case to be decided at petty sessions: in some instances two are requisite. Offences are divided into two classes, those in which justices have a 'summary jurisdiction,' in which cases they hear and determine the complaint, the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914, providing for an appeal in practically every case. The second class is 'indictable offences.' In these cases the justice merely takes the depositions and returns the case for trial to the next court having jurisdiction to try it—quarter sessions or assize court as the case may be. In the event of the prosecution failing to make out a case against the accused, the magistrates refuse informations. The Attorney-general may send up a bill at assizes, even without the preliminary magisterial investigation, or in a case in which a magistrate has wrongly refused informations. There is this difference, however, between quarter sessions in Ireland and in England: in England they are presided over by an unpaid chairman, who need not be a lawyer and who is elected by his fellow justices of the peace for the county; while in Ireland they are presided over by a paid official, who must be a practising barrister of ten years' standing, appointed by the Crown, and who is also judge of the county court (which corresponds to the English county court). The criminal jurisdiction of a county court judge is very extensive, and the Recorder of Dublin has practically the same criminal jurisdiction as a judge of the High Court. The assizes are presided over by one of the common law judges of the High Court of Justice. In the quarter sessions, recorder's court, and assizes the trial is by jury in all cases save appeals from petty sessions. In addition to the ordinary unpaid justices there are paid resident magistrates. The Criminal Law and Procedure Act contains special provisions for dealing with crime in certain cases. Nearly all the clauses of the Criminal Law and Procedure Act, however, require a proclamation of the Lord Lieutenant in Council before they come into force. In the city of Dublin, the divisional magistrates for the police district of Dublin metropolis deal with all summary cases arising within their jurisdiction, and their jurisdiction is somewhat more extensive than that of the ordinary county justices.

National Insurance.

Under the National Insurance Acts, 1911 to 1916, provision is made for compulsory insurance against loss of health, for the prevention and cure of sickness, and for compulsory insurance against unemployment.

(i) National Health Insurance.—This is administered by Insurance Commissioners, appointed separately for England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland; by other specially constituted authorities; and by approved friendly societies, trade unions, &c. The persons who are compulsorily insured, known as employed contributors, comprise, with certain exceptions, all males and females aged 16 and under 70, whether British subjects or not, employed under contract of service express or implied, whether paid by time or piece. Among persons excluded are those employed otherwise than in manual labour at a rate of remuneration exceeding 160*l.* per year. Insured persons who are not members of an Approved Society must contribute to a Post Office Fund and are known as deposit contributors; their benefits are limited. Special provisions exist for married women, aliens, the army and navy, mercantile marine, and certain other classes. Certain persons not compulsorily insured may become voluntary contributors. The funds are provided by the employer (3*d.* per week per employed person), the worker (4*d.* per week by males and 3*d.* by females), and the State. Special rates are applicable in cases of voluntary insurers, and low wage-earners, and the rates in Ireland are 1*d.* lower for contributors and 1*d.* lower for employers than in Great Britain. Contributions cease at the age of 70 when the Old Age Pension Acts (q.v.) come into play. The benefits include medical treatment, sanatorium treatment, payments during sickness and disablement, and (in the case of women) a payment of 30*s.* on confinement. Other benefits are also possible if funds permit.

(ii) Unemployment Insurance.—This is administered by the Board of Trade largely through the Employment Exchanges. The trades normally covered by the Insurance are: building; construction of works (railroads, docks, &c.); shipbuilding; mechanical engineering; ironfoundry; construction of vehicles; and sawmilling. The Board of Trade may extend the scheme to other trades. The funds are provided by the employer, the workman (2½*d.* per week each), and the State (one-third of the total contribution of workman and employer). The benefit consists of a weekly payment during unemployment in certain defined circumstances, for a limited number of weeks per year.

Under the National Insurance (Part II.) (Munition Workers) Act, 1916, the compulsory scheme of unemployment insurance is temporarily extended to workpeople engaged in the making of munitions and in other forms of war-work. The Act came into force on September 1, 1916, and continues in operation, as regards payment of contributions, for not more than five years, or three years after the end of the war, whichever is the longer period. The right of the worker to receive benefit is to continue for a further period. The contributions and rates of benefit are the same as under the Act of 1911. The numbers insured under this Act in February, 1917, exclusive of those serving with the forces, were about 1,100,000.

The number of insured persons under the Health Insurance Scheme at the beginning of 1914 was about 13½ millions, including about 260,000 deposit contributors. The number of unemployment contributors in February, 1917, was about 2,100,000, exclusive of those serving with the Army or Navy, and of the munition workers, &c.

Old Age Pensions.

Under the Old Age Pension Acts 1908 and 1911, every person over 70 years of age who is a British subject; who for twelve out of the twenty years up to the date of receiving a pension has resided in the United Kingdom (residence abroad is allowed to count in certain circumstances); and whose yearly means do not exceed 31*l.* 10*s.*, is entitled to a pension: provided he has not through idleness habitually failed to maintain himself and his dependents, is not in receipt of poor relief (except medical and certain other kinds of relief), is not a lunatic in an asylum, has not been a convict in prison during the preceding 10 years for a term of upwards of six weeks, or during the preceding two years for a term not exceeding six weeks, and is not disqualified by order of a court. An existing pensioner may in certain circumstances be disqualified for receiving further pensions. For every borough and urban district with a census population of at least 20,000,<sup>1</sup> and for every county (excluding borough and district areas) a local pension committee is appointed by the borough, district, or county council. The committees may appoint sub-committees and delegate powers or duties to them. Pension officers (to investigate and report to the committees) are appointed by the Treasury. The central pension authority is the Local Government Board. Claims for pensions are made through the local post-offices, every postmaster being required to give information and make the proceedings as easy as possible for the claimant. The claim is transmitted to the pension officer, and on his report to the committee that body may disallow the claim (in which case an appeal lies to the Local Government Board), or may allow it and fix the rate of pension. The weekly amount of the pension is 5s. if they early means of the pensioner do not exceed 21*l.* 4s. If the yearly means exceed 21*l.* but do not exceed 23*l.* 12s. 6*d.*, and so on, the weekly pension decreases by 1s. for every 2*l.* 12s. 6*d.* by which the limit of the yearly means is increased. During the war these provisions as to maximum income have been to an appreciable extent relaxed. Further, an additional pension up to 2s. 6*d.* per week may, in certain circumstances, be granted in cases of special hardship. On January 1, 1917, there were 961,732 pensions (350,813 to men and 610,919 to women) payable in the United Kingdom, namely 905,542 at 5s., 19,410 at 4s., 20,842 at 3s., 10,382 at 2s., and 5,556 at 1s.

Pauperism.

There is a Poor Law, under a variety of statutes, applicable to the Three Kingdoms, by which paupers, under certain conditions, are to be relieved in their own houses or lodged in workhouses or poor-houses built for the purpose. The law is administered by the Local Government Board, through Boards of Guardians elected for the purpose. England and Wales, including the Metropolis and the municipal boroughs, are divided into 653 poor law unions, for each of which there is elected a Board of Guardians. In some cases the union consists of only one parish; in others several are included according to population. In urban districts and in the Metropolis guardians are separately elected, but in rural districts the rural district councillors act as guardians for the parishes they represent on the district council. Guardians are elected on the same popular franchise as district councillors. Women are eligible. In every civil parish overseers are appointed whose duty it is to make and collect the poor rate. In urban districts, which include boroughs, the local authority raise and collect rates for local government purposes, but in rural districts and rural parishes the funds for this purpose are, as a general rule, taken from the poor-rate.

Amount expended in poor-relief for year ended March 25 for England and Ireland, and May 15 for Scotland. For Scotland, the amount includes expenditure on buildings and loans repaid and interest:—

Year	England & Wales	Scotland	Ireland	Total U.K.

The aggregate expenditure by local authorities in England and Wales, which is ordinarily classed as relating to the relief of the poor, during the period of 80 years ended March 25, 1914, was approximately 676,000,000*l.*

The amount of super-tax received was 2,891,345*l.* in 1910-11 ; 3,018,388*l.* in 1911-12 ; 3,599,706*l.* in 1912-13 ; 3,339,008*l.* in 1913-14 ; 10,121,023*l.* in 1914-15 ; and 16,787,654*l.* in 1915-16. The estimated aggregate income of the super tax payers in 1915-16 was 226,330,000*l.*, and the estimated number of persons chargeable, 29,500. Super-tax is payable by persons with incomes exceeding 3,000*l.* per year.

In accordance with various Acts passed between 1888 and 1911, there are paid out of the Consolidated Fund to the Local Taxation Accounts of England, Scotland, and Ireland, sums equivalent to the proceeds of certain excise licence duties, part of the beer and spirit duties, and part of the probate and estate duties. Certain other grants are also payable. The payments on account of the beer and spirit duties, the licence duties on the sale of intoxicating liquors, and (in Scotland) on account of the carriage licence duties, are now fixed at the amounts payable out of the Consolidated Fund for 1908-09. The payments in respect of other licence duties, and those in respect of the probate and estate duties, depend on the current yield of these duties.

The payments actually made to the Local Taxation Accounts in 1915-16 are given as follows :—

III. NATIONAL DEBT.

Borrowing by the State on the security of taxes was practised in Norman times, but the National Debt really dates from the time of William III. The acknowledged debt in 1689 was about 664,000*l.*, on which the annual charge for interest and management was only 40,000*l.* At various subsequent dates the amounts were as follows (including the Irish debt throughout):—

Year	Debt <sup>1</sup> Million £	Annual charge, includ- ing annuities Million £	Annuities only (included in pre- vious column) Million £

The estimated receipts and expenditure of the London County Council rate and debt accounts (i.e., exclusive of revenue-producing undertakings) for the year ending March 31, 1917 (including balances) amounted to 11,784,349<sup>1</sup>. Of this amount 7,105,582<sup>2</sup> was to be raised by rates. The outstanding debt of London in 1914 amounted to 113 million pounds sterling.

At the end of the financial year 1913-14, the outstanding local debt of England and Wales amounted to 562,630,045<sup>1</sup>; that of Scotland to 60,887,369<sup>1</sup>; of Ireland to 25,451,911<sup>1</sup>; total, 654,969,319<sup>1</sup> (including 49,721,498<sup>1</sup> outstanding in respect of loans taken over or raised by the Metropolitan Water Board, and 26,139,459<sup>1</sup> outstanding in respect of loans accounted for by the Port of London Authority).

Defence.

The superior direction of the naval and military policy of the country is in the hands of the War Cabinet, an executive body which took the place of the Advisory Committee of Imperial Defence, which consisted of the Prime Minister, as ex officio president, the Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs, War, the Colonies, and India; the Chancellor of the Exchequer; the First Lord of the Admiralty; the First Sea Lord of the Admiralty; the Chief of the Imperial General Staff; the Director of Naval Intelligence; the Director of Military Operations, and of other Naval and Military officers and high officials from time to time called in.

I. ARMY.

For details of the pre-war organisation of the army of the United Kingdom, see STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1916, pp. 53-55.

Prior to August, 1914, the Land Forces of the United Kingdom consisted of the Regular Army and the Territorial Force. The former served for the most part in India and in other of the overseas possessions; and of that which remained at home the major portion was to form an expeditionary force containing all to some 160,000 of all ranks and arms. It was intended that as casualties occurred in the expeditionary force they should be made good from the Special Reserve, a force which had replaced the old Militia, from the young soldiers and reservists who had in the first instance been left behind, and from men who would be recruited and trained as the war proceeded. The Territorial Force, which had been raised on the basis of the Volunteer Force, had been given a proper organisation.

In 1914 this Force volunteered for Imperial or overseas service almost to a man, recruits came in in large and ever increasing numbers, and each unit of the Force was soon able to create one or two reserve units to form a reservoir upon which existing battalions could draw. Before the six months training period had elapsed some of the best of the Territorial units were ready to relieve or reinforce the original expeditionary force.

Early in the war Lord Kitchener, the War Minister, realised that an immense recruiting effort must be made. He decided that recruits would more readily come forward to join new units of the Regular Army rather than those which formed part of the Imperial Army of the Second Line. The result has therefore been that the troops now fighting in other fields are drawn from the Old Regular Army, the Territorial Force, and the New Army.

In order to expedite recruiting, in October, 1915, Lord Derby was appointed Director-General of Recruiting, and he drew up a scheme for the maintenance of the voluntary system of recruitment. Under this scheme all men of military age (18 to 40), were to be canvassed and recruited in groups arranged according to age. There were 46 of these groups—23 for single and 23 for married men. Up to December 11, 1915, under the scheme 1,150,000 single and 1,679,263 married men, or a total of 2,829,263 men, were attested, enlisted, or rejected.

On February 10, 1916, the Military Service Act, the object of which was to provide for the compulsory enlistment of single men and of widowers of military age, came into force. Under its provisions every male British subject who had reached the age of 18 and was under 41, and was unmarried or a widower without children, was deemed to have been duly enlisted in the Regular Army for general service with the Colours or in the Reserve for the period of the war. Application for exemption from the provisions of the Act was permitted to Local Tribunals, and from their decisions appeal lay to Central Appeal Tribunals. All the groups of unmarried men were called up by March 18, 1916.

On May 25, 1916, a new Military Service Act came into force under which all men, whether married or single, between 18 and 41, were rendered liable to serve. At the same time it was announced that the total voluntary naval and military effort of the nation had yielded 5,041,000 men.

On June 5, 1915, a Ministry of Munitions was established with Mr. Lloyd George as Minister, and a Munitions Act was passed, among other things, for the Government control of work-shops, the organisation of the factories, the supply of the necessary labour, etc. Earlier in the year power had been given to take over and control works where war material was then under production or where in the future it might be produced. In order to obtain additional labour Mr. Asquith stated on January 27, 1916, that a system of diluted labour must be adopted in munition works as the only chance of securing a sufficient and regular supply of munitions. A Munitions of War Amendment Act was passed. The effect of this was early noticeable, and in August, 1916, it was officially announced that there had been an extraordinary growth in the output of munitions of all kinds.

Early in 1916 an Air Board was created which took the place of what had been known as the Joint Air Committee. The general functions of the Air Board were to include the task of organising and co-ordinating the supply of material of all kinds for both the fighting services. The Air Board has since been constituted a Ministry. "for the purpose of organising and maintaining the supply of aircraft in the national interest in the present war," and also of exercising such powers and authority as the King, by Order in Council, may direct. The Board consists of a Minister, of two representatives of the Naval Air Service, two of the Royal Flying Corps, two of the Ministry of Munitions, a Technical adviser, and a Parliamentary Secretary.

Early in the war it was realised that the fighting ranks could be increased if means were found to supply for the duties of home defence men who were beyond the military age or who were not physically capable of taking the field with the active army. A number of men coming under this category offered themselves for enrolment in volunteer corps, and on March 1, 1916, it was decided to revive the Volunteer Act of 1863 and to constitute and recognise the Volunteer Forces solely for purposes of home defence. In December, 1916, it was resolved that the Volunteer Force was to be administered through the Territorial Force Associations, which were to receive a capitation grant to cover cost of uniforms as soon as the wearer had been pronounced efficient; men to sign an agreement to serve during the duration of the war and, having been pronounced efficient, to perform a certain number of duties each month; each battalion to have a paid staff and to be provided with arms and equipment.

When the war had been some 15 months in progress it was realised that a Cabinet of 22 members did not form a body well suited for the conduct of a great war, and on November 11, 1915, the Premier announced that the political conduct of the war had been entrusted to a War Committee composed of five members, to which two more were added later. On Mr. Lloyd George assuming the office of Prime Minister (December, 1916), he reduced his Cabinet to a War Cabinet of five members—two without portfolios—and concentrated the direction of the war in their hands.

The Army Estimates are now presented in "token" votes for 1,000l. The votes of credit granted to cover Naval, Military, and other expenditure arising out of the war, down to May, 1917, have been as follows: for 1914-15, 362,000,000l.; for 1915-16, 1,420,000,000l.; for 1916-17, 2,010,000,000l.; for 1917-18 (to May 31), 350,000,000l.; total, 4,142,000,000l.

A Supplementary Estimate of the additional number of men required in consequence of the war was presented in December, 1916, and amounted to 1,000,000 men in addition to the 4,000,000 previously voted.

II. NAVY.

The total net expenditure from Navy Votes in recent years is given as follows:—

1909-10	35,734,013	1912-13	45,075,400
1910-11	40,419,336	1913-14	48,899,800
1911-12	42,414,257	1914-15	51,550,000 <sup>1</sup>

In the Navy Estimates since the beginning of the war no details of expenditure are given, the estimates being presented and sanctioned in the form of token votes.

The British Navy is a permanent establishment, governed by statutes and orders fixed with much precision by the Legislature. Its administration was formerly in the hands of a Lord High Admiral, but by the Act 2 Will. and Mary, c. 2, this office was vested in a Commission. With the exception of various periods in which the office has been revived—in the person of the Earl of Pembroke in the reign of William III., of Prince George of Denmark (1702-8), and of the Duke of Clarence (May, 1827—August, 1828)—it has continued to be held in commission by the Board of Admiralty. The Board now consists of the First Lord of the Admiralty, who is always a member of the Cabinet, five Sea Lords, two Civil Lords, and two Secretaries.

The members are responsible for special business as follows :—First Lord (Sir Edward Carson), general direction of all business ; First Sea Lord (Admiral Sir John Jellicoe), Organisation for War and distribution of the Fleet ; Second Sea Lord (Admiral Sir Cecil Burney), Personnel ; Third Sea Lord (Rear-Admiral F. C. T. Tudor), Material ; Fourth Sea Lord (Commodore Lionel Halsey), Stores and Transport ; Fifth Sea Lord (Commodore G. M. Paine), Director of Naval Air Services ; Civil Lord, Works, Buildings, and Greenwich Hospital ; Additional Civil Lord, Contracts and Dockyard business ; Parliamentary Secretary, Finance ; Permanent Secretary, Admiralty business. The Fifth Sea Lord was appointed Feb. 6, 1917, and represents the Admiralty on the Air Board.

Present establishments cannot be stated. The number of officers, seamen and marines provided for in the estimates for 1914-15, prior to the war, and the numbers of all ranks borne on January 1, 1914, were —

The number of officers, men and boys authorised by Parliament to be employed for the Royal Navy and Royal Marines in 1917-18 is 400,000, including the Naval Division, but exclusive of reserves.

Royal Naval Reserve numbered, January 1, 1914, 19,467 ; Royal Fleet Reserve, 27,764 ; Royal Naval Volunteers (efficient), 4,605 ; Total Reserves, 51,836. There were also 8,740 seamen and Royal Marine pensioners on the same date. The war has caused a great expansion of the reserves, notably in the men embodied from the fishery population for the mine-trawling and other services. In 1915, over 10,000 Scottish fishermen were engaged in the service of the State.

The principal work of the British Navy in the War may be summarised as follows :—

(1) The blockade in the North Sea, with the control or destruction of the enemy's forces as its object. From these operations resulted the action in the Bight of Heligoland.

At later dates German battle-cruisers emerged and bombarded certain East Coast watering-places. On emerging for a third time they were met at the Dogger Bank by a British battle-cruiser squadron, Jan. 24, 1915, and driven back to harbour with serious loss. The most important incident of all was the Battle of the Jutland Bank, May 31—June 1, 1916, in which the whole German Fleet, or, at least, its most modern ships, issued on an enterprise directed to the northward. The Germans were brought to action by the British battle-cruiser fleet. Both sides lost heavily, and the German Fleet was driven back to its ports when the battleships of the Grand Fleet came into action.

Other operations in the North Sea have been in the nature of submarine action and the bombardment of German positions on the Belgian coast.

(2) The commerce war which ended in the capture of all German overseas bases and the destruction of the raiding cruisers. • The Germans then renewed the attack upon commerce with submarines. This campaign proved very formidable till early in September, 1915, when it was reduced to small proportions. It recommenced with great vigour in March, 1916, and has since been continued in the North Sea, Mediterranean, and other waters, many neutral ships being sunk, with the object of reducing the volume of shipping available for the carrying trade. Several disguised German raiding vessels have also operated against merchantmen. A submarine 'blockade' of the British and allied coasts was declared by the Germans, February, 1917.

(3) In the Mediterranean the old British battleships, aided by one or two modern vessels, made unsuccessful attempts on the Dardanelles forts, but successfully covered the landing of an army on the Gallipoli peninsula and the subsequent withdrawal of that army. In co-operation with the French and Italian navies the Mediterranean and Adriatic have been controlled and the expeditionary forces landed at Salonika, and for the defence of Egypt.

(4) For the rest, the work of the British Navy has mainly been confined to the 'Silent pressure of Sea Power,' that is to say, keeping open over-sea communications all over the world, thus enabling troops and stores to be moved with scarcely any loss, and in enforcing a blockade on Germany's trade. These services have constituted the real and most valuable work of the British Navy during the War, since, but for the existence of an all-powerful and efficient Navy, the position of the Allies would have been hopeless.

It is not considered desirable to be too specific in this list. The figures are left as in 1916, with merely a few alterations. It is not possible to give the total numbers for the years 1916-17.

There are also monitors, which have been used in the war, and various shallow-draught river gunboats.

A great many merchant vessels have been subsidised for use as transports, hospital ships, patrol vessels, and as auxiliaries of various classes.

In the following tables the ships are grouped in classes according to type. The dates of the Naval Estimates under which they were sanctioned are given; these dates correspond to the date of the design of the ships concerned. Eight battleships of the Majestic class, 14,900 tons, launched 1894-96, have been removed from the list.

Niobe of Diadem class is in Canadian navy. Encounter of Challenger class in Australian.

There is a variety of gunboats, store-ships, &c. A unique feature of the British Navy is its very full equipment of repair ships and other auxiliaries. Destroyers built were classified as follows (1914):—

Modern . . . . .	about 120	Practically obsolete . . .	66
Fairly modern . . . . .	32	Quite obsolete . . . . .	14

The 1914–15 Estimates provided for 12 Destroyers. Certain foreign boats building in England at the time of the outbreak of war were taken over by the British Admiralty. No details are available as to new construction since 1914.

The latest destroyers of which any official description was given were of the L class, 1913-14 (965 tons, 29 knots, 3 4-inch guns), but the names of the M class boats are known, and the names of certain destroyers whose loss has been announced, indicate the existence of the N class, and apparently of other classes down to T (Turbulent).

The submarines are of many successive classes, the latest of which any description has been given being the E class, but the estimates 1913-14 brought down the construction to the S, V, and W classes.

During 1912 the naval wing of the Royal Flying Corps was founded. At the end of the year it consisted of 1 Astra-Torres, 1 Parseval, and four small dirigibles—of which three were taken over from the Army. The number of naval aeroplanes was approximately 50, including school machines. There are naval air stations at Isle of Grain, Calshot, Felixstowe, Yarmouth, Cromarty, Firth of Forth, Dundee, Fort George, and Fort Grange, airship stations at Farnborough and Kingsnorth, and a special Air Department at the Admiralty. A Fifth Naval Lord has been added to the Admiralty Board, to direct the Naval Air Service, and to represent the Admiralty on the Air Board, which was instituted February 6, 1917. In the national interest it is undesirable to publish details of airship and other construction, but it has been announced that the Navy has entered upon the building of rigid airships.

British warships officially reported lost during the war are :—

For the quantities of cereals and live stock imported, see under Commerce.

The live stock in Ireland in 1916 numbered: Horses, 598,978; mules and jennets, 28,352; asses, 230,013; cattle, 4,970,441; sheep, 3,763,705; pigs, 1,290,289; goats, 293,390; poultry, 26,472,753.

The number of holdings in Great Britain (from 1 acre upwards) is given as follows for 1916:—

The Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, makes the County Councils and the Councils of County Boroughs responsible for the provision of small holdings and allotments. A small holding is from one to fifty acres, or even more, in extent, but its annual value must not exceed 50*l*. An allotment may be provided up to 5 acres, but the Council is not obliged to provide one of more than an acre, and the applicant must be of the agricultural labouring class and resident in the borough, district, or parish. In England and Wales up to the end of 1914, County Councils had acquired or agreed to acquire for small holdings 195,499 acres, of which 138,405 acres were purchased for 4,549,068*l.*, and 57,094 acres leased for 71,221*l.* per annum. Up to the same date County Borough Councils, and, in one case, the Board of Agriculture in default of a Borough Council, had acquired for small holdings 2,789 acres, 1,073 being purchased for 52,624*l.* and 1,716 acres leased for 2,765*l.* per year. Of this land, County Councils had let 178,911 acres to 12,584 small holders; and sold 506 acres to 50 small holders; County Borough Councils had let 1,259 acres to 218 small holders. In addition 8,511 acres were let to 64 Co-operative Small Holdings Associations, who sub-let the land to 1,513 of their members. In addition, 3,580 applicants had acquired 47,500 acres from private land-owners. The total number of allotment authorities under the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, is approximately 8,300. The total quantity of land let for allotments by the various local authorities in England and Wales up to the end of 1914 was 33,523 acres, let to 130,526 individual tenants and 52 associations. The Councils owned 8,556 acres and leased 24,967 acres.

The above figures are not comparable with those published for previous years. In many cases farms in Ireland extend into two or more townlands, and in former years that portion of a farm in each townland was enumerated as a separate holding. The total number of holdings published was therefore somewhat too large. A change in the method of recording the statistics has now made it possible to arrive at a more accurate statement of the number of actual holdings, and the figures in the above table are believed to be a close approximation for the year 1915.

In 1890 the total number of holdings was 564,803; in 1905, 593,804; in 1911, 607,960. Of the holdings in 1915, 360,872 were owned and 208,554 rented. The 569,426 holdings in 1915 were in the hands of 556,729 separate occupiers.

The Irish Land Acts are of two classes—The Fair Rent Acts, and the Land Purchase Acts. The Fair Rent Acts commenced with Mr. Gladstone's Land Law (Ireland) Act, 1881, which gave the Irish Tenant the '3 Fs'—Fair Rent, Free Sale and Fixity of Tenure. Under this Act, the great body of agricultural tenants had Fair Rents judicially determined. The rent is fixed by the Land Commission for terms of 15 years, and, on the expiration of each term, a new rent may be fixed for another term. Up to March 31, 1916, the number of Fair Rents fixed under the Irish Land Acts for a First Statutory Term was 381,687; the aggregate judicial rent fixed being 5,968,175*l.*, an average reduction of 20·7 per cent. on previous rents; for a Second Statutory Term, 143,394, the aggregate judicial rent fixed being 2,074,513*l.*, an average reduction of 19·3 per cent. on first term rents; and for a Third Statutory Term, 5,007, the aggregate judicial rent fixed being 76,799*l.*, an average reduction of 9·2 per cent. on second term rents.

The Land Purchase Acts nominally began with the 'Bright Clauses' of the Act of 1870, but really the system was commenced by the 'Ashbourne Act' of 1885, under which 10,000,000*l.* was advanced for Land Purchase. A new system was adopted under Mr. Balfour's Act of 1891, which created a special Land Stock for Land Purchase purposes. Under the Irish Land Act of 1903 State advances are made to tenants to purchase their holdings under the supervision of three Estates Commissioners. Money for advances was to be raised by the issue of Land Stock bearing interest at 2½ per cent. The State is secured by a Guarantee Fund which consists of the various Funds voted by Parliament for Irish Local purposes. Deficiencies in repayment of Land Purchase Annuities are made up out of this Guarantee Fund, which it is estimated will secure advances up to 152,000,000*l.* Tenant Purchasers repay the advances by an annuity calculated at 3½ per cent. on the Purchase Money of their holdings. Of this annuity 2½ per cent. is for interest and ½ per cent. for a sinking fund, the accumulation of which will repay the advance in 68½ years. The Land Stock could not be issued except at a large discount, and the Land Act of 1909 provides that for future purchasers the money may be raised by the issue of a 3 per cent. stock, and in making advances the Treasury may give such stock instead of paying cash. The advances are repayable by the tenant purchasers by 3½ per cent. annuities. Under this Act the Congested Districts Board is reconstituted, the area of its work extended and its income increased. Compulsory powers of purchase are given to the Estates Commissioners and to the Congested Districts Board.

The total amount of the purchase money of estates for which advances have been made under the Irish Land Purchase Acts, 1870 to 1909, up to January 1, 1917, was 99,152,178*l.*, of which 97,488,460*l.* was advanced, and 1,663,718*l.* was lodged in cash by purchasers. In addition, 4,542,878*l.* was advanced by the Land Commission to Rural District Councils, for the purposes of the Labourers (Ireland) Acts, 1906, 1911 and 1914.

In England and Wales, the Board of Agriculture make grants for, and, to some extent, supervise vocational education and scientific research in agriculture. In 1914-15 these grants totalled 95,410*l.* (against 67,939*l.* in 1913-14), including 61,699*l.* from the Development Fund. Educational grants to Universities and Colleges amounted to 19,000*l.*; grants for advisory work, to 7,920*l.*; grants to research institutes and centres, to 21,560*l.*; grants for special research and investigations, to 5,977*l.*; research scholarships, to 4,825*l.*; grants for farm schools, technical classes, local lectures, &c. to 23,681*l.*; other grants, to 13,347*l.* In Ireland the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction provides itinerant lecturers who give instruction in agriculture, horticulture, bee-keeping, butter-making, poultry keeping, &c. Lecturers are trained at the Royal College of Science (Dublin), the Albert Agricultural College (Glasnevin), and the Munster Institute (Cork). There are 3 agricultural stations where farm apprenticeships are provided, and numerous agricultural schools and colleges. There are also winter agricultural classes and schools of rural domestic economy.

Forestry.—The woodland area of Great Britain in 1908 was 2,781,963 acres (England, 1,720,380; Wales, 186,723; and Scotland, 874,910). Included in these figures are 127,509 acres of plantations, i.e., land planted within the preceding 10 years (England, 72,008; Wales, 11,855; and Scotland, 44,146).

In Ireland in 1914, 296,493 acres were under woods and plantations.

The value of goods imported into the United Kingdom is generally taken to be that at the port and time of entry, including all incidental expenses (cost, insurance, and freight) up to the landing on the quay. For goods consigned to the English market for sale, the market value in England is required and recorded in the returns. This is ascertained from the declaration made by the importers, and is checked by the expert knowledge available in the Customs Department, with the help of the price-lists and market reports of the day. For exports, the value at the port of shipment (including the charges of delivering the goods on board) is taken. Imports are entered as from the country whence the goods were consigned to the United Kingdom, which may, or may not, be the country whence the goods were last shipped.

Exports are credited to the country of ultimate destination as declared by the exporters.

Of the total imports from foreign countries and colonies in 1915, 776,665,518*l.* was direct into England and Wales, 58,442,334*l.* into Scotland, and 16,774,182*l.* into Ireland; of the total exports, 443,980,305*l.* was direct from England and Wales, 39,685,610*l.* from Scotland, and 265,714*l.* from Ireland.

The total estimated value of the imports and exports of Ireland (including the trade with Great Britain) is given by the Irish Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, as follows:—

<sup>1</sup> The figures for 1913 and later are not comparable with those for earlier years, owing to changes in the methods of compiling the accounts and statistics. E.g., the number of passengers and weight of goods carried in and after 1913 represent the number and tonnage originating on the systems of the respective companies, whereas previously each passenger or ton of goods was counted once for each railway over which the passenger or goods passed in the course of a single journey.

Of the total capital at the end of 1915 the English railways had 1,120,297,000*l.*, Scottish 187,359,000*l.*, and Irish 39,656,000*l.* Of the receipts in 1915, England and Wales took 124,117,000*l.*, Scotland 15,646,000*l.*, and Ireland 5,077,000*l.* The percentage of expenditure to gross receipts was, in 1915, 64.

In 1914 there were in the United Kingdom 2,703 miles of tramway and light railway open; gross receipts, 1913-14, 15,787,877*l.*; working expenses, 10,159,556*l.*; total paid-up capital, 78,858,930*l.* Total passengers during the year, 3,426,473,192. There were also 21 miles of trackless trolley routes open for traffic in 1913-14.

The total number of telegraph offices open on March 31, 1916, was 14,156. In 1909-10 the Post Office acquired from the Marconi Company and Lloyd's their wireless telegraphy stations on the coast of the United Kingdom. The Marconi Company, however, retains its licence for its long-distance stations at Poldhu and Chalfen.

Private apparatus generally has been taken into Post Office custody for the period of the war.

On March 31, 1916, the trunk telephone service had 1,661 exchanges open for business; there were 4,520 circuits containing 363,945 miles of wire; the number of calls during the year 1915-16 was 40,392,719. The London exchange system had 73 exchanges, 1,082,393 miles of working wire, and 263,125 telephones. The provincial telephone service had 3,021 exchanges, 1,896,916 miles of working wire, and 523,886 telephones. The approximate number of originated effective calls in 1915-16 was 249 millions in London and 527 millions in the Provinces. For private wires the rentals amounted to 248,078l.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The sovereign weighs 123·274 grains, or 7·9881 grammes, ·916 (or eleven-twelfths) fine, and consequently it contains 113·001 grains or 7·3224 grammes of fine gold. The shilling weighs 87·27 grains or 5·6552 grammes, ·925 (or thirty-seven fortieths) fine, and thus contains 80·727 grains or 5·231 grammes of fine silver. Bronze coins consist of a mixture of copper, tin, and zinc. The penny weighs 145·83 grains, or 9·45 grammes. The standard of value is gold. Silver is legal tender up to 40 shillings; bronze up to 12*d.*, but farthings only up to 6*d.* Bank of England notes are legal tender in England and Wales, except at the Bank itself (3 and 4 Will. 4, cap. 98). The 1*l.* and 10*s.* Treasury Notes issued since the outbreak of the War are also legal tender. The amount of such notes outstanding at the end of December, 1916, was 134,954,177*l.*, and of Certificates, 15,190,000*l.* The amount of gold coin held by the banks in the United Kingdom at June 30, 1915, is estimated at 110,200,000*l.*, and by the general public at 75,000,000*l.*

Standard units are: of length the standard yard, of weight the standard pound of 7,000 grains (the pound troy having 5,760 grains), of capacity the standard gallon containing 10 pounds avoirdupois of distilled water at 62° F., the barometer at 30 inches. On these units all other legal weights and measures are based.

ISLE OF MAN. <sup>1</sup>

The Isle of Man is administered in accordance with its own laws by the Court of Tynwald, consisting of the Governor, appointed by the Crown; the Legislative Council, composed chiefly of ecclesiastical and judicial dignitaries appointed by the Crown, numbering 9 members, including the Governor; and the House of Keys, a representative assembly of 24 members chosen on a property qualification for 7 years by the 6 'sheadings' or local subdivisions, and the 4 municipalities. Number of voters 1914, 16,588. The island is not bound by Acts of the Imperial Parliament unless specially mentioned in them.

Lieut.-Governor.—Lord Raglan, C.B. (1,800*l.*).<sup>2</sup>

The principal towns are Douglas (population in 1911, 21,192), Ramsey (4,247), Peel (2,606), Castletown (1,817). Births (1915) 805; deaths, 884. In 1914 there were inspected 47 elementary schools, 42 being board schools.

The enrolled pupils numbered 7,403, and the average attendance 6,562. The expenditure of school boards and of primary schools for the year 1913-14, amounted to 30,371*l*. There were, in 1914, 1 secondary school (281 registered pupils), 14 supplementary classes (286 registered pupils), and 15 evening classes (664 registered pupils). The expenditure of higher education boards in 1913-14 was 7,634*l*. On December 31, 1914, 876 persons received poor-relief (36 indoor and 840 outdoor). In 1914 the police force numbered 90; in the year there were 881 persons convicted.

Revenue is derived mostly from customs. In 1914-15 the total revenue amounted to 93,114*l*.; and total expenditure to 82,242*l*., of which 10,000*l*. was paid to the Imperial Exchequer as contribution from the Customs revenue. Government debt (1915) 173,631*l*.

The principal agricultural produce of the island consists of oats, and barley, turnips and potatoes, and grasses. The total area of the island, excluding water, is 140,986 acres; the total area of arable land in 1916 was 73,361 acres and of permanent grass, 19,297 acres. The total acreage under corn crops in 1916 was 24,271 acres, including 22,137 under oats, and 1,280 under barley or bere. There were also 7,706 acres under turnips and swedes, 2,467 under potatoes, and 37,337 under clover, sainfoin and grasses under rotation. The number of agricultural holdings in 1916 above 1 acre in size was 1,702. The live stock in 1916 consisted of 5,942 horses; 21,169 cattle; 78,534 sheep; and 4,186 swine. The island has considerable mineral resources. The chief products in 1915 were lead ore, 229 tons (4,480*l*.); zinc ore, 1,401 tons (12,959*l*.); salt, 3,927 tons (3,436*l*.); besides igneous rocks, limestone, slate, sand and gravel. In 1914 there were belonging to the Isle of Man 191 fishing boats of an aggregate tonnage of 2,373 net tons, employing 615 men and boys.

The registered shipping (1914) comprised 38 sailing vessels (1,677 net tons) and 44 steamers (10,565 net tons); total tonnage 12,242 net tons. The tonnage of vessels entered at ports of the island in 1914 was 1,029,855 net tons (1,028,087 tons coastwise), and cleared 1,075,807 net tons, (1,074,853 tons coastwise). The railways have a length of 46½ miles, and there are 25 miles of electric railways.

CHANNEL ISLANDS.<sup>1</sup>

The Channel Islands are administered according to their own laws and customs. Jersey has a separate legal existence; it is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the Crown, and a Bailiff also appointed by the Crown. The Bailiff presides in the States, which consist of 12 Jurats elected by the ratepayers for life, 12 rectors of parishes, 12 constables or mayors of parishes, and 14 deputies; the constables and deputies being elected for 3 years. The Lieutenant-Governor has a veto on legislation. He may address the States but not vote. The 2 Crown officers may speak and vote. The qualification for a vote is the possession of a minimum value of 80*l*. real or 120*l*. personal property. The Royal Court consists of a tribunal of first instance and an appeal court. Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark are under one Lieutenant-Governor, but Guernsey and Alderney have government of their own, and Sark is a dependency of Guernsey and under its jurisdiction. The States for deliberation and legislation consist of a Bailiff, 12 Jurats, 10 rectors, 2 Crown officers, 15 delegates of parishes, and 9 deputies elected by the ratepayers of the whole island. The sheriff and jurats are chosen by indirect election. On May 10, 1905, a law was passed for the Island of Guernsey

INDIA, THE DOMINIONS, COLONIES, PROTECTORATES, AND DEPENDENCIES OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

In the following pages the various sections of the British Empire outside the United Kingdom are arranged in alphabetical order under the divisions of the world to which they belong:—1. Europe; 2. Asia; 3. Africa; 4. America; 5. Australasia and Oceania.

The Colonies and Dominions proper form three classes:—(1) The Crown Colonies, which are entirely controlled by the home government; (2) those possessing Representative Institutions, in which the Crown has no more than a veto on legislation, but the home government retains the control of public officers; and (3) those possessing Responsible Government, in which the home government has no control over any public officer, though the Crown appoints the Governor and still retains a veto on legislation.

The Colonial Office is divided into three branches, the first of which, called the Dominions Department, deals with business connected with the self-governing colonies, and is linked with the secretariat of the Imperial Conference. The Second Department, called the Crown Colonies Department, deals with the administrative and political work of the Crown Colonies and Protectorates. The Third or General Department, which is also a Legal Department, deals with matters common to all Crown Colonies such as currency, banking, posts and telegraphs, education, &c. Connected with this department are standing committees to deal with promotion, railways and finance, concessions and pensions.

The expenditure of the Mother Country in connection with the Colonies and Protectorates (exclusive of India) amounts to over one million sterling annually for grants in aid and administrative expenditure.

EUROPE.

GIBRALTAR.

Governor.—Lieut.-General Sir Herbert Miles, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., C.V.O., salary, 4,500*l.* and 500*l.* allowance. Appointed July 11, 1913.
Colonial Secretary.—W. C. F. Robertson.

The Rock of Gibraltar is a Crown colony, situated in 36° 6' N. latitude and 5° 21' W. longitude, in the Province of Andalusia, in Spain, commanding the entrance to the Mediterranean. The Governor, who is also Commander-in-Chief, exercises all the functions of government and legislation. Area, 1½ square mile; greatest elevation, 1,439 feet. Population, including port and harbour (census 1911), civil, 19,586 (9,228 males, and 10,358 females); military, 5,340 (4,476 males, and 864 females); naval, 441; total, 25,367 (14,145 males, and 11,222 females). Estimated population, January 1, 1916, civil, 17,913 (8,707 males, and 9,236 females). The settled population are mostly descendants of Spanish and Italian settlers. Civil population births (1915), 368; marriages, 157; deaths, 330. Average births per 1,000 of fixed civil population, 22.76; deaths, 18.39. Religion of fixed population mostly Roman Catholic; one Protestant cathedral and four Roman Catholic churches; annual subsidy to each communion, 500*l.* Several private English schools; Government aided elementary schools, 15 (10 Roman Catholic). Pupils, 2,621 in 1915-16. Government grant, 2,725*l.* One magistrate's court and a supreme court. In 1915 there were 6 convictions of serious crime, and 786 summary convictions.

	£	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue	80,930	94,573	105,738	104,634	89,721	95,544
Expenditure	76,110	73,390	81,613	82,077	121,420	142,119

Chief sources of revenue, 1915:—Customs, 37,250*l.*; post office, 13,647*l.*; rents of Crown property, 10,902*l.*; fees and re-imbursements in aid, 14,959*l.*; port dues and wharfage, 7,157*l.*; interest on investments, 7,162*l.*; licences and internal revenues, 4,080*l.* Chief branches of expenditure, 1915:—Establishments, 61,356*l.*; public works, 54,816*l.*; pensions, 4,171*l.*; ecclesiastical grants, 1,000*l.* Contribution by Home Government, nil. Public debt, nil. Total net assets, 158,921*l.* Industries unimportant. The trade of the port is chiefly transit trade, and the supply of coal to ships. There are import duties on malt liquors, wine, spirits, and tobacco, and on these articles the duties are low.

Government savings-bank, with 4,466 depositors, had 243,952 pesetas and 173,379*l.* deposits at the end of 1915.

Gibraltar is a naval base and position of great strategic importance, which is now largely increased in strength and stability. There is a deep harbour of 260 acres, which suffices for all the wants of the Mediterranean fleet. The merchant vessels registered at the port were (1915) 54 steamers of 27,188 tons net and 21 sailing vessels of 1,667 tons; total, 75 vessels of 28,855 tons. Vessels entered, 1915; 4,433, tonnage, 7,157,837 (British, 2,016, tonnage, 4,239,536); cleared, 3,490, tonnage, 5,553,430 (British, 1,839, tonnage, 3,914,697). Three miles of internal telegraph under military, and about one mile under the Eastern Telegraph Company. Postal communication daily with England. Letters and post-cards in 1915, 2,780,570; newspapers and book packets, 639,899. There is cable communication with the Continent, Tangier, the Mediterranean Eastern ports, and England, via Eastern Telegraph Company's lines.

A regular carriage service connects Gibraltar with Linea, a neighbouring town, and the construction of a road to connect Linea with the village of Campamento has been commenced.

The legal currency is that of Great Britain; but Spanish money continues to circulate freely. Since the outbreak of war there are also currency notes issued by the local Government.

MALTA.

Governor.—Field-Marshal Lord Methuen. G.C.B., G.C.V.O., C.M.G., appointed January, 1915. Salary, 3,500*l*.

Lieut.-Governor and Chief Secretary to Government.—H. A. Byatt, C.M.G.

Malta was blockaded by the British Fleet, aided by the Maltese, from 1798 to 1800, and was finally annexed to the British Crown by the Treaty of Paris in 1814. It is one of the most important ports of call in the world, and is the base and resort for repair and refitment of the British fleet in the Mediterranean. Its harbour, as a naval station, is too small for the fleet. A new breakwater was constructed in 1909.

The Governor is assisted by an executive council and a council of Government consisting, according to the Letters Patent of June 3, 1803, of the Governor as President, a Vice-President, the Lieut.-Governor and Chief Secretary, nine official members, and eight elected members. The right to legislate by Order in Council in case of necessity is provided for. The constitution was amended on December 30, 1909, two elected members of the Legislative Council having been given seats (with salaries) on the Executive Council. Italian continues to be the official language of the law courts.

Malta is 17 miles long; area, 91½ miles; and the neighbouring island, Gozo, 26 miles; total area (with Comino), 118 square miles. Population, according to Census taken on April 2, 1911, 228,534. Civil population on April 2, 1911, 211,864; estimated civil population on March 31, 1916, 220,968. Birth-rate, 1915-16, 30·45 per 1,000; death-rate of civil population, 23·15; number of marriages, 1,482. Number of births 1915-16, 3,550 males and 3,179 females; total 6,729. Number of deaths 1915-16, 2,721 males and 2,395 females; total 5,116. Chief town and port, Valetta.

Education—212 public schools, with 25,603 pupils on the rolls at the beginning of the scholastic year, 1915-16; a university with 6 faculties and 173 students; a lyceum with 461 students; 2 secondary schools, one for boys with 56 pupils, and one for girls with 238 pupils; and 7 technical manual schools with 56 pupils. Expenditure on elementary education, 1915-16, 28,351*l*.; secondary, 4,369*l*.; university, 6,019*l*. There are 68 unaided private schools with 3,989 pupils.

In 1915-16, 4,713 persons were committed to prison; 150 persons were convicted of serious crime and 23,778 summarily. Police numbered 529 officers and men on March 31, 1916.

The revenue and expenditure in 5 years were:—

ASIA.

ADEN, PERIM, SOKOTRA, AND KURIA MURIA ISLANDS.

ADEN is a volcanic peninsula on the Arabian coast, about 100 miles east of Bab-el-Mandeb. It forms an important coaling-station on the highway to the East, and is strongly fortified. The settlement includes Little Aden, a peninsula very similar to Aden itself, and the settlement and town of Shaikh Othmán on the mainland, with the villages of Imad, Hiswa, and Bir Jabin.

In April, 1905, after demarcation of the frontier, Ottoman and British Commissioners signed an agreement which determines the boundary of the hinterland from Sheikh Murad on the Red Sea to Bana river, and thence north-east to the great Desert. The settlement also includes the island of Perim at the entrance to the Red Sea, and is subject to the Bombay Government. The Government is administered by a Political Resident (who is also General Officer commanding the troops) with four assistants.

Political Resident and General Officer Commanding.—Major-General J. M. Stewart, C.B. ; Lieut.-Colonel H. F. Jacob, First Assistant Resident.

The only Government revenue is from duties on liquor, opium, and salt, and from income tax, court fees and judicial fines ; local taxes go to the Aden Settlement Fund. There is a Port Trust.

Area 75 square miles ; including the Protectorate, about 9,000 square miles ; of Perim, 5 square miles. Population, in 1911, 46,165 (31,290 males and 14,875 females), against 43,974 in 1901. Imports (1915-16), by sea, 3,500,039*l.* ; by land, 107,621*l.* ; treasure (sea and land), 268,663*l.* : total imports, 3,876,323*l.* (1914-15, 3,676,009*l.*). Chief imports Cotton twist, piece goods, grain, hides and skins, tobacco, dates, beeswax, coal and coke. Exports, by sea, 3,044,131*l.* ; by land, 46,303*l.* ; treasure (sea and land), 393,442*l.* : total exports, 3,483,876*l.* (1914-15, 3,243,600*l.*) Chief exports : Coffee, gums, hides and skins, piece goods, tobacco, grain and pulse, provisions, sugar. These statistics are exclusive of government stores and treasure. In 1916-16, 901 merchant vessels of 2,077,315 tons (net) entered the port of Aden (1914-15, 1,204 vessels of 3,058,771 net tons); of these, 570 (including 1 sailing ship) were British (698 in 1914-15); 1,059 country (local) craft of 33,632 tons entered in 1915-16 (1,277 of 37,125 tons in 1914-15). At Perim 300 vessels entered, of which 3 were Government vessels (355 in 1914-15). Aden itself is non-productive, and the trade is a purely trans-shipment one, except that from the interior of Arabia. The trade is divided into foreign, Indian, and inland. There is a branch of the National Bank of India, Limited, and there is also one firm of private bankers.

The island of Sokotra off the coast of Africa is under British protection, and the Kuria Muria islands, off the coast of Arabia, are attached to Aden. Area of former, 1,382 square miles. Population about 12,000, mostly pastoral and migratory inland, fishing on the coast. Religion, at one time Christian, Mohammedan since the end of the 17th century. The island came under British protection in 1876, by treaty with the Sultan. Chief products, dates and various gums; sheep, cattle, and goats are plentiful; butter is exported. The Kuria Muria Islands, five in number, were ceded by the Sultan of Muskat for the purpose of landing the Red Sea cable.

BAHREIN ISLANDS.

Group of islands in the Persian Gulf, 20 miles off the coast of El Hasa, in Arabia. Bahrain, the largest, is 27 miles long by 10 wide; Muharrak, to the north-east of Bahrain, 4 miles long,  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile wide. Other islands are, to the east, Sitra, 3 miles long and 1 mile broad, half its area being fertile; Nabi Saleh, about 2 miles in circumference, very fertile; Jezeyra, a small islet with a date plantation; to the west are three rocky and uninhabited islets, Um Nahsan, Jidi, and Raka. The regular population of the islands is put at about 110,000. Manama, the capital and commercial centre, extends 3 miles along the shore and has 35,000 inhabitants. Muharrak on the island of that name has about 25,000 inhabitants. Other towns are Budaiya on Bahrain Island and Hadd on Muharrak Island. There are about 100 villages in the islands. There are thousands of tombs in the shape of conical mounds situated in the interior of the islands. They vary considerably in size, some of them being as much as 100 yards in diameter, and 40 feet in height, entailing vast labour of construction. Inside are regular masonry burial chambers. No certainty as to origin yet exists owing to want of inscriptions, but they are undoubtedly extremely ancient.

The ruling family, Al Khalifa, and most of the townsmen are Mohammedans of the Sunni (Maliki) sect. The town population consists of Arabs who have come from Nejd within the last 200 years, and negroes. The agricultural population and the Bahrain pearl divers are mostly of the Shiah sect. The present chief of Bahrain is Sheikh Isa, C.S.I. His uncle, Mahomed, was deposed by the British in 1867, and Sheikh Ali, his father, installed in his place. In 1869 Ali was killed, and Sheikh Isa succeeded to power.

The great industry is the pearl fishery, in which over 1,000 boats, of from 8 to 60 men each, from Bahrein alone, are engaged. The Bahrein Islands also produce dates, and a remarkably fine breed of donkeys. Sail cloth is manufactured extensively, and also reed mats. In 1915-16, imports amounted to 1,172,764*l.*; exports, 368,903*l.* (1914-15, imports, 758,418*l.*; exports, 461,624*l.*). There are 5 per cent. ad valorem import duties. The importation of arms and ammunition is subject to the consent of the British Government.

The chief imports in 1915-16 were: specie, 289,032*l.*; pearls, 130,300*l.*; rice, 280,934*l.*; coffee, 56,773*l.*; ghee, 22,748*l.*; sugar, 25,503*l.*; tea, 66,440*l.*; piece goods, 142,800*l.* The chief exports were: pearls, 184,156*l.*; rice, 31,202*l.*; coffee, 12,013*l.*; tea, 7,920*l.*; sugar, 1,272*l.*; dates, 6,617*l.*; specie, 100,836*l.* Owing to its situation, harbour, and good service of steamers, the port is largely used as a place of trans-shipment for mainland goods.

In 1915-16, there entered the port of Bahrein 49 British ships of 92,733 tons.

There is a British Post office which is worked as an Indian Inland office with the exception of insurance. Letter rates between England and Bahrein are the same as between England and India. An up mail steamer calls weekly and a down mail steamer fortnightly.

Coins in use are British sovereigns, Indian rupees worth 16*d.*, Austrian (Maria Theresa) dollars worth from 19*d.* to 24*d.*, and Turkish lire worth from 18*s.* to 18*s.* 6*d.* according to the rate of exchange. The rupee is the coin in general use. The Persian double kran, value about 1*s.* 1*d.* is also used. The measure employed is the dhiraa of 18½ inches. The weights are: the miscal shirazi of 72 grains; the miscal bar of 720 grains; the rubaa of 4·114 lbs. avoirdupois; the maan of 57·6 lbs. avoirdupois; and the rafaa of 576 lbs. avoirdupois.

The political relations between the Government of India and the Chief of Bahrein are conducted through the Political Resident in the Persian Gulf, and a Political Agent, who tries all cases between foreigners.

Political Resident, Persian Gulf (Basra).—The Hon. Lieut.-Col. Sir Percy Z. Cox, K.C.I.E., K.C.S.I.

Deputy Political Resident (Bushire).—Major A. P. Trevor, C.I.E.

Political Agent at Bahrein.—Captain T. C. Fowle, I.A.

BORNEO (BRITISH).

British North Borneo.—Governor.—A. C. Pearson.

British North Borneo occupies the northern part of the island of Borneo. The interior is mountainous, Mount Kina Balu being 13,455 feet high, but most of the surface is jungle.

Area, about 31,106 square miles, with a coast-line of over 900 miles. Population (1911 census) 208,183, consisting mainly of Mohamedan settlers on the coast and aboriginal tribes inland. The Europeans numbered 355; Chinese, 26,002; Malays, 1,612; East Indians, 5,511; Filipinos, 5,700. The number of natives cannot be more than approximately estimated, but is placed at about 170,000. The most numerous are the Dusuns, about 88,000 ; the Muruts, 25,800 ; and the Bajaus, 22,600. The natives are for the most part of the lowest types. Chief towns, Sandakan (population 6,000), on the east coast, and Jesselton, on the west coast.

The territory is under the jurisdiction of the British North Borneo Company, being held under grants from the Sultans of Brunei and Sulu (Royal Charter in 1881). The territory is administered by a Governor appointed with the approval of the Secretary of State in Borneo and a Court of Directors in London, appointed under the Charter. On May 12, 1888, the British Government proclaimed a formal protectorate over the State of North Borneo. In 1898 certain border lands were acquired from the Sultan of Brunei, and more recently certain inland territories have been occupied. For administrative purposes the whole district is divided into five Residencies, which are sub-divided into Districts. In December, 1904, an area of about 200 square miles was transferred to Sarawak in exchange for rights over coal mines on Brunei Bay.

There are Protestant and Catholic missions. The laws are based on the Indian Penal, Criminal, and Civil Procedure Codes, and local Proclamations, and ordinances. There is an Imaum's Court for Mohamedan law. Native and Indian constabulary, 800 men under European officers.

The revenue includes sums realised by land sales, and the expenditure includes sums spent on capital account for railways and telegraphs.

Sources of revenue: Opium, birds'-nests, court fees, stamp duty, licences, import and export duties, royalties, land sales, &c. No public debt.

Most of the trade is carried on through Singapore and Hong Kong with Great Britain and the colonies. The chief products are timber, sago, rice, coconuts, gums, coffee, many fruits, nutmegs, cinnamon, pepper, gambier, gutta-percha, rubber, camphor, rattans, tapioca, sweet potatoes, and tobacco, which is being planted on a large scale. Coal, iron, gold, and mineral oil have been found. The exports comprise the products mentioned, with birds' nests, seed pearls, bêche-de-mer, &c. Exports of leaf tobacco in 1912 were valued at 264,177l.; 1913, 340,661l.; 1914, 220,758l.; 1915, 273,321l. Exports of Estate rubber in 1914, valued at 188,470l.; 1915, 274,021, and of timber, which is the greatest natural resource of the country, 100,761l.; 1915, 97,004l. Shipping: 1913, entered 274,029 tons, cleared 273,715 tons; 1914, entered 289,466 tons, cleared 289,346 tons; 1915, entered 217,811 tons, cleared 216,387 tons.

A railway, 127 miles, runs from Jesselton on Gaya Bay to Melalap in the Interior, with a branch from Beaufort to Weston on Brunei Bay. Borneo is now connected by cable with the outer world. There is a telegraph line from Menumbuk, where the cable reaches land, to Jesselton via Beaufort. At the latter station a branch line leads to Tenom in the Interior. Communication between Jesselton and Sandakan, Kudat and Tawan is maintained by wireless telegraphy. A land line extends from Sandakan to Lahad Datu, the headquarters of the East Coast Railway. Telephone exchanges are operated at Sandakan and Jesselton, while an elaborate system of telephone lines maintains communication between smaller stations and bigger Government centres.

At Jesselton and Sandakan there are agencies of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, and of the Chinese Commercial Bank.

The Government issues its own copper coinage (cents and half-cents); nickel coinage of 1, 2½ and 5 cents; also notes of one, five, ten, and twenty-five dollars, and of 25 and 50 cents to the extent of 1,000,000 dollars. Accounts are kept in dollar currency.

Brunei.—In 1888 the neighbouring territories on the north-west coast of Borneo, Brunei and Sarawak, were placed under British protection. On January 2, 1906, by treaty, the Sultan of Brunei handed over the general administration of his State to a British Resident. The Sultan, Mohamed Jemal-ul-alam, born in 1889, succeeded his father in May, 1906. He receives an allowance of 1,400*l.* a year from State funds, and his two principal ministers 700*l.* a year each. Area about 4,000 square miles, and population estimated at 30,000. The chief town, Brunei (pop. 10,000), is built over the water on the Brunei river. There is a vernacular school at Brunei, with about 40 boys at the end of 1915; and another school has been started at Muara. Receipts, 1915, 14,750*l.* (including 4,968*l.* from customs, 2,117*l.* from licences and monopolies, 1,673*l.* from land revenue, 2,526*l.* from cession monies and repayment of loans), and expenditure, 14,200*l.* Public debt, Dec. 31, 1915, 51,300*l.*

Imports 1915: exceeding 27,000*l.* (mainly rice, tobacco, and piece goods); exports exceeding 63,000*l.* (cutch, 50,000 cwt., 27,000*l.*; coal, 22,000 tons, 17,000*l.*; rubber, 12,000*l.*; sago, 4,000*l.*). The total output of coal was 30,413 tons in 1915. The post office dealt with over 14,000 articles in 1915.

Distance from Labuan about 43 miles. Communication by steam launches regularly maintained.

British Resident.—G. E. Cator.

Sarawak: Area about 42,000 square miles, coast line 400 miles, many rivers navigable. The government of part of the present territory was obtained in 1842 by Sir James Brooke from the Sultan of Brunei. Various accessions were made between 1861, 1885, and 1890. The Rajah, H. H. Sir Charles Johnson Brooke, G. C. M. G., nephew of the late Rajah, born June 3, 1829, succeeded in 1868. Population estimated at 500,000, Malays, Dyaks, Kayans, Kenyahs, and Muruts, with Chinese and othersettlers. The chief towns are the capital, Kuching, about 23 miles inland, on the Sarawak River, and Sibü, 60 miles up the Rejang River, which is navigable by large steamers. At Kuching are Church of England and Catholic missions with schools. The revenue is derived chiefly from Customs and the opium, gambling, arrack and pawn farms, exemption tax payable by Malays, and from Dyak and Kayan revenue. There are import duties on tobacco, salt, kerosine oil, wines, and spirits; export duties on sago, gambier, pepper, all jungle produce, dried fish, &c. The revenue in 1913 was 170,570*l.*; expenditure, 163,267*l.*; 1914, revenue, 164,593*l.*; expenditure, 163,790*l.*; 1915, revenue, 179,289*l.*, expenditure, 150,200*l.*; public debt, nil. Coal exists in large quantities, as well as gold, silver, diamonds, antimony, and quicksilver. A considerable oil field is being developed at Miri. Foreign trade: 1914, imports, 659,021*l.*; exports, 708,865*l.*; 1915, imports, 983,832*l.*; exports, 1,200,209*l.* The exports (1915) included sago flour, 170,516*l.*; pepper, 162,189*l.*; gutta jelutong, 67,288*l.*; crude petroleum, 55,569*l.*; and gold, 146,591*l.* The trade is mostly with Singapore. Shipping entered and cleared in the foreign trade, 1914, 280,224 tons. There are military and police forces, the former consisting of 500 Dyaks under an English army officer. Round Kuching are about 45 miles of roads, besides bridle paths. There are 23 post offices (1915). The Government offices have a telephone system extending over Kuching and Upper Sarawak, and communicate by wireless with Singapore, &c. There are also wireless stations at Sadong, Sibul, and Miri. Distance from London, 8,700 miles; transit, 25 to 30 days. Telegrams are sent by wireless from Singapore.

CEYLON.

Constitution and Government.

The authentic history of Ceylon begins in the fifth century B.C., when an invasion of Hindius from Northern India established the Sinhalese dynasty. The country was developed by Tamil colonists from South India. Buddhism was introduced from India in the third century B.C., and in comparative purity is still the religion of the majority of the inhabitants.

In 1505 the Portuguese formed settlements on the west and south, which were taken from them about the middle of the next century by the Dutch. In 1795-96 the British Government annexed the foreign settlements to the Presidency of Madras; in 1801 Ceylon was erected into a separate colony. In 1815, the districts of the interior, which had maintained their independence under the Kings of Kandy, were acquired by Great Britain as the result of a rebellion against the king, and the whole island was thus united under British rule.

According to the terms of the Constitution established in 1833 and 1910, the administration is in the hands of a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of seven members—viz., the Officer commanding the Troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Controller of Revenue, the Colonial Treasurer, the Government Agent of the Western Province, and one member nominated by the Governor, and a Legislative Council of 21 members, including the Executive Council, four other office-holders, and ten unofficial members, six nominated by the Governor and four elected as representing the different races and classes in the community.

Governor.—Sir John Anderson, G.C.M.G., K.C.B. (appointed 1915). Salary 5,500*l.*, and 1,500*l.* allowance.

Colonial Secretary.—R. E. Stubbs, C.M.G. (Salary 2,000*l.*)

For purposes of general administration, the island is divided into nine provinces, presided over by Government Agents, with assistants and subordinate headmen. There are three municipalities and twenty-one local boards mainly for sanitary purposes.

Area and Population.

The population for 1911 shows an increase of 15·15 per cent. on the population of 1901. The estimated population at the end of 1915 was 4,424,300, exclusive of the military and shipping. The following are the statistics of the census of 1911 (excluding the population on the tea estates, 513,467, the military, and the shipping):—

Provinces	Area: English sq. miles	Population, 1911		Provinces	Area: English sq. miles	Population, 1911

Others . . . . .
All races . . . . .	4,424,300	4,110,367

Of the 4,106,350 persons (exclusive of the military and the shipping) at the census of 1911, the occupation of 2,631,622 or 64·1 per cent. (of whom 1,096,301 were earners and 1,535,321 dependents) was returned as agriculture; 442,011 or 10·7 per cent. (191,130 earners, 250,881 dependents) industrial occupation; 323,568 or 7·9 per cent. (136,259 earners, 187,309 dependents) trade.

The population on estates, mainly consisting of immigrant Tamils from Southern India, numbered, at the census of 1911, 513,467, and formed 12·5 per cent. of the total population. Since 1901 this population has increased 16·3 per cent.

The marriage-rate in 1915 was 14·4<sup>1</sup> per 1,000 of the population, the birth-rate 37, and the death-rate, 25·2.

The urban population is 13·4 per cent. of the total population. The principal towns and their population (exclusive of the military, shipping, and estates), according to the census of 1911, are :—Colombo, 211,274; Galle, 39,960; Jaffna, 40,441; Kandy, 29,451.

Religion and Instruction.

The principal religious creeds were in 1915 :—Buddhists, 2,659,190; Hindus, 997,384; Mohammedans, 303,761; Christians, 441,718.

Buddhism in Ceylon (unlike that in Tibet, China, and Japan) is, in its philosophy, materialistic and atheistic, and in popular usage has a large admixture of the doctrines and practices of popular Hinduism and of the aboriginal wild tribes.

Education is under a separate Government department with a Director, an assistant Director, an office assistant, and a staff of Inspectors.

The number of vernacular schools in 1915 was: Government schools, 801 (attendance, 82,418 boys and 26,705 girls); Aided schools, 1,827 (attendance, 125,364 boys and 73,707 girls); Unaided schools, 1,359 (27,728 children). There were also 316 English and Anglo-vernacular schools, attended by 38,466 boys and 10,145 girls.

The total sum spent by Government on vernacular education during 1914-15 was 77,108*l*.

Education is free in vernacular schools, fees are charged in English schools. The Royal College and the Government Training College with the English school attached to it are Government institutions. The other English schools are grant-in-aid schools. The total grants to English schools in 1914-15 amounted to 20,995*l*. The Government also gives two scholarships of 200*l*. a year, each tenable for three years, with outfit allowances of 50*l*. each and free passages, to enable the best two students of each year to complete their course of education in England, and other scholarships are given locally. The Cambridge school certificate examinations, and examinations of the London University up to and including the final bachelor's degree in arts, science and law, are held annually in Ceylon by arrangement. Technical education is given in the "Technical Schools" (82 students in 1915), and by means of Government scholarships tenable at Madras Engineering College. There are thirty-eight industrial schools.

Justice, Crime, and Pauperism.

The law is Roman-Dutch, modified by colonial ordinances. The criminal law has been codified on the principle of the Indian Penal Code. There are a Supreme Court, police courts and courts of requests, and district courts, intermediate between the latter and the Supreme Court. Village councils deal with petty offences. In 1915 the number of cases instituted in the police courts and municipal magistrates' courts was 82,920. The number of "true" cases of cognisable crime was 12,826, and the convictions, 5,715. 15,745 convicted persons were sent to prison. The figures include persons charged with complicity in the anti-Moorish riots of May and June, 1915. Police force, December 31, 1915, 2,689 of all ranks.

There is no poor law, though a few old persons receive a charitable allowance from the Government varying from Rs. 1 to Rs. 12·50 each per mensem.

The net public debt on September 30, 1915, was 5,750,862*l.*, incurred entirely for public works, such as the construction of railways, harbour works, waterworks, etc.

Defence.

The harbour of Colombo, on the west, is protected.

The establishment of British forces in Ceylon in 1914-15 was 1,271; including 927 Colonial troops. The Colonial contribution in 1914-15 was 94,557*l.*

Production and Industry.

The area of the colony is 16,212,000 acres, of which it is estimated that about 3,000,000 acres are under cultivation, and 660,000 acres pasture land. The approximate areas under the principal products in 1915 were: paddy, 785,000 acres; other grain, 131,000 acres; cacao, 41,500 acres; cinnamon, 45,000 acres; tea, 427,000 acres; coconuts, 980,000 acres; rubber, 200,000 acres. In 1915, the exports of tea were 215 million lbs., of which 124 million lbs. were sent to the United Kingdom. The exports of desiccated coconuts were 349,009 cwts., copra, 1,208,529 cwts., and coconut oil, 501,510 cwts. In the same year, 48,803,816 lbs. of rubber were exported, of which 26,898,371 lbs. went to the United Kingdom, 19,383,095 lbs. to the United States, and 2,522,350 lbs. to other countries. Exports of rubber 1916, 54½ million lbs. In 1915, 14,773 acres of crown land were sold and settled. Live stock (1915), 3,954 horses, 1,500,938 horned cattle, 90,000 sheep, 69,673 pigs, and 183,000 goats. There is a Government Dairy, possessing over 200 head of cattle, imported from Scinde. There are about 950 plumbago mines, the exports of plumbago in 1915 being 436,351 cwt. Other minerals, such as gold, thorium, and monazite, exist, but, except the last-named, so far have not been found in quantities of commercial importance. There are some hundreds of small gem quarries, from which sapphires, rubies, moonstones, catseyes, and other gems are obtained. Native manufactures, which are at present of very minor importance, are weaving, basket work, tortoise-shell boxes, &c., earthenwares, jewellery, metal work, lacquer work, carving, &c. Manufactures on any large scale are confined to the products of agriculture, such as the production of coconut oil.

The values of imports and exports are declared, and represent the wholesale values at the place of import or export. Declarations are subject to scrutiny and penalty. The Chamber of Commerce, as representing the trade of the island, assists by supplying the value on which a rated duty is levied. Quantities of imports are ascertained from invoices or by actual examination; of exports, from declarations and by examination of the shipping documents, shippers being liable to penalties for misstatement. The origin and destination of goods are also obtained from the shipping documents. In some cases, however, goods intended for transhipment abroad are so entered, e.g. to New York, via London. The transit trade includes all goods transhipped direct in port, as well as goods landed into transhipment warehouses. The transit trade of Colombo has largely increased of late years, but, as no bills of entry are required in respect of transhipment goods, the returns as to quantity are only approximately correct, and no returns as to value can be prepared.

According to Ceylon returns the total imports from the United Kingdom in 1915 amounted to 2,390,009*l.*, and exports to 9,804,121*l.*

In 1916 (British Board of Trade Returns) the value of tea imported into the United Kingdom from Ceylon was 5,172,379*l.* (quantity, 107,959,007 lbs.); 1915, 5,713,638*l.* (quantity, 123,249,775 lbs.) Other imports in 1915 were: rubber, 3,230,687*l.* (1916, 3,156,000*l.*); coconut oil, 712,819*l.*; nuts and kernels, 1,466,988*l.*; plumbago, 159,359*l.*; cocoa, 213,613*l.* The principal exports of United Kingdom produce to Ceylon in 1915 were cottons, 372,952*l.*; iron and steel and manufactures thereof, 254,427*l.*; machinery, 158,649*l.*

Shipping and Communications.

Shipping entered and cleared, 1915, 10,524,897 tons (British, 7,574,122 tons). In 1914, the total tonnage was 14,272,694, and British, 9,409,108. On January 1, 1916, 118 sailing vessels of 8,850 tons, and 8 steamers of 781 tons net, total vessels 126 of 9,631 tons net, were registered as belonging to Ceylon.

693 miles of railway were open at the end of 1915.

In 1915 there were post offices, 508 ; money order offices, 189 ; telegraph offices, 141 ; postal packets or postcards passed through the post office, 46,357,839. 6,560 miles of telegraph wire ; telegrams despatched, 1,156,308.

Money and Credit.

Five banks have establishments in Ceylon : the Mercantile Bank, the Bank of Madras, the National Bank, the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, and the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China. The Ceylon Savings Bank on December 31, 1915, had 38,827 depositors, and deposits amounting to Rs. 4,121,681 ; and the Post Office Savings Bank 101,433 depositors, and deposits, Rs. 2,282,265.

The weights and measures of Ceylon are the same as those of the United Kingdom. The currency consists of :—Copper : Ceylon 1 cent and  $\frac{1}{2}$ -cent pieces,  $6\frac{1}{2}$  cents being equivalent to 1d. English. Nickel : Ceylon 5 cent piece. Silver : Indian rupee (=100 cents), equivalent (by Ordinance No. 6 of 1903) to 1s. 4d. English ; and Ceylon 50-cent, 25-cent, and 10-cent pieces. Gold : British sovereigns, which are legal tender at Rs. 15 to the sovereign. Ceylon Government currency notes of Rs. 1,000, 100, 50, 10, 5 and 2. On September 30, 1915, the value of currency notes in circulation was Rs. 27,325,500.

Dependency.

The Maldiv Islands, 400 miles west of Ceylon, are governed by an elected Sultan, who resides in the island of Male, and pays a yearly tribute to the Ceylon Government. Next to the Sultan is the first Wazir, or Prime Minister, then the Fandiari, the head priest or judge, and besides them 6 Wazirs or Ministers of State. The Maldives are a group of 13 coral islets (atolls), richly clothed with cocoa-nut palms, and yielding millet, fruit, and edible nuts. Population over 70,000 Mohammedans. The people are civilised, and are great navigators and traders.

CYPRUS.

High Commissioner.—Major Sir J. E. Clauson, K.C.M.G., C.V.O., R.E.
 Appointed December, 1914. Salary, 3,000*l*.

Chief Secretary.—Captain C. W. J. Orr, late R.A.

The island is the third largest in the Mediterranean, 40 miles from the coast of Asia Minor and 60 from the coast of Syria. It was administered until November 5, 1914, by Great Britain, under a convention concluded with the Sultan of Turkey at Constantinople, June 4, 1878, but on the outbreak of hostilities with Turkey on November 5, 1914, the island was annexed. The High Commissioner has the usual powers of a Colonial Governor. There is an Executive Council, consisting of the Chief Secretary, the King's Advocate, the Treasurer, with three locally resident additional members. The Legislature consists of eighteen members, six being office holders, including the Chief Secretary, the King's Advocate, and the Treasurer, and twelve elected (for five years), three by Mohammedan and nine by non-Mohammedan voters. The voters are all male British subjects, or foreigners twenty-one years of age, who have resided five years, and are payers of any of the taxes known as 'Verghis.' Municipal councils exist in the principal towns, elected practically by all resident householders and ratepayers. Those eligible to the council must be voters rated upon property of the annual value of from 10*l*. to 20*l*., according to population.

Area 3,584 square miles. Population, Census 1911:—139,383 males, 134,725 females; total, 274,108 (including 144 military population). Mohammedans (Ottoman Turks) 56,428; Christians (Autocephalous Church of Cyprus), 214,480; others, 3,200. Inhabitants per square mile, 76·48. Estimated population, December 31, 1915, 294,664 exclusive of military. Birth-rate, 1915, 31 per 1,000; death-rate, 18·5.

The principal towns are Nicosia (the capital), 16,052; Larnaca, 9,262; Limasol, 10,302; Famagusta and Varoshia, 5,327; Paphos and Ktama, 3,435; Kyrenia, 1,726. There are six administrative districts named after these towns.

The system of elementary education is designed so that each race in the island has its own schools. Besides elementary schools there were in 1915-16 a Gymnasium, 4 'Greek high schools' for boys and a 'high school' for girls, a Priests' Training School, and two Moslem High Schools, one for boys and one for girls. The Government contributed (1915-16) 8,654*l*. to education. Total expenditure on elementary and secondary education, 36,846*l*. Total number of elementary schools in 1915-16, 668 (453 Greek-Christian, 207 Moslem, 4 Armenian, and 4 Maronites); teachers 820 in elementary schools, of whom 565 Greek-Christian. Total enrolment in elementary schools 37,672, comprising 6,822 Moslem, 30,671 Greek-Christian, 54 Armenian, and 125 Maronites. There are 10 weekly newspapers in Greek and 1 in Turkish.

The law courts consist of (1) a supreme court of civil and criminal appeal; (2) six assize courts, having unlimited criminal jurisdiction; (3) six district courts, having limited criminal jurisdiction and unlimited civil jurisdiction; (4) six magisterial courts with summary jurisdiction; (5) ten village judges' courts. In all, except supreme court, native (Christian and Mohammedan) judges take part. There are also 4 Sheri Courts, for Mohammedans only, which administer the Moslem Sheri or ecclesiastical law. In the year 1915-16 the number of offences was 15,790; there were 21 murders and 17 cases of attempts to murder. The number of persons committed to prison in 1915-16 was 8,206. Strength of police force, March 31, 1916, 23 officers, and 754 men; total, 777 including 1 officer and 79 men detailed for duty as prison warders.

The revenue and expenditure for five years, ended March 31, were :—

—	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14	1914-15	1915-16
	£	£	£	£	£

Public debt, 251,501*l.*, for harbour, railways, and irrigation. Annual grant from imperial funds to revenue (not included above), 1911-12, 50,000*l.*; 1912-13, 50,000*l.*; 1913-14, 50,000*l.*; 1914-15, 50,000*l.*; 1915-16, 50,000*l.*

Cyprus is essentially agricultural. Chief products in 1915-16: wheat, 1,761,501 bushels; barley, 1,912,316 bushels; vetches, 141,673 bushels; oats, 378,724 bushels; olives, cotton. Grapes are produced in large quantities. The Government, with the object of encouraging the raisin industry, has introduced 60,000 sultana and sultanina vines from Crete. Other products are carobs, fruit, linseed, silk, cheese, wool, hides, and (by the Department of Agriculture) origanum oil. In 1915-16 there were 62,928 cattle, 34,735 pigs, 70,161 horses, mules and asses, 282,235 sheep and 228,232 goats. One-third of cultivable land is under cultivation. There are irrigation works for the storage and distribution of rain-water. The Forest Department has done much for the preservation and development of the forests existing at the time of the British occupation, and for the re-afforestation of denuded districts. The area of delimited forest is 700 square miles. Sponge fisheries are successfully carried on, 229,216 sponges being fished in 1915-16. Gypsum, terra umbra and marble are found in abundance; mining for copper has commenced; asbestos is mined, 27,979 cwt. of asbestos being exported in 1915.

The commerce, and the shipping, exclusive of coasting trade, for five calendar years were:—

—	1911	1912	1913	1914	1915
	£	£	£	£	£
Merchandise:—
Imports . . .	547,772	602,345	619,337	496,744	588,019
Exports . . .	626,557	728,988	620,591	496,776	650,490
Bullion and specie:

HONG KONG.

Constitution and Government.

THE Crown Colony of Hong Kong was ceded by China to Great Britain in January, 1841; the cession was confirmed by the treaty of Nanking, in August, 1842; and the charter bears date April 5, 1843. Hong Kong is the great centre for British commerce with China and Japan, and a military and naval station of first-class importance.

The administration is in the hands of a Governor, aided by an Executive Council, composed of the General Officer Commanding the Troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, the Secretary for Chinese Affairs, and the Director of Public Works (the last two being special appointments), and two unofficial members. There is also a Legislative Council, presided over by the Governor, and composed of the General Officer Commanding the Troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, the Director of Public Works, the Captain-Superintendent of Police, the Secretary for Chinese Affairs (the last three being special appointments), and six unofficial members—viz., four nominated by the Crown (two of whom are Chinese), one nominated by the Chamber of Commerce, and one by the Justices of the Peace.

Governor—Sir Francis Henry May, K.C.M.G. Appointed 1912. Salary 6,000*l.*, including 1,200*l.* allowance.

Area and Population.

Hong Kong is situated at the mouth of the Canton River, about 90 miles south of Canton. The island is an irregular and broken ridge, stretching nearly east and west about 11 miles, its breadth from 2 to 5 miles, and its area rather more than 32 square miles; separated from the mainland by a narrow strait, the Lyeemoon Pass, about half a mile in width. The opposite peninsula of Kowloon, on the mainland, was ceded to Great Britain by treaty in 1861, and now forms part of Hong Kong. The city of Victoria extends for upwards of five miles along the southern shore of the beautiful harbour. By a convention signed at Peking on June 9, 1898, there was leased to Great Britain for 99 years a portion of Chinese territory mainly agricultural, together with the waters of Mirs Bay and Deep Bay and the island of Lan-tao. Its area is 356 square miles, with about 91,000 inhabitants, exclusively Chinese. Area of Old Kowloon is 3 square miles. Total area of colony, 391 square miles. A scheme was to be begun at the end of 1916 for reclaiming 12 million square feet of land from the sea in Kowloon Bay, and erecting thereon a model town.

The population of Hong Kong, excluding the Military and Naval establishments, and that portion of the new territory outside New Kowloon, was, according to the 1911 census, as follows :—

—	Male	Female	Total
Chinese . . . . .	242,455	111,732	354,187
European and American . . . . .	4,446	3,628	8,074
Other nationalities . . . . .	2,774	1,110	3,884
Total . . . . .	249,675	116,470	366,145

The population of the New Territories (exclusive of New Kowloon) was 90,594 at the 1911 census, making a total population of 456,739.

The total estimated population, including the New Territories, in the middle of 1915 was 509,160.

Of the coloured civil population at the census of 1911, 2,012 were Indians, 958 were Japanese, and 444,664 were Chinese. These figures include the whole of the New Territories. Of the resident white population nearly one-half is British and one-third is Portuguese.

The registered births and deaths for five years were as follows :—

Year	Births	Deaths	Births per 1,000 <sup>1</sup>	Deaths per 1,000 <sup>1</sup>
1911 . . . . .	1,768	7,748	4·7	20·7
1912 . . . . .	2,671	9,682	7·1	25·7
1913 . . . . .	3,731	8,435	9·4	21·1
1914 . . . . .	3,001	9,585	7·3	23·3
1915 . . . . .	2,611	7,921	6·1	18·6

In 1911 the number of Chinese emigrants was 135,565, and the number of immigrants 149,894 ; in 1912, 122,657 and 163,248 ; in 1913, 142,759 and 166,921 ; in 1914, 76,296 and 168,827 ; and in 1915, 68,275 and 109,753 respectively.

Instruction.

The more important Government schools of the Colony are staffed wholly or partly by English teachers. They include Queen's College, average attendance 490 boys, mostly Chinese ; the Kowloon, Pea, and Victoria schools, for children of both sexes of British parentage, average attendance 66, 24 and 65 ; the Belilios Girls' School, average attendance 362 ; four English Schools for Chinese boys, average attendance 1,183. There are 45 schools (mainly denominational) which receive grants from Government and are subject to Government inspection, average attendance 3,614 in 1915. The total expenditure on the above schools in 1915 was 242,359 dollars.

There is a police school with an average attendance of 31 British, Indian, and Chinese in 1915, and about 450 unaided schools with about 12,000 pupils.

A Technical Institute maintained by the local Government was started in 1906 ; number of students in 1915, 576.

The Hong Kong University was formally opened in March, 1912, and during the session 1915-16 the number of students was 172. Faculties of Medicine, Engineering and Arts have been established, and there is a large staff of British professors and lecturers.

Justice and Crime.

There are Courts of Justice consisting of a Supreme Court, the second court or Court of Summary Jurisdiction, and a third court or Appeal Court, a police magistrate's court, and a marine magistrate's court. In 1915, 1,416 were committed to Victoria gaol for criminal offences; in 1914, 1,110. The daily average of prisoners in gaol was 600 in 1914, and 594 in 1915. There is a police force in the colony numbering 1,289 men, of whom 176 are European, 432 Indians, and 631 Chinese.

Finance.

The public revenue and expenditure of the colony were as follows in five years. The dollar of Hong Kong is of variable value; for 1911 it is here taken at 1s. 9½d., for 1912 and 1913 at 2s., for 1914 at 1s. 10½d., and for 1915 at 1s. 9½d.

Year	Revenue	Expenditure
1911	679,436	641,369
1912	818,669	720,254
1913	851,230	865,801
1914	1,020,466	997,191
1915	1,063,111	1,372,902

The revenue is derived chiefly from land, taxes, licences, quarry rent, liquor duties, and an opium monopoly, which together more than cover the expenses of administration, except in the year 1915. A large portion of the expenditure has to be devoted to the maintenance of a strong police force. Expenditure on establishments in 1915, 6,405,535 dols. (580,501l.).

Public debt, 341,800l., raised in 1887 and 1893 for public works. Another loan, 1,143,933l. in Inscribed Stock at 3½ per cent., was raised in 1906 for purposes of railway construction. On December 31, 1915, the liabilities of the colony exceeded its assets by 452,686 dols. (41,025l.).

Defence.

The military contribution payable to the Imperial Government was 2,101,286 dols. (190,429l.) for 1915. The volunteer corps cost 50,103 dols. (4,541l.) for 1915. Hong Kong is the headquarters of the China Squadron.

Industry, Commerce, Shipping, and Communications.

The chief industries of Hong Kong are cotton-spinning, sugar-refining, ship-building and repairing, rope-making, the manufacture of cement, brewing, and the manufacture of knit goods. Deep-sea fishing is important, especially for the New Territories.

The commerce of Hong Kong is chiefly with Great Britain (about one-half of the total imports and exports), India, Australia, the United States, and Germany. Hong Kong is a free port (except as regards the importation of intoxicating liquor), and there are no official returns of trade, but only mercantile estimates, according to which the imports average four, and the exports two millions sterling. Hong Kong is the centre of trade in many kinds of goods. Among the principal are opium, sugar and flour, salt, earthenware, oil, amber, cotton and cotton goods, sandal wood, rice, coal, timber, hemp, bulk and case oil (kerosene), ivory, betel, vegetables, live stock, granite, &c. The Chinese tea and silk trade is largely in the hands of Hong Kong firms.

The trade between Hong Kong and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade returns) for five years is given as follows:—

The registered shipping (Dec., 1915) consisted of 77 sailing vessels of 14,062 tons and 140 steamers of 62,823 tons; total tonnage, 76,885, 24,934 vessels, including 13,442 junks and 3,385 (s/z) steam-launches, representing altogether 11,267,255 tons, entered in 1915, and 25,211 vessels, including 13,652 junks, and 3,437 (s/z) steam-launches, representing 11,247,768 tons, cleared in 1915. The number of fishing and other boats frequenting the harbour and bays of Hong Kong in 1915 may be estimated at about 20,000.

There is an electric tramway of 9½ miles and a cable tramway connecting The Peak district with the lower levels of Victoria. The British section of the Hong Kong-Canton Railway was begun in 1907, and opened to traffic on 1st October, 1910. The branch line from Fanling to Sha Tau Kok was completed and opened to traffic in April, 1912.

There were 15 post offices in Hong Kong in 1914; letters and cards received and despatched, 4,517; newspapers, books and circulars, 815,641; parcels, 90,338. Revenue, 35,692*l.*; expenditure, 33,293*l.* Revenue, 1915, 33,000*l.*; expenditure, 36,580*l.* Telegraph lines, including cables, 1914, 221 miles; telephone wire, excluding military lines, 7,975 miles. There is a wireless telegraph service under the Post Office, besides a military and naval wireless station.

Money and Credit.

The British banking institutions in the Colony are the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, whose head office is at Hong Kong, the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China, and the Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd. There are also several foreign banks.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The currency of the Colony consists of the notes of the above-mentioned banks, and of British, Hong Kong, and Mexican dollars, besides subsidiary coins. The British Dollar is of 416 grains of silver 900 fine, as compared with 417·74 grains of 902·7 fineness of the Mexican dollar.

Subsidiary coins are 50 cent pieces (209·52 grains 800 fine), 20 cent pieces (83·81 grains 800 fine), 10 cent pieces (41·90 grains 800 fine), 5 cent pieces (20·95 grains 800 fine), and 1 cent copper pieces of 115·75 grains of copper or mixed metal.

The circulation of foreign copper coin was prohibited in 1912, and similar action is being taken with regard to foreign silver and nickel coins and bank notes.

Weights and Measures are :

The Tael . . . . .	=	1½ oz. avoirdupois.
„ Picul . . . . .	=	133½ lbs.
„ Catty . . . . .	=	1½ „ „
„ Chek . . . . .	=	14½ inches.
„ Cheung . . . . .	=	12½ feet.

Besides the above weights and measures of China, those of Great Britain are in general use in the colony.

INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES.

INDIA, as defined by Parliament (52 and 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 18), comprises all that part of the great Indian Peninsula which is directly or indirectly under British rule or protection. In a popular sense it includes also certain countries such as Nepal, which are beyond that area, but whose relations with India are a concern of the Foreign Department of the Government, whose agent resides in the country concerned. These countries will be found included in the third part of the YEAR-BOOK among Foreign Countries. The term British India includes only the districts subject to British law, and does not include native States. The term is so used, unless otherwise stated, in the tables, &c., that follow. The symbol Rx. stands for ten rupees. Rx. 1 = Rs. 10.

Government and Constitution.

The present form of government of the Indian Empire is established by various Parliamentary Statutes which are now consolidated in the Government of India Act, 1915 (5 and 6 Geo. 5, ch. 61), as amended by the Government of India (Amendment) Act, 1916 (6 and 7 Geo. 5, ch. 37). All the territories originally under the government of the East India Company are vested in His Majesty, and all its powers are exercised in his name; all territorial and other revenues, and all tributes and other payments, are likewise received in his name, and disposed of for the purposes of the government of India alone. Under the Royal Titles Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. cap. 10), the King of Great Britain and Ireland has the additional title of Emperor of India.

The administration of the Indian Empire in England is entrusted to a Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council of not less than ten and not more than fourteen members, appointed for seven years by the Secretary of State. At least nine members of the Council must be persons who have served or resided ten years in India, and have not left India more than five years previous to their appointment. A member may be removed upon an address from both Houses of Parliament, and the Secretary of State for India may for special reasons reappoint a member of the Council for a further term of five years. No member can sit in Parliament.

The duties of the Council, which has no initiative authority, are to conduct the business transacted in the United Kingdom in relation to the government of India. The expenditure of the revenues of India, both in India and elsewhere, is subject to the control of the Secretary of State in Council, and no appropriation can be made without the concurrence of a majority of votes of the Council, which meets at least once a week, five being a quorum. In dealing, however, with questions affecting the relations of the Government with foreign Powers, in making peace and war, in prescribing the policy of the Government towards native States, and in matters of internal policy where the Government of India have addressed the India Office in a 'secret' despatch, the Secretary of State may act on his own authority. The Secretary of State regulates the transaction of business.

The supreme executive authority in India is vested in the Governor-General in Council, often styled the Government of India. The Governor-General, or Viceroy, is appointed by the Crown, and usually holds office for five years. The Capital of the Empire and the seat of government was moved from Calcutta to Delhi in 1912, the latter being formed into a separate territory under a Chief Commissioner.

Viceroy and Governor-General of India.—Lord Chelmsford, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.M.G. (March, 1916), born August 12, 1868. Governor of Queensland, 1905-9; Governor of New South Wales, 1909-13.

The salary of the Governor-General is Rs. 2,50,800 (16,720*l.*) a year.

The following is a list of the Governors-General of India, with the dates of their assumption of office:—

Sir H. (Lord) Hardinge . . . . .	1844	Lord Chelmsford . . . . .	1916
Earl (Marquis) of Dalhousie . . . . .	1848

Until 1834 these were Governors-General of Fort William in Bengal, not of India.

The Council of the Governor-General consists at present of six ordinary members, and the Commander-in-Chief, who is an extraordinary member. The ordinary members are appointed by the Crown, and usually hold office for five years. There are ten departments—Home, Foreign and Political, Finance, Army, Public Works, Revenue and Agriculture, Commerce and Industry, Legislative, Education, and Railways. At the head of each, except the Railway Department, is one of the secretaries to the Government of India. The President of the Railway Board is the head of the Railway Department and he is authorised to act as if he were a Secretary to the Government of India. Each department, except the Foreign and Political Department, which is under the immediate superintendence of the Governor-General, is assigned to the special care of one of the members of the Council.

The Council is expanded into a legislative council by the addition of other members nominated by the Viceroy or elected under the Indian Councils Act, 1909. The Legislative Council now consists of 68 members, 36 being official and 32 non-official, special provision being made for the representation of Mahomadans. A Governor or a Lieutenant-Governor is also an additional member when the Council sits within his province. This Council has power, subject to certain restrictions, to make laws for all persons within British India, for all British subjects within the Native States, and for all native Indian subjects of the King in any part of the world. The proceedings in the Legislative Council are public.

As the result of administrative changes in 1912, India is now divided into fifteen provinces as follows :—

Madras : Governor, Rt. Hon. Baron Pentland of Lyth, P.C., G.C.I.E. (1912); salary, Rs. 120,000 per year. Area, 142,000 square miles; population, at 1911 census, nearly 41½ millions, mainly Hindus.

Bombay : Governor, Rt. Hon. Baron Willingdon of Ratton, G.C.I.E. (April, 1913); salary, Rs. 120,000 per year. Area, 123,000 square miles; population in 1911, over 19½ millions, mainly Hindus.

Bengal : Governor, Rt. Hon. the Earl of Ronaldshay, K.C.I.E. (1917); salary, Rs. 120,000 per year. The province was reconstituted from April 1, 1912, and has an area of 78,700 square miles, and a population (1911 census) of nearly 45½ millions, mainly Hindus and Mahomadans in almost equal proportions.

United Provinces of Agra and Oudh : Lieut.-Governor, until November, 1917, Sir J. S. Meston, K.C.S.I. (1912); after November, Sir S. H. Butler, K.C.S.I., C.I.E.; salary, Rs. 100,000 per year. Area, over 107,000 square miles, and population at 1911 census, over 47 millions (over 40 million Hindus and over 6½ million Mahomadans).

The Punjab : Lieut.-Governor, Sir M. F. O'Dwyer, K.C.S.I. (May, 1913); salary, Rs. 100,000 per year. Area, 99,000 square miles; population (1911), over 19 millions (10 million Mahomadans, 6½ million Hindus, and 2 million Sikhs).

Burma : Lieut.-Governor, until November, 1917, Sir S. H. Butler, K.C.S.I., C.I.E. (1915); after November, Sir R. H. Craddock, K.C.S.I.; salary, Rs. 100,000 per year. Area, nearly 231,000 square miles; population (1911), over 12 millions, mainly Buddhists.

Bihar and Orissa : Lieut.-Governor, Sir Edward Gait, K.C.S.I., C.I.E. (1915); salary, Rs. 100,000 per year. The province was constituted from April 1, 1912, out of Bengal, and contains the three great sub-provinces of Bihar, Orissa, and Chota Nagpur. Area, over 83,000 square miles, and population (1911), nearly 34½ millions, mainly Hindus.

Central Provinces and Berar : Chief Commissioner, Sir B. Robertson, K.C.S.I., K.C.M.G., C.I.E. (1912); salary, Rs. 62,000 per year. Area, nearly 100,000 square miles; population (1911) nearly 14 millions, mainly Hindus.

Assam : Chief Commissioner, Sir Archdale Earle, K.O.I.E. (1912); salary, Rs. 60,000 per year. The province was separated from Eastern Bengal and reconstituted from April 1, 1912. Area, 53,000 square miles; population (1911), nearly 6½ millions, over half being Hindus, and over a quarter Mahomadans.

N.W. Frontier Province : Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor-General: The Honourable Lt.-Colonel Sir G. O. Roos-Keppel, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E. (1908); salary, Rs. 48,000 per year. Area, 13,400 square miles; population (1911) nearly 2½ millions, mainly Mahomadians.

Ajmer-Merwara : Agent to the Governor-General, Rajputana, and Chief Commissioner, The Honourable Sir E. G. Colvin, K.C.S.I. (1905); salary, Rs. 48,000 per year. Area, 2,700 square miles: population (1911), about 500,000, mainly Hindus.

Coorg : Chief Commissioner, The Honourable Mr. H. V. Cobb, C.S.I., C.I.E. (1916); salary, Rs. 48,000 per year. Area, 1,580 square miles; population (1911), 175,000, mainly Hindus.

Baluchistan : Agent to the Governor-General and Chief Commissioner, The Honourable Lt.-Col. Sir John Ramsay, K.C.I.E., C.S.I. (1911); salary, Rs. 48,000 per year. Area, over 54,000 square miles; population (1911), over 400,000, mainly Mahomadians.

Delhi : Chief Commissioner, W. M. Hailley, C.S.I., C.I.E. (1912); salary, Rs. 36,000 per year. The province was constituted from October 1, 1912, and consists of a small enclave in the Punjab. Area, 557 square miles; population (1911), about 390,000.

Andaman and Nicobar Islands : Chief Commissioner and Superintendent of Port Blair, Lt.-Col. M. W. Douglas, C.I.E. (1913); salary, Rs. 36,000 per year. Area, 3,140 square miles; population (1911), 26,000.

The Governors of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal are appointed by the Crown, and each of them has an executive council, consisting of two members of the Indian Civil Service, and an Indian member, appointed by the Crown, and, under the Government of India Act, 1915, the Secretary of State may increase the number to four, of whom two at least must have been in the service of the Crown in India for at least twelve years. Under the same Act the Lieutenant-Governor of Bihar and Orissa also has an executive council consisting of two members of the Indian Civil Service, and an Indian member appointed by the Governor-General with the approval of the Crown. The Lieutenant-Governors are appointed by the Governor-General, with the approval of the Crown; the Chief Commissioners by the Governor-General in Council. Appointments to local governments are customarily for a term of 5 years.

The Governors of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal, the four Lieutenant-Governors, and the Chief Commissioners of the Central Provinces and Assam, have legislative councils of their own. The Legislative Councils of the provinces are constituted as follows: Madras, 48 members (20 official, 28 unofficial, 2 experts); Bombay, 48 (18 official, 28 unofficial, 2 experts); Bengal, 54 (20 official, 32 unofficial, 2 experts); United Provinces, 50 (21 official, 27 unofficial, 2 experts); Bihar and Orissa, 45 (19 official, 25 unofficial, 1 expert); Punjab, 31 (12 official, 17 unofficial, 2 experts); Burma, 20 (8 official, 10 unofficial, 2 experts); Central Provinces, 26 (11 official, 14 unofficial, 1 expert); Assam, 26 (10 official, 15 unofficial, 1 expert).

Although all the provinces are under the control of the Government of India, they enjoy much administrative independence varying with their importance. Each province is usually broken into divisions under Commissioners, and then divided into districts, which form the units of administration. At the head of each district is an executive officer (collector, magistrate, or deputy-commissioner), who has entire control of the district, and is responsible to the governor of the province. Subordinate to the magistrate (in most districts) there are a joint magistrate, an assistant-magistrate, and one or more deputy-collectors and other officials. There are 267 of such districts in British India.

The control which the Supreme Government exercises over the Native States varies considerably in degree; but they are all governed by the native princes, ministers, or councils under the political supervision of a resident, or agent, in political charge either of a single State or a group of States. The chiefs have no right to make war or peace, or to send ambassadors to each other or to external States; they are not permitted to maintain a military force above a certain specified limit; no European is allowed to reside at any of their courts without special sanction; and the Supreme Government can exercise any degree of control in case of misgovernment. Within these limits the more important chiefs are autonomous in their own territories. Some, but not all of them, are required to pay an annual fixed tribute. The total number of Native States is about 700, ranging from Hyderabad, with an area of over 82,000 square miles and a population of over 13 millions, to small States consisting of only a few villages.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

There were at the end of 1914-15, 712 municipalities, with a population of about 17 millions. The total number of members of the municipal bodies was 9,775, of whom 5,069 were elected. The municipal bodies have the care and lighting of the roads, water supply, drainage, sanitation, medical relief, vaccination, and education, particularly primary education; they impose taxes, enact bye-laws, make improvements, and spend money, with the sanction of the Provincial Government. Their aggregate income in 1914-15 was about 5,700,000*l.*, exclusive of loans, sales of securities, and other extraordinary receipts amounting to 6,633,000*l.* The aggregate expenditure was 6,255,000*l.*, excluding extraordinary and debt expenditure of 6,169,000*l.* By the Local Self-Government Acts of 1883-84, the elective principle was extended, in a large or small measure, all over India. In all larger towns, and in many of the smaller towns, the majority of members of committees are elected by the ratepayers; everywhere the majority of town committees consists of Indians, and in many committees all the members are Indians. For rural tracts, except in Burma, there are district (199, with 5,092 members in 1914-15, 2,349 being elected) and local (537, with 8,072 members in 1914-15, 4,066 being elected) boards, which are in charge of roads, district schools, markets, public health institutions, &c. Their aggregate income in 1914-15, excluding debt items, was 4,865,000*l.*, and expenditure (excluding debt items), 4,793,000*l.*

Baroda.—This consists of five or six larger, and a considerable number of smaller separate areas. Ruler, H.H. Sir Sayaji Rao Gadkwar, G.C.S.I. There is an executive council of the principal officers of State, and, since 1908, a legislative council of 17 members. Educational policy is progressive, and education is largely free and compulsory. In 1913 there were 3,045 educational institutions, and 207,913 scholars. The revenue in 1912-13 was 1,474,000*l.*, and the expenditure 1,200,000*l.*

Central India Agency.—This includes some 150 Native States. The bulk of the population are Hindus. The Indian Government is represented by an Agent at Indore, and under him is the Resident at Gwalior, and Political Agents for Baghelkhand, Bundelkhand, Bhopal, Southern States of Central India, and Malwa. The territories of the different States are much divided and intermingled, and their political relations with the Indian Government and with one another are very varied. Most chiefs exercise authority through a Diwan or Minister. Education is progressing, but varies greatly in different States. The annual revenue of the whole group is approximately 2,500,000*l.*

Hyderabad.—Nizam, H.H. Nawab Sir Usman Ali Khan, G.C.S.I. This is the largest and most populous of the internal States. The administration is carried on, subject to the order of the Nizam, by a Minister and four Assistant Ministers. A Legislative Council was established in 1893, and consists of about 20 members. The British Government is represented by a Resident. The bulk of the population are Hindus, but the ruling family is Mahomadan. European officers and experts control and supervise some of the more important branches of administration. The annual revenue is approximately 8,000,000*l.*

Kashmir.—This State occupies most of the northernmost portion of India, and is administered by the Maharaja, Lieutenant-General H.H. Sir Partab Singh, G.C.S.I., with the assistance of ministers, the Indian Government being represented by a Resident at Srinagar. The revenue in 1913-14 was 910,000*l.*, and the expenditure 849,000*l.* The bulk of the population are Mahomadans, though the ruling family is Hindu.

Mysore.—Maharaja, Colonel H.H. Sir Krishnaraja Wadiyar Bahadur, G.C.S.I. The administration is carried on under him by the Diwan or Prime Minister, assisted by two Councillors. The Indian Government is represented by a Resident. There is a Representative Assembly dating from 1881, elected by the leading ryots, merchants, and local bodies. It meets for a few days annually for discussion, but has no powers. A Legislative Council was formed in 1907 consisting of from 13 to 18 members. The bulk of the population are Hindus. The education system is on a high level. In 1912-13 there were 4,568 public colleges and schools and private schools, with a total attendance of 156,440. Primary education was made free in all schools in 1908. The revenue in 1913-14 was 2,009,000*l.*, and the expenditure 1,746,000*l.*

North West Frontier Province.—Only about one-third of this is British territory, lying along the Punjab border. Between this and the Afghan frontier is the tribal territory. The British Government exercises the minimum of interference. The region is divided into five Political Agencies: Northern Waziristan, Southern Waziristan, the Kurram, the Khyber, and Dir, Swat, and Chitral. Only in the last can anything approaching an organised State be said to exist. Free primary education was introduced in April, 1912.

Rajputana Agency.—Rajputana includes 21 Native States surrounding the British province of Ajmer-Merwara. The Indian Government is represented by an Agent at Abu, and under him are three Residents (for Mewar, Jaipur, and W. Rajputana), and three Political Agents (for E. Rajputana, Kotah and Jhalawar, and Haraoti and Tonk). The bulk of the population are Hindus. The administration varies considerably from State to State, but generally the central authority is in the hands of the chief, who is usually assisted by a Council or by a Diwan or Kamdar. Education is generally backward. The approximate annual revenue of the whole of the States is about 2,500,000*l.* (Baluchistan and Sikkim are dealt with elsewhere.)

132 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES

Of the Christians the following are the chief sub-divisions (1911 census):—

Denomination	Persons	Denomination	Persons
Roman Catholics . . . . .	1,490,863	Congregationalist . . . . .	135,265
Anglicans . . . . .	492,752	Salvationist . . . . .	52,407
Presbyterians . . . . .	1,11,180	Other Protestants . . . . .	45,894
Baptists . . . . .	337,228	Syrian (Romo-Syrian) . . . . .	413,142
Lutheran . . . . .	218,600	Syrian (others) . . . . .	315,162
Methodists . . . . .	171,844	Armenians, Greeks, &c. . . . .	4,064

Instruction.

The following statistics are those of the census of 1911 :—

—	Able to read and write	Unable to read and write	Total
Males . . . . .	16,938,668	143,480,620	160,419,288
Females . . . . .	1,600,763	151,397,030	152,997,793

The persons with a knowledge of English numbered 1·7 millions.

Educational institutions in India are of two classes :—(a) those in which the course of study conforms to the standards prescribed by the Department of Public Instruction or by the Universities, and either undergo inspection by the Department, or regularly present pupils at the public examinations held by the Department or Universities. These institutions are called "Public," but may be under public or private management. (b) Those that do not fulfil these conditions. These are called "Private." As regards public institutions, the system of education operates, in general, through (i) the Primary Schools, which aim at teaching, through the vernacular languages, reading, writing, and other elementary knowledge; (ii) the Secondary Schools, in which the instruction does not go beyond the matriculation or school-leaving certificate standard. The schools are divided into English or vernacular, and also into high and middle schools; (iii) the Colleges, the students in which, having passed matriculation, are reading for a degree. The colleges are affiliated to the five universities in British India—Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, the Punjab, and Allahabad. A new Hindu University is being established at Benares.

There are in addition, various institutions of a special character, such as technical schools teaching arts and industries, engineering, &c.; law schools; medical schools and colleges; and training colleges and normal schools for the training of teachers.

The following table gives the number of institutions and scholars in 1915 :

—	Institutions for		Scholars

The "special" schools include (1915) 663 training schools for masters, with 15,329 scholars; 91 for mistresses, with 2,076 scholars; 9 schools of art, with 1,411 scholars; 2 law schools, with 27 scholars; 24 medical schools with 3,476 scholars; 18 engineering and surveying schools, with 743 scholars; 198 technical and industrial schools, with 11,176 scholars; and 61 commercial schools, with 2,628 scholars.

The following table shows the number of institutions and scholars, and expenditure on public education, in the several provinces in 1914-15:—

Province	Public Institutions		Private Institutions		Expenditure on Education.

Total	146,798	6,825,164	38,503	636,867	7,296,291

The following was the educational expenditure for "public" institutions in certain years, more than half from fees and provincial resources, the rest from local rates, municipal funds, endowments, &c. :—

1909-10	1910-11	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14	1914-15

A system of State Scholarships exists by which it is possible for a boy to pass from the village school to the University. There are also State Technical Scholarships; and Indian Government Scholarships (two every year) to Indian graduates to enable them to pursue their studies at a British University.

Notwithstanding the recent great progress of education, the proportion able to read and write is still very small. In British India only 33.9 per cent. of the boys of a school-going age attend school; and of girls 6.3.

During 1915 the following vernacular newspapers and periodicals were published: in Madras, 272; Bombay, 385; Bengal, 261; United Provinces, 802; Punjab and N.W.F.P., 217; Burma, 40; Bihar and Orissa, 44; Central Provinces and Berar, 24; Assam, 17; Rajputana and Ajmer-Merwara, 10; Central India, 18; Delhi, 27; total, 1,617. They were published in the following languages or dialects:—Assamese, Garo, Bengali, Hindi, Uriya, Kanarese, Sindhi, Sanskrit, Burmese, Chinese,

Urdu, Persian, Gujrathi, Marathi, Karen, Pwo-Karen, Sagau-Karen, Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam, Arabic, Hindustani, Khasi, Lushai, Ajmer-Merwara, and Gurmukhi. (The figures include bilingual and polylingual publications.)

Justice and Crime.

The Presidencies of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal, and also the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh have each a supreme high court, with 12, 7, 14, and 7 judges, respectively, in 1916. A separate High Court for Bihar and Orissa with seven judges has also been established. There is appeal to the Privy Council in England. The Punjab has a chief court, with seven judges in 1916; the Central Provinces and Berar, Oudh, North-West Frontier Province, Coorg, Sind, Upper Burma, and Chota Nagpur have judicial commissioners. Lower Burma has a chief court with six judges (in 1916). For Assam the high court of Calcutta is the highest judicial authority. Below these courts are, for criminal cases Courts of Session, and below these, Courts of Magistrates (first, second, and third class). The inferior civil courts are determined by special acts or regulations in each province. The most extensive system consists of the sessions judge acting as a 'District Judge'; subordinate judges; and below them 'Munsifs.' There are also numerous special courts to try small causes. Side by side with the civil courts there are revenue courts, presided over by officers charged with the duty of settling and collecting the land revenue.

The number of officers exercising civil and criminal jurisdiction on December 31, 1914, was as follows:—

Courts	Civil	Criminal	Total
Provincial . . . . .	122	200	322
District . . . . .	714	857	1,571
Subordinate . . . . .	1,565	6,708	8,268
Total . . . . .	2,401	7,766	10,161

Nearly all the civil judges, and the great majority of the magistrates, in the courts of original jurisdiction are natives of India; in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay the proportion of natives in the appellate court is considerable.

The following table gives certain details of criminal cases (in thousands):—

Persons	1900	1910	1911	1912	1913	1914

Total . . . . .	102,990	91,882	101,910	105,539	112,015

The number of civil suits instituted in 1914 was 2,055,272, classed as follows : 1,401,814 for money or moveable property ; 385,446 under the rent law ; and 268,012 title and other suits. Of the suits disposed of in 1914, 16·7 per cent. were disposed of without trial, 57·4 per cent. without contest, 0·5 per cent. by arbitration, and 25·4 per cent. with contest.

136 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES

Since January, 1898, the sterling value of the rupee has been nearly steady at 1s. 4d., on which since 1900-01 the budget estimates have been prepared.

The following table shows the items of revenue and expenditure for 1915-16 (revised estimate) and 1916-17 (budget estimate):—

Land Revenue.—The most important source of public income is the land. The land revenue is levied according to an assessment on estates or holdings. In the greater part of Bengal, about one-fourth of Madras, and some districts of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the assessment was fixed permanently over one hundred years ago; while it is fixed periodically at intervals of from twelve to thirty years over the rest of India. In the permanently settled tracts the land revenue falls at a rate of about two-thirds of a rupee per acre of cultivated land, and represents on an average about one-fifth of the rental, or about one twenty-fourth of the gross value of the produce. In the temporarily settled tracts the land revenue averages about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  rupee per acre of cultivated land, represents something less than one-half of the actual or estimated rental, and is probably about one-tenth or one-twelfth of the gross value of the produce. For details as to the nature of the different tenures of land that prevail in India see the YEAR-BOOK for 1886, p. 799. See also under AGRICULTURE.

The land revenue was estimated to be contributed in 1915-16 as follows:—

Administrations	Rs.	Administrations	Rs.
India, General	20,47,000	Punjab	2,81,74,000
Central Provinces and Berar	1,99,30,000	N.W. Frontier Province	21,67,000

138 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES

Opium.—In British territory the cultivation of the poppy for the production of opium is mainly restricted to the United Provinces, and the manufacture of the opium from this region is a State monopoly. A limited amount is also grown in the Punjab for local consumption and to produce poppy seeds. In the monopoly districts, the cultivator receives advances from Government to enable him to prepare the land for the crop, and he is bound to sell the whole of the produce at a fixed price to Government agents, by whom it is despatched to the Government factory at Gházipur to be prepared for the market. The chests of manufactured opium for export are sold by auction in Calcutta at monthly sales. A reserve is kept in hand to supply the deficiencies of bad seasons, and a considerable quantity is distributed by the Indian excise departments. Opium is also grown in many of the Native States of Rájputána and Central India. These Native States have agreed to conform to the British system. No opium may pass from them into British territory for consumption without payment of duty.

The bulk of the exports of opium from India has hitherto been to China, but under agreement with that country, dating from 1907, the trade was prohibited in 1917.

1910	18,901,181	1914	19,789,239

1916	137,705,271	182,171,829	319,877,100

The Government of India has agreed to contribute 100,000,000*l.* to the cost of the war. This amount will be borne as a debt by India.

Finance of Separate Governments, and Local Finance.— The revenue and expenditure of each Government in 1914-15 were as follows :—

	R-revenue	Expenditure

The above excludes the receipts and charges of municipalities and of district and local boards. The income of the former is derived mainly from rates, octroi, taxes on houses, lands, vehicles and animals, tolls, and assessed taxes; and of the latter from leases on land. The ordinary income for 1914-15 for all municipalities which bank with Government treasuries was 5,762,5751., and the extraordinary revenue, 6,649,3181. The ordinary expenditure was 6,326,0961., and the extraordinary expenditure 6,175,6961. For district and local boards the revenue (excluding balances) was 5,092,5441. and the expenditure 5,007,8351. The following table shows the amounts for the chief administrations in 1914-15 (in thousands of rupees):—

Defence.

The military forces in India consist in the first place of the British troops and of the Indian army; there are also the volunteers and the Imperial service troops. The army, as a whole, is divided into a Northern army and a Southern army. The Northern army comprises the Peshawar, Rawal Pindi, Lahore, Meerut, and Lucknow divisions, besides the three independent Khat, Bannu and Derajat brigades. The Southern army comprises the Quetta, Mhow, Poona, Secunderabad, and Burma divisions, and the Aden brigade.

The British troops are made up of 9 cavalry regiments, 11 horse artillery batteries, 45 field batteries, 9 mountain batteries, 6 heavy batteries, 21 companies of garrison artillery, 52 infantry battalions, and a small proportion of engineers and departmental services. Units are supposed to be relieved after 14 years in India by units from home or the Colonies: they are maintained practically at war establishment. The total establishment in 1913-14 was 75,897 of all ranks.

The Indian army comprises 40 cavalry regiments, 13 mountain batteries, 3 corps of sappers and miners and other units, 138 battalions of infantry, besides departmental services. The superior officers are British. Service in the ranks is voluntary and lasts for 4 years from date of enrolment, with the option of extending to 32 years; 35 per cent. of the men are Mahomedans, 63 per cent. Hindoos, the rest are Christians, Jews, etc. The infantry are for the most part formed into single battalion regiments, but there are 10 regiments of Gurkha rifles each of two battalions; 5 battalions are stationed in China, the Straits Settlements and Ceylon, paid for by the home government. About a third of the cavalry and infantry units are "class regiments," i.e., regiments consisting of a particular race and religion—Maharatta, Sikh, etc. Units are kept practically at war establishment. The establishment before the war was 2,751 officers and 161,085 other ranks. There are 35,700 reservists.

The volunteers consist practically entirely of Europeans and Anglo-Indians, the latter predominating. The establishment in 1913-14 was 1,524 officers, 37,382 other ranks, besides 3,093 reservists, all ranks. They are organised as 7 regiments of cavalry, 8 regiments of mounted rifles, 7 batteries of artillery, 7 companies of engineers, and 45 battalions of infantry.

The Imperial service troops are raised and maintained by Native states, and are trained under the supervision of British officers. They number all told about 20,000 and consist of all arms of the service; but they provide a specially strong force of cavalry, about 6,600 all told. The two largest contingents of Imperial service troops are provided by the States of Gwalior and Kashmir.

On mobilisation a proportion of the military forces are to remain in cantonments; it is proposed to place 9 divisions and a proportion of cavalry brigades in the field. The mobilised divisions do not exactly correspond to the divisional commands existing in peace time which vary in strength and composition, the Secunderabad division, for instance, comprising two cavalry and five infantry brigades, while the Quetta division only comprises two infantry brigades.

A division in the field consists of 3 infantry brigades (1 brigade British infantry, 2 brigades Indian infantry) and divisional troops, viz., 1 regiment Indian cavalry, 1 battalion pioneers, 3 field batteries, 2 mountain batteries, 1 ammunition column, 2 companies sappers and miners, a signal company, 2 British field ambulances, 3 Indian field ambulances, 1 printing section, 1 photolitho section, 1 field post office, divisional troops supply column, 1 divisional supply column. Its establishment before the war was 3,708 British and 9,168 native troops, total, 12,876; with 30 guns.

A cavalry brigade consists of 1 horse battery, 1 British cavalry regiment, 2 Indian cavalry regiments,  $\frac{1}{2}$  British field ambulance,  $\frac{1}{2}$  Indian field ambulance, field post office, 1 supply column, 1 ammunition column.

A British infantry brigade consists of 4 battalions, 2 British field hospitals, 1 field post office, 1 supply column.

An Indian infantry brigade consists of 4 battalions, 2 Indian field hospitals, 1 field post office, 1 supply column.

The total strength of the field army would be about 150,000.

The military forces in India are administered by the headquarters staff and the army department, both under the supreme control of the Commander-in-Chief. The headquarters staff comprises the general staff branch, the adjutant-general's branch, the quartermaster-general's branch, the medical branch, the ordnance branch, the military works branch, and the military secretary's branch. The army department deals with supply and finance. The separation of the forces into the Northern and Southern army is chiefly for inspection and training purposes; the commanders of divisions and independent brigades deal direct with headquarters on most questions.

The estimated net charge for military services in the year 1916-17 is 22,500,000*l.*

An army corps of British and Indian troops was dispatched from India to France on the outbreak of war, and several other units to Egypt and elsewhere.

Agriculture and Industry.

Agriculture, Land Tenure, &c.—The chief industry of India has always been agriculture. The total number of the population supported by agriculture, including forestry and raising of livestock, was, according to the census of 1911, nearly 225 millions (178 millions in British India and 47 millions in the Native States) out of a total population of 313 millions (244 millions in British India and 69 millions in the Native States). In every province of India there is a Department of Land Records and a Department of Agriculture, with two exceptions under separate heads. Both collect agricultural statistics, the former primarily for assessment purposes and the latter with a view to survey and improvement of agriculture. The latter also is concerned with the management of experimental and seed farms, the introduction of new appliances and new staples and the management and control of Colleges for teaching the science of agriculture. There are ~~are~~ <sup>are</sup> staffs of experts in the provinces and there is an Imperial staff of experts withal fully equipped central station, Research Institute and College for post graduate training of those who have completed the Agricultural Course in provincial colleges. There is also a Civil Veterinary Department for the prevention and cure of cattle diseases and for the improvement of the breeds of cattle, horses, &c. There is an Imperial Laboratory for research and the preparation of sera and anti-toxins.

In provinces where the zamindari tenure prevails (i.e., where single proprietors or proprietary brotherhoods possess large estates of several hundreds or thousands of acres), the State land revenue is assessed at an aliquot part (usually about one half) of the ascertained or assumed rental. The revenue is payable on each estate as a whole, the assessment remaining unchanged for the period of settlement. In the greater part of Bengal, and Bihar and Orissa, and in parts of the United Provinces and Madras the settlement is a permanent one and not liable to revision. In provinces where the raiyatwari (or ryotwari) tenure prevails (i.e., where each petty proprietor holds directly from the State, as a rule cultivates his own land, and has no landlord between himself and the Government), the revenue is separately assessed on each petty holding, and land revenue becomes payable at once (or after a short term of grace in the case of uncleared lands) on all extensions of cultivation. The raiyatwari proprietor may throw up his holding, or any portion of it, at the beginning of any year after reasonable notice, whereas the zamindar or large proprietor engages to pay the revenue assessed upon him throughout the term of the settlement.

The following table shows the land surveyed under the two types of tenure, and the land revenue assessed in 1914-15 :—

Of the total area under irrigation in 1914-15, 21,384,104 acres were irrigated by canals; 6,943,825 acres by tanks; 12,556,291 acres by wells; and 6,309,705 acres by other sources. State irrigation works accounted for 25½ million acres in 1914-15. The net revenue from these works in that year, apart from charges for interest, was about 4,176,000*l.*, while the estimated value of crops was over 54½ millions. In the case of works for which capital accounts are kept, the net revenue represented a return of 7·64 per cent. on the capital outlay.

Forests.—The lands under the direct control of the State Forest Department are classified as 'Reserved Forests' (forests intended to be permanently maintained for the supply of timber, &c., or for the protection of water supply, &c.), 'Protected Forests,' and 'Unclassed,' or 'Public' forest land. The following table shows the extent of these areas in 1915 :—

The net revenue from the State forests in 1914-15 was about 1,766,889*l.*

Industries.—The most important indigenous industry, after agriculture, is the weaving of cotton cloths. Other important indigenous industries are silk rearing and weaving, shawl and carpet weaving, wood-carving and metal-working. One of the most important industries connected with agriculture is the tea industry, the number of persons employed being about 698,000. The area under tea plucked in 1915-16 was about 585,000 acres, distributed as follows: Assam, 359,000; Bengal, 151,000; Madras, 21,000; Punjab, 10,000; Agra, 8,000; Bihar and Orissa, 2,000; Upper Burma, 1,600; and the Travancore State, 33,000. The production in 1915-16 was about 372 million pounds, against about 313 million pounds in 1914-15. The exports of Indian tea from British India (including the State of Travancore) in 1915-16 were:—to United Kingdom, 250,290,000 lb.; Russia, 36,590,000 lb.; Canada, 8,842,000 lb.; China, 9,865,000 lb.; Australasia, 9,591,000 lb.; Ceylon, 4,307,000 lb.; Asiatic Turkey, 2,327,000 lb.; United States, 3,443,000 lb.; elsewhere (including exports across the land frontier), 15,178,000 lb.; total, 340,433,000 lb.; against 302,557,000 lb. in 1914-15.

Some statistics of mills, factories, &c., in 1914 or 1914-15, are given as Companies.—On March 31, 1916, there were 2,480 joint stock companies incorporated in India under the Indian Companies Act of 1913 and in operation, with paid-up capital of 53,497,000*l*.

The following table shows the principal classes of these companies —

Companies working	Number	Paid up capital
Banking and Insurance . . . . .	618	5,540,000
Railways and Tramways . . . . .	44	5,534,000

Sugar . . . . .	22	538,000
Land and Building . . . . .	82	1,451,000

These figures exclude companies not incorporated in India, although carrying on business there. At the end of 1914, the number of such companies working in India was, so far as known, 517, with a paid-up capital of nearly 298,000,000*l.*, besides over 75,000,000*l.* debentures. Railway companies accounted for about one-fourth the paid-up capital and the greater part of the debentures, and other important companies were navigation companies (paid-up capital 15,001,000*l.*), jute mills (2,429,000*l.*), rice mills (324,000*l.*), tea planting companies (17,836,000*l.*), gold mining companies (2,327,000*l.*), and other mining companies (6,017,000*l.*)

148 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES

Of the exports of merchandise in 1915-16 Rs. 102,53,42,859 represented the products of the country. Rs. 4,84,59,336 were re-exports of foreign imports.

The returns of quantities and values of imports and of exports are based on the bills of entry and shipping bills respectively, but the declarations contained in these documents are subject to scrutiny in all cases, and penalties may be inflicted where they are found to be false. The value is the wholesale value at the place of import or export, less trade discount, duty not being included in the value of dutiable goods. Formerly the published returns showed the countries from which the goods were shipped to India and to which they were shipped from India, as disclosed by the shipping documents. But in 1907-08 there was tentatively introduced a new system under which imports were classified with reference to the countries whence they are consigned to India, and exports credited to the country of final destination as declared by the exporters in the shipping bills, whether that country possesses a seaboard or not. This system was definitely adopted in the year 1911-12. The published accounts now present, therefore, the countries from which the goods have been consigned to India and the countries for which goods shipped from India are intended. No distinction is maintained between general, special, and transit trade; but goods of foreign origin, when re-exported, are shown in detail separately from those of Indian origin. Apart from the comparatively insignificant imports and exports by parcel post, of which only the total values are known, there are no special circumstances which affect the value of the statistical results.

The gross amount of import duty collected in 1915-16 was Rs. 8,72,04,727, and export duty Rs. 78,91,791. The largest import duty is derived from cotton goods, Rs. 1,35,22,821, from liquors, Rs. 1,17,89,783, from metals, chiefly silver, Rs. 1,14,55,054, and from salt, Rs. 1,35,16,993 in 1915-16; export duties are levied on rice, tea, and jute.

In many cases the Native States of India impose Customs duties on goods imported from other parts of India.

The imports and exports, excluding Government stores and Government treasure, were distributed as follows in five years:—

Gold is used chiefly in the form of ornaments, and much of it is imported in small bars to meet a demand in the same way as piece-goods are imported.

The distribution of commerce by countries was as follows (merchandise alone) in years ending March 31, 1915 and 1916 :—

The railway staff in 1915-16 numbered 7,273 Europeans, 10,412 Anglo-Indians, and 608,895 Indians: total, 626,580.

India and Ceylon have been connected by rail and steamer ferry combined, the steamers plying between Dhanushkodi Point on Rameswaram Island and Talaimannar in Ceylon. A project has also been prepared for replacing the ferry by a railway, to be constructed on a causeway laid over the reef known as Adam's Bridge.

III. POSTS, TELEGRAPHS, AND TELEPHONES.

In 1916 there were 69,012 post-offices and letter-boxes, against 753 in 1856.

In the fiscal year ended March 31, 1916, the number of letters, post-cards, and money-orders passing through the post-offices was 956,894,235; of newspapers 59,581,349; of parcels 8,909,713; and of packets 57,598,761; being a total of 1,082,984,058. The following table gives statistics for five years :—

Year ended March 31	Number of Letters, Newspapers, &c.	Post Offices	Letter Boxes	Total Revenue	Total Expenditure
1912	992,636,139	18,801	48,122	2,136,034	2,003,661

1914	321,801	81,593	1,036,935	910,414	16,596,697
1915	330,033	84,124	1,137,297	923,333	16,190,866
1916	337,720	86,067	1,238,517	948,452	18,129,748

There were 10,482 telegraph offices in India on March 31, 1916.

There are several wireless telegraphy installations under the Government of India.

Telephone exchanges have been established in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Ahmedabad, Karachi, Rangoon, and Moulmein, by private companies, under licences from the Government. Elsewhere the telephone system is in the hands of the Indian Telegraph Department. At the end of 1915 there were 13 telephone exchanges, with 10,766 connections established by companies, and 226 exchanges, with 6,575 connections established by the Department.

Money and Credit.

The total value of the silver, nickel, copper, and bronze coined in British India from 1835-36 to 1915-16 inclusive was Rs. 6,00,23,42,915, including Rs. 50,14,78,008 the value of 221,003,960 British dollars; Rs. 8,02,68,091

the value of 35,374,555 Straits dollars; Rs. 44,37,196 and Rs. 7,00,000, the value of subsidiary silver coinage for the Straits Settlements and Ceylon respectively; Rs. 69,25,635, representing the value of cents and fractions thereof. The heaviest coinage in any one year was Rs. 26,37,52,443 in 1906-07. The value of money coined at the Calcutta and Bombay Mints in the last five years was as follows :—

<sup>2</sup> Includes Rs. 1,28,70,459 on account of the manufacture of British dollars, and Rs. 83,812 on account of the manufacture of five cents.

<sup>3</sup> Includes Rs. 81,54,975 for the manufacture of British dollars, Rs. 58,454 on account of Straits twenty cents, Rs. 1,00,000, Rs. 1,00,000 and Rs. 2,00,000 on account of Ceylon fifty cents, twenty-five cents, and ten cents respectively.

<sup>4</sup> Includes Rs. 1,00,000, Rs. 1,00,000, Rs. 1,00,000 for the manufacture of Ceylon fifty cents, twenty-five cents, and ten cents respectively.

An Act providing for the closing of the Indian Mints to the unrestricted coinage of silver for the public was passed in 1893. Notifications were issued simultaneously providing (1) for the receipt of gold coin and gold bullion at the Mints in exchange for rupees at a ratio of 1s. 4d. per rupee; (2) for the receipt of sovereigns and half-sovereigns of current weight at treasuries, in payment of Government dues, at the rate of fifteen rupees for a sovereign and seven and a half rupees for a half-sovereign; and (3) for the issue of currency notes in Calcutta and Bombay in exchange for gold coin or gold bullion at the rate of one Government rupee for 1s. 4d. By a Notification of the 11th September, 1897, sovereigns and half-sovereigns of current weight are also received at the Reserve Treasuries, at the rate of Rs. 15 for the sovereign.

An Act (XXII. of 1899) declared the sovereign legal tender, 15 rupees to the sovereign. No gold is at present coined in India, but the question of such coinage has been raised from time to time, and was examined by a Royal Commission appointed in 1912 to consider certain aspects of the financial and currency arrangements of the Government of India. The recommendations made by the Royal Commission on this and the other points dealt with by them are under the consideration of the Government of India.

The Coinage Act of 1906 provided for the introduction of a subsidiary nickel one-anna piece and the substitution of a bronze currency for the existing copper coins. The coinage of copper was accordingly discontinued with effect from August 1, 1906. The issue of the nickel one-anna piece was commenced with effect from August 1, 1907.

Since 1900 rupees have been coined as required to meet public demands, the Government purchasing the silver and paying for it mainly with the gold accumulated in the Paper Currency Reserve. The entire profit accruing to Government on the coinage up to March 31, 1907, and during the year 1912-13, and half such profit for the years 1907-08 and 1908-09 were placed to the credit of a separate fund termed the Gold Standard Reserve, with the object of ensuring the stability of the currency policy of Government. Any profit arising from this source is at present credited entire to the Gold Standard Reserve. On August 31, 1916, the Reserve amounted to 27,614 080*l*.

On July 16, 1861, an Act was passed by the Government of India providing for the issue of a paper currency through a Government department of Public Issue, by means of promissory notes. Circles of issue were established from time to time, as found necessary, and the notes were made legal tender within the circle for which they were issued, and rendered payable at the place of issue, and also at the capital city of the Presidency. Subsequent legislation has relaxed the rigidity of the circle system. Notes of the values of five, ten, fifty, and a hundred rupees are now legal tender throughout British India, and the limitation of currency to the circle of issue is confined to notes of higher denominations. The issue of one-rupee notes is being considered (April, 1917).

There are now seven circles of issue with their headquarters at Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Rangoon, Cawnpore, Lahore, and Karachi.

Total values of notes in circulation on March 31 in six years, including the notes held in government treasuries and the Presidency banks :—

	Rs.		Rs.
1910-11 . . .	54,99 05,815	1913-14 . . .	66,11,75,935
1911-12 . . .	61 36 25,095	1914-15 . . .	61,62,99,615
1912-13 . . .	68,97,78,240	1915-16 . . .	67,73,34,540

Nearly two-thirds of the total note circulation is in the currency circles of Calcutta and Bombay.

Banks.—The three Presidency Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, constituted under the Presidency Banks Act of 1876, act as bankers for the Indian Government. The following statistics relate to December 31, 1915 :—

—	Bank of Bengal	Bank of Madras	Bank of Bombay

An Act to provide for the ultimate adoption of a uniform system of weights and measures of capacity throughout British India was passed by the Governor-General of India in Council in 1871. The Act orders: Art 2. 'The primary standard of weight shall be called a ser, and shall be a weight of metal in the possession of the Government of India, equal, when weighed in a vacuum, to the weight known in France as the kilogramme, = 2.205 lbs. avoirdupois.' Art. 3. 'The units of weight and measures of capacity shall be, for weights, the said ser; for measures of capacity, a measure containing one such ser of water at its maximum density, weighed in a vacuum.' 'Unless it be otherwise ordered, the subdivisions of all such weights and measures of capacity shall be expressed in decimal parts.' This Act, however, has never been brought into operation. The matter was again considered by a Weights and Measures Committee, appointed in 1913, and the evidence was generally in favour of a uniform system, provided there is not a too radical change from the existing practice.

BALUCHISTÁN.

Government, &c.—A country occupying the extreme western corner of the Indian Empire, approximately between lat.  $24^{\circ} 54'$  and  $32^{\circ} 4' N.$ , and between long.  $60^{\circ} 56'$  and  $70^{\circ} 15' E.$ ; extreme length from E. to W. about 550 miles; breadth about 450; area, 134,638 square miles; population (1911 census), 834,703. Bounded on the N. by Afghánistán and the North-West Frontier Province, on the E. by Sindh, the Panjáb, and a part of the Frontier Province, on the S. by the Arabian Sea, on the W. by Persia, the boundary disputes with which were settled in 1905. The main divisions constituting an area of 134,638 square miles are: (1) British Balúchistán proper, with an area of about 9,096 square miles, consisting of tracts assigned to the British Government by treaty in 1879; (2) Agency Territories, with an area of about 45,132 square miles, composed of tracts which have from time to time been acquired by lease, or otherwise brought under control, and placed directly under British officers; and (3) the native States of Kalát and Las Bela, with an area of about 80,410 square miles, the former consisting of a confederation of tribes under the Khán of Kalát, and stretching westwards to Persia, while the latter occupies the alluvial valley between the Pab and Halá ranges from the sea to Bela.

British and Administered Territory.—British Residents were appointed to the courts of the Kháns of Kalát from the middle of the nineteenth century, and British expeditions passed through the Bolán on their way to Kandahár and Afghánistán, but up to 1876 the country was considered independent. In 1875 Sir Robert Sandeman, the founder of the Balúchistán Province, first entered the country; in 1877 the cantonment of Quetta, which is now the headquarters of the Administration, was occupied by British troops, and in 1879 the administration of the district was taken over on behalf of the Khán of Kalát. After the Afghán war, 1878–81, the districts of Pishin, Shorarúd, Duki, Sibi, and Sháhrig were assigned to the British in November, 1887, were formally constituted as British Balúchistán. In 1883, the districts of Quetta and Bolán were made over by the Khán to the British on an annual quit-rent of 25,000 rupees and 30,000 rupees respectively. In 1886, the Bori valley, in which is now the cantonment of Loralai, was occupied. In 1887, the Khetrán country, now known as the Bárkhán tahsil, was brought under British control; in 1889 British authority was established in the Zhob valley and Kákar Khurásán; in 1896 Chágai and Western Sinjrání were included in administered territory; in 1899, the Nuskhi Niabar was made over by the Khán of Kalát on an annual quit-rent of 9,000 rupees; and in 1903 the Nashábád tahsil was acquired from the Khán on an annual quit-rent of 117,500 rupees. The area of British and administered territory, including tribal areas, is 54,228 sq. miles, and the population (1911) 414,412. The head of the civil administration is the Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor-General. The area under his direct administration is divided into 6 districts, each in charge of a Political Agent as follows: Quetta-Pishin, Sibi, Zhob, Loralai, Bolán Pass, Chágai. The Political Agent in charge of the Bolán Pass is also Political Agent for Kalát and Las Bela. The revenue administration of the Province is entrusted to an officer who is styled the Revenue and Judicial Commissioner.

In the directly administered territory the chief items of revenue are: Land revenue, excise, court fees and stamps, and judicial fines. In some places the land revenue is levied in money in accordance with a fixed assessment, but generally it is levied in kind. This is usually one-sixth of the crop; but in the Sibi tahsil it is two-ninths, and on the lands of the Shebo and Khushdil irrigation canals, constructed by the Government, the proportion is one-third. In Nasirábád the assessment per acre of the cultivated area varies from 8 annas to Rs. 4 according to the crops raised and means of water-supply. For revenue purposes each district is divided into tahsils, each of which is in charge of an Indian official known as a Tahsildar, who has a Naib-Tahsildar, Kanungos and Patwáris subordinate to him. The revenue from all sources in 1915-16 was Rs. 14,79,000 ; in 1914-15, Rs. 15,21,000 ; and in 1913-14, Rs. 15,42,000.

Almost all cases in which local men are concerned are referred to 'councils of elders' (locally called jirga) for settlement along the well-tried lines of the ancient customary and tribal law. This system of settlement of cases forms an integral and essential part of the machinery for the administration of Civil and Criminal justice in Balúchistán. Appeals from, or rather applications for revision of, the jirga decisions when confirmed by the district officers, lie to the Agent to the Governor General and Chief Commissioner in Balúchistán. Cases in which aliens are concerned are settled by Regular Courts and the highest court of appeal in such cases is the Judicial Commissioner in Balúchistán.

Regular troops are cantoned at Quetta, Chaman, Fort Sandeman, and Loralai, and detachments are stationed at different places, principally in the Zhob and Loralai Districts, for the preservation of law and order. There is also a police force, supplemented by levies and the Zhob militia, Makrán and Chagai Levy Corps. The latter are recruited from the local tribes, and have their own leading men as officers.

The medical work of the Province is under the Residency Surgeon and Chief Medical Officer, and there are Civil Surgeons at Quetta, Sibi, Loralai, Fort Sandemana and Chaman, and Civil Assistant-Surgeons at Quetta, Sibi, Kalat and Pangur, and Railway Assistant-Surgeons at Shahrig and Mach.

The Native States of Kalát and Las Bela.—The leading chief of Kalát is His Highness Sir Mir Máhmúd Khán, G.C.I.E., Beglar Bégi Khán or Wali of Kalát, who succeeded on the abdication of his father, the late Mir Khudádád Khán, in November, 1893.

Mir Muhabat . . . . .	1731	Sir Mir Máhmúd Khán . . . . .	1893
Mir Muhammad Nasir Khán I. . . . .	1751

From March, 1863, to May, 1864, the Masnad (Throne) was usurped by Khudádád Khán's cousin, Sherdil Khan.

The Khán of Kalát is the head of a confederacy of chiefs, but the extent of his control has now been considerably reduced. In all important matters he is amenable to the advice of the Agent to the Governor-General in Balúchistán, who also arbitrates in disputes between the Khán and minor chiefs. The area of Kalát State, is 73,278 square miles, and the population 359,086 (1911 census.)

The Khán's revenue, including the subsidies and rents for the leased areas paid by the British Government, amounts to about 12,00,000 rupees annually. The Khán has an irregular force of 340 cavalry and artillery. The chief towns in the State are Kalát, Mastung, Bhág, Gandáwá, Dádhar, Turbat, and Panjgur.

The ruling chief of Las Bela has the title of Jám. Jám Mír Khán, the grandfather of the present chief, succeeded in 1840; Jám Ali Khán, his father, succeeded in 1889; and Jám Mír Kamál Khán, C.I.E., the present chief, succeeded in 1896. The area of the State is 7,132 square miles; population, 61,205 (1911 census); revenue varies from 2 to 3 lakhs; military force, 113 infantry, 10 cavalry, and 3 guns; military police force, 71 men. Before the British occupation the ruler of Las Bela was a feudatory of the Khán of Kalát, but in recent times the connection has almost entirely ceased. The State is under the control of the Political Agent in Kalát.

General.—The most numerous races in Balúchistán are the Brahúi, Pathan and Baloch, 554,600. The Brahuís occupy the centre of the country stretching through Chágai to meet the Baloch of Western Sanjrání, and southwards to the Lásis and the Baloch of Makrán. The Pathans are chiefly contained within British and administered territory. The Baloch are distributed through the southern regions in the Marri and Bugti country, the Kachhi plain, the Nasirabad tahsil, the Domlki, Umrání, and Kahéri country, and Makrán. The Lásis (27,800), are almost wholly confined to Las Bela, the term Lási being of modern invention. The other inhabitants are either scattered, as the Chuttás and Saiads, or are subject races and occupational groups such as the Jat cultivators of the Kachhi plain, the Dehwár cultivators of the uplands, the Darzádahs and Naqíbs of Makrán, and the Ghuláms who are of servile origin. There are also indigenous Hindus (15,000) living under the protection of the tribes and carrying on the trade of the country.

Religion and Instruction.—The religion of the native population is either Mussulmán, in general of the Sunni sect, or Hindu. The Mussulmáns numbered (1911) 782,648; Hindus, 37,602; Christians, 5,085; Sikhs, 8,390; others, 978. At the close of 1915–16 there were 73 Government and aided and unaided schools in the province; 9 of these were for girls and 2 for Europeans. Of the 3,263 pupils 605 were girls. Nearly half the pupils were Hindus, children of men from Sind and the Panjab in trade or in Government service. Besides these there were 70 private schools with 865 pupils.

Production and Industry.—The country consists largely of barren mountains, deserts and stony plains; its climate is subject to the extremes of heat and cold, and the rainfall is uncertain and scanty. Here and there the mountains are tree-clad, and cultivation is carried on wherever water is found. The agricultural products are wheat, barley, millet, lucerne, rice, maize, and potatoes; while grapes, apricots, peaches, apples, and melons are grown in abundance. Panjgúr in Makrán is famous for its dates. Among wild animals are the markhór, urial (wild-sheep), Sind ibex, ravine-deer, bear, and panther, and the chief domestic animals are the camel, horses, oxen and cows, and donkeys.

Little is yet known of the mineralogy of the country. Iron and lead are found near Khuzdár; coal is worked at Khost on the Sindh-Pishin railway, and in the Sor hills near Quetta. Asbestos and chromite have been found in Zhob, and chromite also in the Quetta Pishin district. There are oil springs at Khatian in the Marri country, but these are not now worked. Sulphate of iron has been found in Kalát and sulphate of aluminium in Chágai. Salt is manufactured in Pishin, in the Zhob district, and in the Kalát State. Local manufactures are unimportant. A few matchlocks and other weapons are made, and various kinds of ironwork for agricultural purposes. The nomad tribes make felts, rough blankets, and rugs. Brahúi women are famous for their needle-work. Leather-work and pottery are manufactured in Kachhi. There is a brewery as well as a government distillery for the manufacture of country spirit at Quetta, and also mills for grinding flour, pressing chaff, manufacturing patent coal-fuel, and ice. A museum at Quetta was opened in 1906. The Indian Staff College was opened at Quetta in 1907. The College is at present (end of 1915) closed, but the building is being utilised as a Cadet College for the training of about 100 cadets.

Commerce.—The land traffic with India passes either by railway or by the routes from Kalāt and Las Bela to Sind, and through the Loralai district, to the Punjab. The value of the trans-frontier imports (exclusive of treasure) from Kalāt and Las Bela into India in 1915-16 was Rs. 13,96,291, and of the exports from India to Kalāt and Las Bela, Rs. 4,18,634. The chief exports from the Province are fruit, drugs, fish, mats, and wool; imports consist of piece-goods, chiefly of Indian manufacture, metal ware, tea, sugar, and canned goods.

Over-sea trade is carried on through ports on the Mukrán coast with India, the exports consisting of dates, matting and dried fish, and the imports chiefly of piece-goods and food grains. The greater part of this trade is with the Bombay Presidency.

The principal imports into Balúchistán from foreign countries, viz., Afghanistan and Persia, are fruit, ghee, wool, sheep, horses and ponies. Piece-goods in large quantities, indigo, tea, sugar, and metals are sent to these countries through Balúchistán.

Communications.—Good roads connect the more important centres in the directly administered places. There are 971 miles of metalled and partly metalled roads and 2,131 of unmetalled roads and paths.

The North-Western railway, which has the standard gauge of 5ft. 6in., enters Balúchistán near Jhatpat and crosses the Kachhi plain to Sibi, where it bifurcates, one branch going by Harnai and the other by Quetta, and reunites at Bostán, whence the line runs to Chaman. A line of railway to Nushki 82½ miles long, which cost about 7,000,000 rupees, was opened for traffic in 1905, and an extension of the railway line from Nushki up to Dalbundin is now under construction. A short line from Khanai to Hindubagh, a distance of about 45 miles, is also being constructed.

There is a complete and frequent postal service in British and administered territory, extending to Kalat and through Nushki to Seistan in Persia.

A network of telegraph wires covers the north-eastern portion of the Province and extends to Kalat, and westwards viâ Nushki to Killá Robât, where it connects with the Indo-European system, while a further line laid down in 1907 connects India with Persia and Europe, viâ Las Bela, Panjgur, and Nok Kundi.

SIKKIM.

An Indian State in the Himalayas, bounded on the N. by Tibet, on the E. by the Tibetan district of Chumbi, and by Bhutan, on the S. by the British district of Darjiling, and on the W. by Nepal. Extreme length from N. to S. 70 miles; extreme breadth, 50 miles; area, 2,818 square miles.

In March, 1890, a treaty was signed by the Viceroy of India and the Chinese representative, by which the British protectorate over Sikkim is recognised by China. The British Government has direct and exclusive control over the internal administration and foreign relations. The Mahārājā, after having declined to comply with the conditions, lived for some time under surveillance in British India, and in 1895 was allowed to return to Sikkim. The present Mahārājā is H. H. TASHI NAMGYAL, who succeeded on December 5, 1914. His Highness and the members of the Council carry on the administration, with the assistance of the British Political officer stationed at Gangtok.

Population in 1911, 87,920. The inhabitants are Bhutias, Lepchas, and Nepalese, the last-named being now the most numerous. Principal towns are Gangtok, the capital, Rhenok, Pakyong, Rangpo, Lachen, and Lachung. The religion is Lamaism.

The gross revenue averages 14,500*l.* per year. The landlords exercise a limited jurisdiction within their districts; important cases being referred to the Council.

Sikkim produces rice, Indian corn, and other millets, cardamoms, oranges, apples, and woollen cloth. Fruit gardens are maintained by the State. There are extensive forests in the State and wide tracts of unoccupied waste. A few copper mines are worked. The principal trade route from Bengal to Tibet passes through Sikkim. Imports into Bengal from, and exports from Bengal to Sikkim:—

	1910-11	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14	1914-15
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . .	72,006	86,084	87,000	107,000	107,591
Exports . . .	55,300	73,894	100,000	207,000	167,106

The chief imports into Sikkim are cotton piece goods, oils, provisions, salt, manufactured silk, sugar, tea, tobacco, and rice; the chief exports from Sikkim food grains and vegetables, hides and skins, raw wool, and timber.

ANDAMAN AND NICOBAR ISLANDS.

The Andaman Islands lie in the Bay of Bengal, 590 miles from the mouth of the Hugli, 120 miles from Cape Negrais in Burma, the nearest point on the mainland. Five large islands closely grouped together are called the Great Andaman, and to the south is the island of Little Andaman. There are some 200 islets, the two principal groups being the Andaman Archipelago and the Labyrinth Islands. The total area is 2,260 square miles. The Great Andaman group is about 219 miles long and, at the widest, 32 miles broad. The group, densely wooded, contains many valuable trees, the best known of which is the padauk or Andaman redwood (Pterocarpus dalbergioides). The islands are hilly, the highest point, Saddle Peak, being 2,402 feet, and Mount Harriet, 1,196 feet in height. The islands possess a number of harbours and safe anchorages, notably, Port Blair, Port Cornwallis, and Stewart Sound, the last being most favourably situated for forest trade. The aborigines, 1,317 (628 males and 689 females) in 1911 (against 1,882 in 1901), live in small groups over the islands; they are savages of a low Negrito type. The total population of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands in 1915 was 25,732 (19,580 males and 6,152 females). The climate is tropical, the rainfall irregular and often excessive. In 1915 the forest sales, the result of convict labour, amounted to 3,39,248 rupees. Tea, the coconut, Manila hemp (Musa textilis), and Bahamas aloe (Agave sisalana) are successfully cultivated. In 1915 there were 11,941 head of cattle. Wireless telegraphy with Burma was established in 1904. A mail steamer connects Port Blair with Calcutta, Rangoon, and Madras. The islands are used by the Government of India as a penal settlement for life and long term convicts. The settlement possesses about 27,365 acres of cleared land and 156 square miles of reserved forest. There were, in 1915, 12,249 convicts (including 570 women) in the place, of whom some 1,730 were on ticket-of-leave in the settlement supporting themselves. Of the women, about half are on ticket-of-leave, and married to convicts. The Andaman Islands are under the Government of India, and the Officer in Charge is the Superintendent of Port Blair. The Civil, Military and convict population of Port Blair in 1915 was 16,914.

The Nicobar Islands are situated to the South of the Andamans, 75 miles from Little Andaman. There are nineteen islands, seven uninhabited; gross area, 635 square miles. The islands are usually divided into three groups. Southern, Central and Northern, the chief islands in each being respectively, Great Nicobar, Camorta with Nancowry, and Car Nicobar. There is a fine land-locked harbour between the islands of Camorta and Nancowry, known as Nancowry Harbour. The Nicobarese inhabitants, numbering 8,818 (4,833 males and 3,985 females) in 1911, are a variety of the Malay race. They are known to have eagerly pursued the coconut trade for at least 1,500 years. English and Hindustani are understood in most villages. The coconut production is estimated at 15 million nuts per annum, of which some 5 million are sold by barter and exported in small native craft and Chinese junks in the form of copra. The climate is tropical and, except, perhaps, at Car, unhealthy for Europeans. The Government is represented by a permanent agent (a native of India) and an assistant agent. The islands are attached to the Chief Commissionership of the Andamans and Nicobars.

LACCADIVE ISLANDS.

A group of 14 islands (9 inhabited), about 200 miles off the west or Malabar coast of the Madras Presidency. The northern portion is attached to the collectorate of South Kanara, the remainder to the administrative district of Malabar. Population 10,600, nearly all Muhammadans. The language is either Malayalam or Mahl. The staple product is the fibre known as coir.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

Constitution and Government.

THE Straits Settlements, a Crown colony, which comprises Singapore, Penang (including Province Wellesley and the Dindings), and Malacca, were transferred from the control of the Indian Government to that of the Secretary of State for the Colonies on April 1, 1867. The Cocos Islands were placed under the Straits Settlements in 1886, and Christmas Island in 1889. Christmas Island was annexed to the Settlement of Singapore in 1900, and the Cocos Islands in 1903.

By a proclamation dated October 30, 1906, the boundaries of the Colony were extended so as to include the Colony of Labuan, with effect from January 1, 1907.

The administration of the colony is in the hands of a Governor, aided by an Executive Council, composed of the General Officer commanding the troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Resident Councillor of Penang, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, and the Colonial Engineer. There is a Legislative Council, presided over by the Governor, of ten official and eight unofficial members, nominated by the Crown.

Governor.—Sir Arthur Henderson Young, K.C.M.G. •

The governor is also High Commissioner for the Federated Malay States of Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, High Commissioner of Brunei, and British Agent for British North Borneo and Sarawak.

There are municipal bodies in each settlement, the members of which are appointed by the Governor.

Area and Population.

Singapore is an island about twenty-seven miles long by fourteen wide, with an area of 217 square miles, separated from the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula by a strait three-quarters of a mile in width. A number of small islands adjacent form part of the settlement. The seat of government is the town of Singapore, at the south-eastern point of the island. Penang is an island of 108 square miles, off the west coast of the Malayan Peninsula, and at the northern entrance of the Straits of Malacca. On the opposite shore of the mainland, distant from two to ten miles, is Province Wellesley, a strip of territory forming part of the Settlement of Penang, averaging eight miles in width, and extending forty-five miles along the coast, including ten miles of territory to the south of the Krian; total area 280 square miles. The chief town of Penang is George Town. Off the coast of Perak is the small island of Pangkor, which, together with a strip of the mainland, is British territory, the whole being known as the Dindings. Malacca is on the western coast of the peninsula between Singapore and Penang—about 110 miles from the former and 240 from the latter; it is a strip of territory 42 miles in length, and from eight to 24 miles in breadth.

The population, according to the census of 1911, was 714,069 (467,374 males and 246,695 females). The estimated population for 1915 and 1916, inclusive of the military, is as follows:—

	Males	Females	Males	Females	Males	Females	Males	Females
Europeans and Americans	1,759	1,832	829	494	245	90	5,733	2,416
Eurasians	2,143	2,728	865	992	821	941	4,229	4,681

In 1911 there were in the Settlements: 250,525 Malays, 397,508 Chinese, and 87,268 natives of India. In 1915, about 258,791 Malays; 404,181 Chinese, and 89,084 natives of India.

The births and deaths in 1915 were as follows:—

	Singapore	Penang	Dindings	Province Wellesley	Malacca	Labuan	Total
Births	8,816	1,115	279	4,359	5,078	164	22,811
Deaths	9,214	1,525	259	3,512	4,381	142	22,633

In 1915 there were 95,735 immigrants from China, and 75,323 from Southern India.

The Cocos or Keeling Islands, a group of about twenty small coral islands, lie about 700 miles S.W. of Sumatra and 1,200 miles S.W. of Singapore. The estimated population in 1914 was 795. (Census population, 1911, 749).

Christmas Island is 200 miles S.W. of Java and 700 miles E. of the Cocos Islands. It is 9 miles long and about 9 miles wide. In December, 1915, the population numbered about 700, all the inhabitants, except the District Officer and his staff, being employed directly or indirectly by the company which works the enormous phosphate deposits which the island contains. Revenue, 1915, 6,540*l.*; expenditure, 1,836*l.* Imports, 1914, 15,282*l.* (1913, 20,128*l.*), chiefly machinery, tools, railway material, locomotives, and lorries. The sole source of wealth of the Island is phosphate of lime. 25,738 tons were exported in 1915, against 93,780 tons in 1914, and 150,003 tons in 1913. Tonnage entered and cleared, 1915, 21,852 tons; 1914, 96,110 tons; and 1913, 150,116 tons. There is a railway in the island.

The island of Labuan lies about 6 miles from the north-west coast of Borneo, and since January 1, 1907, it has been incorporated with Singapore. Area 28½ sq. miles; the estimated population in 1914 was 6,746, mostly Malays from Borneo,* with some Chinese traders and about 39 Europeans. Capital, Victoria, which has about 1,500 inhabitants.

Instruction.

Instruction, not yet compulsory throughout the colony, is partly supported by the Government in the case of grant-in-aid schools, and wholly in the case of Government English and Government Vernacular Schools. In Malacca, Penang Island outside Municipal limits, and Province Wellesley there is compulsory attendance of boys within a certain radius of a school, where free instruction is given in their own language.

The numbers of schools and pupils were as follows in 1915:—

	Schools	Enrol- ment	Attend- ance
Government English schools . . . . .	8	2,930	2,771
Grant-in-aid English schools . . . . .	35	12,058	11,176
Government vernacular boys' and girls' schools . . . . .	188	12,926	11,138
Grant-in-aid vernacular boys' schools . . . . .	6	366	299

The expenditure on the above schools was 57,750*l.*

There is a training college for Malay teachers in Malacca.

Justice and Crime.

The law in force is contained in local ordinances and in such English and Indian Acts and Orders in Council as are applicable to the colony. The Indian Penal Code, with slight alterations, has been adopted, and there is a Civil Procedure Code based on the English Judicature Acts. There is a Supreme Court which holds assizes at Singapore and Penang every two months, and quarterly at Malacca, civil sittings monthly at Singapore and Penang, and once a quarter at Malacca.

There are, besides, district courts, police courts and marine magistrates' courts. Convictions before the Superior Courts in 1915 were 591; before the other courts, 41,007. Police force, 2,696 in 1915, of whom 78 were Europeans. Criminal prisoners admitted to the gaols in 1915, 4,540.

Finance.

Public revenue and expenditure for six years (1 dollar = 2*s.* 4*d.*):—

Years	Revenue	Expenditure	Years	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1910	1,089,238	878,762	1913	1,440,403	1,221,338

1912	1,506,467	1,084,428	1915	1,648,697	1,169,598

The estimated revenue for 1916 was 1,862,192*l*. The leading items of revenue for 1915 were—licences, excise, and internal revenue not otherwise classified, 1,337,369*l*.; posts and telegraphs, 79,484*l*.; fees of court or office, payments for specific services, and reimbursements in aid, 70,240*l*.; rents of Government property, 89,665*l*.; and of expenditure—military expenditure, 352,500*l*.; marine, 41,137*l*.; police, 108,700*l*.; legal, 46,565*l*.; hospitals and dispensaries, 61,335*l*.; medical, 28,674*l*.; education, 34,936*l*.; post office, 71,352*l*.; Government monopolies, 41,051*l*.; public works, 144,200*l*.; pensions, 61,350*l*.

The total assets of the colony, January 1, 1916, amounted to 2,928,294*l*. and liabilities 527,111*l*. The debt on December 31, 1915, amounted to 6,913,352*l*., borrowed for public works.

Commerce.

The Straits ports are free from duties, and their trade, centred at Singapore, is a transit trade. Excise duties are levied on wines, petroleum, and tobacco. The chief exports comprise tin, pepper, nutmegs, mace, sago, tapioca, buffalo hides and horns, rattans, gutta-percha, rubber, gambier, gum, copra. The cultivation of rice is giving place to rubber and coconuts.

Imports and exports for five years (inclusive of treasure and inclusive of trade with the Federated Malay States), including the trade of Labuan and Christmas Island :—

There may be said to be three classes of trade—passing, transit, actual; passing trade being goods in vessels merely passing through Singapore for China, &c.; transit trade, goods changing bottom at Singapore, or landed and stored awaiting re-shipment. These two classes of trade are not included in the import and export statistics. Actual trade may be defined as goods brought for sale into Singapore and purchased there, either for consumption or for sale to other places whither they are said to be exported. The trade is a transit trade in the sense only that what is imported is exported without undergoing any process of manufacture. Exchange fluctuations affect the value of past statistical results, in times of low exchange the dollar value of goods having their origin in gold countries being enhanced; the same probably holding good, to a less extent, in the case of produce exported, but the dollar value having been fixed early in 1906 at 2s. 4d., this is the rate adopted since.

The following figures are taken from the British Board of Trade Returns, the imports including produce from Borneo, Sarawak, and other eastern places, transhipped at Singapore, which is thus entered as the place of export:—

Exports of foreign and Colonial produce to the Straits . . . . .	116,973	169,301	196,452	146,871	249,780

The principal imports into the United Kingdom in 1915, were tin, 4,911,383*l.* (in 1900, 3,364,718*l.*); rubber, 7,385,631*l.* (1916, 6,308,000*l.*); sago and sago meal and flour, 387,639*l.*; Cassava powder and tapioca, 300,678*l.*; fruit, preserved in syrup, 401,732*l.*; copra, 490,767*l.*; gutta percha, 227,815*l.*; pepper, 463,491*l.*; motor spirit, 351,682*l.*; gambier, 300,276*l.* The principal exports from the United Kingdom were:—cottons and cotton yarn, 1,187,394*l.*; iron and iron and steel manufactures, 494,314*l.*; machinery, 181,585*l.*; tobacco, 290,649*l.*

Shipping and Navigation.

The total number of merchant vessels entered at the ports of the Colony during 1915, exclusive of native craft, was 9,410, with a tonnage of 10,460,114 tons. The number of native craft was 24,320, with a tonnage of 1,111,769 tons. The number of merchant vessels cleared at the ports of the colony and dependencies was 9,403, with a tonnage of 10,446,838 tons, and the total number of native craft was 24,213, with a tonnage of 1,107,661 tons; over half the tonnage is British.

Communications.

There is a railway from Singapore to Woodlands on the Johore Straits, communication between Woodlands and Johore being maintained by steam ferries. The Federated Malay States Railway extends from Parit Buntar in Krian to Kuala Prai in Province Wellesley, whence are steam ferries to Penang. There is a railway from Malacca to Tampin in the Negri Sembilan. All the railways have a gauge of one metre, and connect with the Federated Malay States Railway system, a continuation of which through Johore was opened in 1909. There are electric tramway systems in Singapore and Penang. There are cables connecting Singapore, Malacca and Penang, and land lines from Singapore to Kuala Lumpur and Penang, and from Malacca to Tampin.

In 1915, 10,028,804 letters and other articles of correspondence were posted, and 7,498,634 delivered. The number of letters sent to China in clubbed packets decreased from 1,034,152 in 1914 to 1,011,243 in 1915. The parcels posted numbered 81,863, those delivered 50,339.

From Labuan there are telegraph lines connecting with Hong Kong, Singapore, Sandakan, and the Continent.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

There are nine banks with establishments in the Colony. The amount of deposits in the Government Savings Bank on December 31, 1915, was 796,983 dollars, equivalent to 92,9817.

The dollar, value 2s. 4d., is the standard coin of the Colony, and with the half-dollar and the British sovereign is legal tender for the payment of any amount. Subsidiary silver coins are 20, 10, and 5 cent pieces; copper coins are cents, half-cents, and quarter-cents. On December 31, 1915, Government currency notes to the value of 57,702,348 dollars (6,731,9407.) were in circulation in the Colony and Federated Malay States.

The measure of length in use in the Settlements is the English yard, with its divisions and multiples, and land is measured by the English acre. The native terms are, however, still in use. Commercial weights are:—

1 Kati	= 16 Tahil=	1½ lb. avoirdupois.
1 Pikul	= 100 Kati =	133½ lbs.       ,,
1 Koyan	= 40 Pikul =	5,333½       ,,       ,,

The kati of 1½ lbs. is known as the Chinese kati. Another weight, known as the Malay kati, and still in partial use in Penang, is equal to the weight of 24 Spanish dollars, or 9,984 grains. This gives 142·628 lbs. as the weight of the pikul, and 5,705·143 lbs. as the weight of the koyan. The measures of capacity throughout the Colony are the gantang or gallon, and chupak or quart.

THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES.

The Federated Malay States of Perak, Sélángor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, which occupy a large portion of the Malay Peninsula, are under British protection. The officer administering the Government of the Straits Settlements is ex officio H.M.'s High Commissioner for these States and the other Malay States in the British sphere.

High Commissioner.—Sir A. H. Young, K.C.M.G.

Chief Secretary to Government.—Sir E. L. Brockman, K.C.M.G.

The following are the Rulers and Residents of the four States:—

Ruler of Perak.—H. H. Sultan Abdul Jalil Nasruddin Makhtaram Shah :

Resident.—R. G. Watson, C.M.G.

Ruler of Sélángor.—H.H. Sultan Ala-udin Suleimanshah, K.C.M.G. ;

Resident.—E. G. Broadrick.

Ruler of Negri Sembilan.—H.H. Tunku Muhammad, C.M.G. ;

Resident.—A. H. Lemon.

Ruler of Pahang.—H.H. Sultan Mahmud, C.M.G. ; Resident.

E. J. Brewster.

In Perak, Sélángor, and Sungei Ujong, which State was subsequently amalgamated with other States to form the Confederation of Negri Sembilan, Residents were appointed in 1874, with a staff of European officers whose duty was to aid the native rulers by advice, and to exercise executive functions. The supreme authority in each State is vested in the State Council, consisting of the Sultan, the Resident, the Secretary to the Resident (if there is one), and some of the principal Malay chiefs and Chinese merchants. The Residents are under the control of the Chief Secretary and the High Commissioner.

In 1883 the relations of the Straits Settlements with the small Native States on the frontier of Malacca were consolidated. These States were confederated in 1889, under the name of Negri Sembilan (signifying Nine States). In January, 1895, Sungei Ujong (including Jelebu, which had been administered by a Collector and Magistrate under the Resident of Sungei Ujong since 1888) and Negri Sembilan were placed under one Resident ; and in July, 1895, a treaty was signed by which the administrations were amalgamated. The new federation, which retains the ancient name of Negri Sembilan, comprises the States of Sungei Ujong, Sri Menanti, Johol, Jelebu, Rembau and Tampin. In 1887, by agreement with the Raja of Pahang, the control of his foreign relations, &c., was surrendered to the British Government. This was followed by a further agreement in 1888 with the Raja (now styled Sultan), under which Pahang was taken under British protection, on the same terms as the Protected Native States on the west coast of the peninsula. Pahang is situated on the east coast, within 200 miles by sea from Singapore. In July, 1896, the treaty between the four Protected Native States, Perak, Sélángor, Pahang, and Negri Sembilan, and the British Government came into force by which the administrative federation of these States under a Chief Secretary is provided for, and the States agree to furnish a contingent of troops for service in the Colony should His Majesty's Government be at war with any foreign nation.

The areas of these States, in square miles, are approximately:—Perak, 7,800 sq. miles ; Sélángor, 3,156 sq. miles ; Negri Sembilan, 2,550 sq. miles ; Pahang, 14,000 square miles ; total, 27,506 sq. miles. Perak, by recent agreement with Siam, has been extended by about 1,000 square miles (included in the figures given above).

Population, census 1911: Perak, 494,057 (344,238 males and 149,819 females); Sēlāngor, 294,035 (220,939 males and 73,096 females); Negri Sembilan, 130,199 (87,651 males and 42,548 females); Pahang, 118,708 (72,234 males and 46,474 females); total 1,036,999, (725,062 males, and 311,937 females). The population contained 420,840 Malays, 433,244 Chinese, 172,465 natives of India, 3,284 Europeans and Americans, and 2,649 Eurasians. The preponderance of males over females is due to the number of Chinese immigrants. The largest town in the States is Kuala Lumpur (in Sēlāngor) with about 60,000 inhabitants. Births, 1915, 29,699; deaths, 33,899.

The military force of the States consists of an infantry battalion of Sikhs and Pathans known as the Malay States Guides, to which is attached a mountain battery with mules. The rank and file of the police force consists of an Indian and a Malay contingent. The authorised strength of the force in 1915 was 97 European and 5 Native officers, and 3,347 rank and file, but the actual strength was over 200 below this. There is also a detective branch consisting of Chinese, Tamils, Malays, &c., in the charge of Europeans.

In Perak, Sēlāngor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, in 1915, there were a number of English schools maintained or assisted by Government, with an average enrolment of 4,975 boys and 1,378 girls, and an average attendance of 4,657 and 1,281 respectively, and 367 (310 for boys and 57 for girls) Malay Vernacular schools, with an average enrolment of 19,286 scholars, and an average attendance of 15,360. The total number of schools (1915) was 464 (346 boys' schools, 68 girls' schools, and 50 mixed) with 28,026 enrolled pupils and an average attendance of 23,208. There are several Chinese schools, but they are not under the control or supervision of the Education Department. Expenditure on education (excluding buildings) in 1915, £52,000.

The laws in force in each State of the Federation are contained in enactments passed by the State Councils, up to December, 1909, and from that date, where more than one State is affected, by the Federal Council. This Council consists of the High Commissioner as President, the Chief Secretary, the Sultans of Perak, Sēlāngor, and Pahang, the Yam Tuan of Negri Sembilan, the four British Residents, the Legal Adviser, and four unofficial members, and in addition to legislation deals with the annual estimates of revenue and expenditure. All legislative enactments are submitted to the High Commissioner and the Secretary of State for the Colonies. The courts in the States are:—(1) The Supreme Court, comprising the Court of a Judicial Commissioner and the Court of Appeal. (2) The Court of a Magistrate of the first class. (3) The Court of a Magistrate of the second class. (4) The Court of a Kathi and the Court of Assistant Kathi. (5) The Court of a Penghulu. The Court of Appeal consists of two or more Judicial Commissioners, the chief Judicial Commissioner being President. There is a final appeal on civil matters to the Privy Council.

The number of cases of murder, homicide, robbery, &c., reported in 1912, was 1,122, with 318 discoveries; in 1913, reported, 908, discovered, 305; in 1914, 1,104, discovered, 330; in 1915, 956, discovered 296. The number of prisoners in gaol on December 31, 1915, was 1,751.

Efficient Government hospitals are established in all districts, with separate hospitals for Europeans. A very complete Institute of Medical Research has been established at Kuala Lumpur.

176 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—FEDERATED MALAY STATES

The revenue and expenditure of the States were as follows for 1914 and 1915:

	Revenue 1914	Expenditure 1914	Revenue 1915	Expenditure 1915
	£	£	£	£
Perak . . . . .	2,256,143	3,308,591	4,757,081	4,997,840
Sélángor . . . . .	1,613,953	2,356,386
Negri Sembilan . . . . .	301,072	443,526
Pahang . . . . .	181,658	309,041
Total . . . . .	4,352,826	6,417,838

Leading items of revenue in 1915 were—licenses, 1,216,380*l.*; customs, 1,425,470*l.*; railways, 1,071,876*l.*; land revenue, 262,760*l.*; fees of court or office, 167,638*l.*; interest, 233,964*l.*; municipal, 192,825*l.*; and of expenditure—railways, 1,387,100*l.*; public works, 560,230*l.*; miscellaneous services, 1,561,094*l.*; personal emoluments, 874,455*l.*; other charges, 538,331*l.* Public debt nil.

The staple cultivations of the Federated Malay States may be said to be coconuts, rice, rubber, sugar, tapioca, pepper, gambier, and nipah palms. The chief industrial enterprises are the cultivation of rubber, and the mining of tin. The Krian irrigation works in Perak irrigate 70,000 acres of rice (padi) land and supply drinking water to the district. The canal is 21 miles long with 16½ miles of branches and 188½ miles of distributory channels. The total area of rubber estates of over 100 acres at the end of 1915 was 499,500 acres (44,524 tons were exported in 1915 and 62,765 tons in 1916), and coconut estates, 54,800 acres (the total acreage under coconuts was 182,000 acres). The forests produce excellent timber, besides gutta-percha, oils, resins, and canes. In 1914 the total quantity of timber and firewood taken from the forests, on which royalty was paid, was 629,087 tons; of firewood, free of royalty, for use of mining, 122,124 tons. The gross revenue of the Forest Department for 1915 amounted to 59,950*l.* The duty on the export of tin forms the largest item of the revenue of the States on the West Coast. In 1914 the tin export amounted to 49,042 tons, and in 1915 to 46,766 tons. Duty paid in 1915, 344,094*l.* In 1914, 14,272 ounces of gold, and in 1915, 18,641 ounces were produced in the Federated Malay States. Besides gold and tin, many minerals are found, including lead, iron, copper, bismuth, mercury, arsenic, manganese, plumbago, silver, zinc, and coal. The labour force engaged in mining in 1915 was about 164,000, including 157,000 Chinese.

The trade (excluding bullion and specie) was as follows in 1914 and 1915:—

	Perak	Sélángor	Negri Sembilan	Pahang	Total 1914	Total 1915
	£	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . . . .	3,376,428	4,078,211	707,983	415,238	8,607,863	7,001,859

Shipping, 1915 (excluding native craft): entered, 4,296 vessels, 1,714,837 tons; cleared, 4,290 vessels, 1,714,554 tons. Native craft, entered and cleared, 13,795 vessels, 311,763 tons.

There were in the 4 States in 1914, 2,251 miles of metalled cart roads and 1,923 miles of bridle roads and paths. The Government has made, purchased, leased, or is making, the railway systems of the whole peninsula south of the Siamese boundary, including the railway on Singapore Island. When the system is complete, there will be a main trunk line extending throughout the peninsula, diverging at Gemas in Johore into West Coast and East Coast lines, and linking up with the Southern Siamese railway system on the Perli-Siam (this section it is hoped to complete in 1917) and Kelantan-Siam boundaries respectively. The two Siamese lines converge at Ootapao, in Singora, and thence a single line continues north to Bangkok. On the West Coast, the line is now open for traffic from Singapore as far as Alor Star (in Kedah), a distance of 540 miles, and on the East Coast it is open from Singapore as far as Jerantut (in Pahang). A section of railway in Kelantan from Tumpat to Tanah Merah (32 miles) is also open for traffic. The section in Johore, extending from Johore Bahru to Gemas (120 miles), is leased from the Johore Government. The line is a metre gauge. The mail trains have sleeping saloons and restaurant cars. The total mileage open for traffic, including leased lines, was 872 miles in 1915.

There are (1915) 90 post offices and 38 other places for postal business. In 1915, 17,371,312 postal packets (registered letters, 518,248, and parcels, 121,264) were received and delivered. In 1915 there were 2,226 miles of telegraph and telephone line (9,849 miles of wire) under the Post Office department. The post and telegraph receipts (including stamp sales, excepting sales for fiscal purposes) amounted to 80,676*l*., and expenditure to 102,941*l*. Savings Banks, 7,558 depositors and 75,110*l*. deposits on December 31, 1915. The current money consists of Straits Settlements dollars with subsidiary silver and copper coins. In February, 1906, the value of the dollar was fixed at 2*s*. 4*d*. or 60 dollars = 7*l*. Currency notes and bank notes also circulate, and the sovereign is legal tender for any amount at the above rate. Weights and measures (as well as currency) are as in the Straits Settlements.

THE MALAY STATES NOT INCLUDED IN THE FEDERATION.

The Malay States not included in the Federation are five in number, namely, Johore, Kedah, Perlis, Kelantan, and Trengganu.

The relations of Johore with Great Britain are defined by a treaty dated December 11, 1885; and, by an amendment to this treaty made on May 12, 1914, the Sultan agreed to accept, and to act upon the advice of, a British officer called the General Adviser. The Sultan is assisted in the administration of the State by a State Council, on which there are two European unofficial members.

178 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—NON-FEDERATED MALAY STATES

The rights of suzerainty, protection, administration and control of the other four States were transferred from Siam to Great Britain by the Anglo-Siamese treaty of March 10, 1909. In all four States the Rulers are assisted in the administration by State Councils. In Kedah, Perlis, and Kelantan the Ruler has the assistance of a British Adviser appointed by the British Government. In Trengganu there is a British Agent, also appointed by the British Government.

In these States the currency, weights and measures are the same as in the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay States, but the old British dollar ceased to be legal tender in Trengganu in 1915. Their trade is almost entirely carried on with the Straits Settlements.

The religion of the Malays is Muhammadanism.

Johore (area 9,000 square miles, population in 1911, 180,417, of whom 100,152 were Malays, 63,325 Chinese and 5,592 Indians) lies at the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula. Births registered (1915), 6,971; deaths, 6,358. Revenue (1915), 5,790,393 dollars (customs, 1,654,608 dollars; licences, excise, &c., 2,941,242 dollars; land revenue, 322,320 dollars; land sales, 401,642 dollars); expenditure, 3,645,421 dollars. Public debt (for constructing Johore State Railway), 6,750,000 dollars. There are (1915) 5 English and 74 vernacular schools. Imports (1915), 9,163,665 dollars (foodstuffs, drinks, and narcotics, 8,577,934 dollars; raw materials, 915,278 dollars; manufactured articles, 1,580,140 dollars; coin and bullion, 124,973 dollars). Exports (1915), 28,917,800 dollars (rubber, 18,000,000 dollars; gambier, 1,900,000 dollars; pepper, 548,600 dollars; copra, 1,700,000 dollars; arecanuts, 2,460,000 dollars; tin, 2,588,000 dollars). The military force of the State consists of 400 Malay Infantry, 100 Pathan artillery, and nearly 100 bandsmen. In addition there is a Volunteer Corps of Europeans. The Police force, which is armed, consists of 556 men (1915). Up to the present only 190 miles of road have been constructed but extensions aggregating 350 miles have been planned and are now in process of execution. An efficient medical service, and five public hospitals, are maintained by the Government. Postal revenue, 1915, 2,145 dollars; expenditure 32,788 dollars. Letters, parcels, &c., received, 781,000; despatched, 547,000.

Ruler.—His Highness Sultan Ibrahim, K.C.M.G.

General Adviser.—F. G. Weld (acting).

Kedah, on the west coast of the Peninsula, and north of Province Wellesley and Perak, has an area of 3,800 square miles. The population (census 1911) is 245,986, of whom 195,411 were Malays, 33,746 Chinese, 8,135 Siamese, and 6,074 Indians. The estimated population in 1915 was 258,000. The capital is Alor Star on the Kelah River, about sixty miles from Penang by sea. Owing to the Sultan's ill-health, the head of the Government is the Regent. There are 38 Europeans in the Government service, principally in the Public Works, Survey and Police Departments. The police force, distributed in 45 stations, had a strength (December, 1915) of 583 men (principally Malays). There were at the end of 1915, 50 Government schools (about 3,500 pupils), 8 telegraph offices, and 12 post offices. An excellent telephone system extends throughout the State, the wire mileage in 1915 being 927. There is a railway to Alor Star, opened in 1915. A metalled road (39 miles) connects Alor Star with Perlis, a road (29½ miles), of which 24 are metalled, connects it with Singora frontier (Siam), and a metalled road (48 miles) is being made to connect it with Province Wellesley, 10 and 19 miles respectively having been metalled at the northern and southern ends. Another metalled road (45 miles) is being made connecting Baling with Upper Perak in one direction and with Province Wellesley in the opposite direction. 155 miles of canal were maintained in 1915. The revenue of the State for the year 1915 was 2,592,024 dollars, including Chandu monopoly, 1,051,174 dollars; export duties, 347,183 dollars; lands, 46,972 dollars; gaming farms, 244,320 dollars; liquors, 112,936 dollars, and the expenditure, 2,278,522 dollars. The principal produce of North Kedah is rice. There are large rubber, coconut, and taplock estates in South Kedah. About four or five steamers ply daily between Penang and the various ports of Kedah. Postal and telegraph revenue, 1915, 28,978 dollars; expenditure, 44,116 dollars. Articles dealt with, over 650,000.

Ruler.—H.H. Sultan Sir Abdul Hamid Halim Shah, K.C.M.G. (succeeded in 1881).

Regent.—H.H. Thunku Ibrahim.

British Adviser.—G. A. Hall (Acting).

Perlis, on the west coast of the Peninsula and north of Kedah has an area of about 300 square miles and a population (1911 census) of 32,746. Malays numbered 20,497 of the population, Chinese 1,627, and Siamese 1,888. Police force, 1915, 84 n.c.o.'s and men. Eight schools were maintained in 1915; average attendance, 453. The principal agricultural produce is rice. Rubber (output 3,465 lb. in 1915), and coconuts are grown. Cattle, 1915, numbered 7,800. There are valuable tin (output of tin-ore in 1915, 220 tons) and guano deposits. There are 12½ miles of metalled, 21 miles of gravelled road, and 14 miles of earth road in the State. The revenue for 1915 was 182,296 dollars, including Chandu monopoly, 72,844 dollars; customs, 54,106 dollars, land and mines, 30,492 dollars; and the expenditure, 175,924 dollars. Public debt, 1915, 556,838 dollars.

Ruler.—H.H. Syed Abwi.

British Adviser.—H. C. Eckhardt (Acting).

Kelantan, on the east coast of the Peninsula, has an area estimated at 5,870 square miles and a population of 286,751, including 5,355 Siamese and 9,844 Chinese. Kota Bharu, the capital, has a population of about 12,000. There are 8 Government elementary schools in the State. The High Court, the central Court, and the small Court, are at Kota Bharu, and there are two district Courts at Kuala Krai and Pasir Puteh respectively. There is a police force of 366 men (1915). The revenue of the State in 1915 amounted to 692,556 dollars (licences, excise, &c., 34,000 dollars; customs, 159,785 dollars; land revenue, 128,110 dollars), and the expenditure to 753,586 dollars. Public debt (1915), 3,447,376 dollars.

The chief industry is agriculture. About 167,000 acres were under cultivation in 1915. Chief products, rice (33,400 acres), coconuts (32,000 acres), betel-nuts, rubber (17,700 acres), resin and gharu, rattan, bamboo, pepper, tapioca, sugar-cane, and maize. A large part of the State is covered with jungle comprising numerous kinds of serviceable timber. The State supports cattle (estimated at 120,000 head), buffaloes (25,000), sheep, goats, and poultry. The mineral resources comprise gold, galena, pyrites, and tin. Extensive planting and mining concessions are held by British companies. The principal manufacturing industries are silk-weaving, boat-building, and brick-making. In 1915, total exports, 1,907,678 dollars; total imports, 1,587,771 dollars (1914, 1,891,162 and 2,721,898 dollars respectively). Chief exports, 1915: Cattle, sheep and goats, 192,712 dollars; betel-nuts, 153,508 dollars; dsh, 74,893 dollars; copra, 333,794 dollars; Para rubber, 1,032,760 dollars. Chief imports, 1915: Opium, 37,871 dollars; cattle, 33,266 dollars; dsh, 19,841 dollars; rice, 71,956 dollars; wheat and flour, 23,168 dollars; milk, 36,069 dollars; sugar, 67,264 dollars; tobacco, 83,905 dollars; salt, 15,287 dollars; gambier, 23,332 dollars; petroleum, 92,197 dollars; cotton goods, 257,726 dollars; silk goods, 65,891 dollars; timber, 62,630 dollars; cement, 14,569 dollars; machinery and metal goods, 122,561 dollars.

Tonnage of steamships upwards and outwards, 1915, 70,508 tons (106,286 tons in 1914). Over 6,000 craft are registered. There is regular steamship communication with Bangkok and Singapore. Roads extend only a few miles from the capital; communication inland is by the rivers. There is now bi-weekly connection by rail and steamer between Tampat and Kuala Lebir 60 miles up river. Kota Bharu is in direct telegraphic communication with Bangkok and Penang and possesses a telephone service. There are (1915) 4 post offices in the State.

Ruler.—H.H. Sultan Muhammad, K.C.M.G.

British Adviser.—W. Langham-Carter. (On leave.)

Trengganu, with an area of about 6,000 square miles and a population, at the census, 1911, of 151,037, lies on the east coast between Penang and Kelantan. The capital is Kuala Trengganu, with a population of 14,000. There are one Malay school and one Chinese school. Police force, 1915, about 40. There are about 11 miles of metalled cart road at the capital and a telephone exchange, but no trunk roads, railways, or telegraphs. Communication with the interior is by rivers, and good native paths. Steamers connect regularly with Singapore and Bangkok, and locally-built motor-boats maintain passenger services along the Trengganu coast. The industries are similar to those of Kelantan, and the country is of the same general character. Revenue, 1914, 106,380 dollars; 1915, 183,728 dollars, chiefly from "farmis" (95,272 dollars in 1915). and export duty on tin and wolfram (33,179 dollars in 1915). Expenditure, 1914, 178,424 dollars. 1915, 183,470 dollars. Debt, 1915, 47,463 dollars. The total imports were about 1,550,000 dollars in 1915, and total exports about 2,300,000 dollars. Chief exports, 1915: dried dsh, 711,897 dollars; tin ore, 379,335 dollars; padi, 308,000 dollars; copra, 121,938 dollars; black pepper, 148,065 dollars; Wolfram ore, 147,561 dollars. Chief imports: rice, 867,487 dollars; cotton piece goods, 125,946 dollars; raw silk, 8,425 dollars; tobacco 33,030 dollars; petroleum, 189,446 dollars; sugar, 65,185 dollars.

WEIHAIWEI.

Weihaiwei, in the Chinese province of Shantung, with the adjacent waters was by a Convention with the Chinese Government, dated July 1, 1898, leased to Great Britain. The territory leased comprises, besides the port and bay, the island of Liu Kung, all the islands in the bay, and a belt of land 10 English miles wide along the entire coast-line of the bay. The boundary has been demarcated and regulations settled for the management of frontier affairs. The area of about 285 square miles contains (1911 census) 147,177 inhabitants, including 3,000 on the island of Liu Kung. The native city of Weihaiwei is a walled town with about 2,000 inhabitants. Within the limits of the territory Great Britain has sole jurisdiction, except that within the walled city Chinese officials may exercise such jurisdiction as is not inconsistent with the defence of the territory. In addition, within a zone extending east from the meridian 121° 40' east of Greenwich, and comprising an area of 1,500 square miles, Great Britain has the right to erect fortifications or take any measures necessary for the defence of the territory, and to acquire sites necessary for water supply, communications and hospitals. There Chinese administration is not to be interfered with, but only Chinese or British troops shall be allowed. Chinese war vessels retain the right to use the waters, and within the territory such lands as may be required by Great Britain for public purposes shall be bought at a fair price.

Under an Order in Council of July 24, 1901, the territory is administered by a Commissioner. Legislation is by Ordinances. The seat of government is at Port Edward on the mainland. There is a High Court for both civil and criminal cases, subject to appeal to the Supreme Court at Hong Kong, and provision is made for courts of district magistrates. There are 3 European inspectors of police, one on the Island of Lin Kung and two on the mainland. There are 7 Chinese sergeants, 3 corporals and 85 constables (1916). In the numerous villages the headmen system is maintained. At the Government Free School there were in 1915 about 78 pupils, and about half-a-dozen Mission schools have 130 pupils. There is also a private school in which the sons of Europeans are educated. There are many Chinese schools within the territory. About 6 per cent. of the inhabitants can read and write.

Revenue is derived from (1) a land tax and a road tax; (2) junk registration, shipping dues, wine monopoly; (3) fines and miscellaneous sources. For 1914-15 the actual revenue was 109,687 dollars (10,969/),<sup>1</sup> and the actual expenditure was 148,185 dollars (14,818/). For 1915-16 the amounts were 115,662 dollars (11,566/) and 156,697 dollars (15,669/) respectively. The grant in aid for 1914-15 amounted to 5,000/; for 1915-16 to 3,500/. No grant in aid was provided for 1916-17.

The station has not been fortified, but is used as a flying naval base and as a dépôt, exercising ground, and sanatorium for the China squadron, which assembles at Weihaiwei during the summer. No troops are stationed in its territory, the Chinese regiment having been disbanded.

The leased territory, consisting of rocky hill ranges with fertile valleys, is most picturesque; it is well populated, and the inhabitants are in general well-to-do. Cereals, vegetables and fruits (apples, grapes and apricots) are grown, and oak-fed silk is produced. Seedlings of fir trees, acacias, willows, and plane trees have done well. Those of the inhabitants who are not farmers are mostly fishermen. Some rope and line making, boat building, and stone-cutting are carried on. The territory contains gold, and a mining company worked for more than three years, but operations are not now carried on. The trade is carried on by junks and steamers. In 1915, 668 steamers of 596,334 tons entered the port, exclusive of Admiralty colliers and government transports; 433 were British, 224 Japanese and Chinese coasting boats, and 11 boats of other nationalities. 3,466 junks entered and cleared as against 2,351 in 1914. The chief imports are kerosene, flour, cottons, sugar, timber, matches, beverages, provisions, coal. The chief exports are ground nuts and ground nut seeds (in 1915, 306,594 cwts were exported), ground nut oil (in 1915, 29,332 cwts. were exported) and salt fish. Weihaiwei is a duty-free port.

Good roads have been made round the coasts and into the interior of the Territory. The value of land is rising, which is a sign of the increasing prosperity of the place. There is a regular weekly mail service to and from Shanghai. Many Europeans visit the place in summer on account of the excellence of the climate, which is unsurpassed in the Far East.

AFRICA.

ASCENSION ISLAND.

ASCENSION is a small island of volcanic origin, of 34 square miles, in the South Atlantic, 700 miles N.W. of St. Helena. It is entirely under the control and jurisdiction of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty and is fortified. There is an excellent sanatorium up Green Mountain (2,820 ft.) for crews of ships visiting the island, whose health is impaired from service on the coast. There are 10 acres under cultivation, producing vegetables and fruit for the garrison. The population was estimated (August 1, 1914) at about 196, consisting of officers, their wives and families, seamen and marines, kroomen, members of the staff of the Eastern Telegraph Co., and servants. Garrison station, Georgetown, on north-west coast.

The island is the resort of the sea turtle, which come in thousands to lay their eggs in the sand annually between January and May. In 1914, 113 were taken from 500 to 800 lbs. in weight; they are stored in ponds, and eventually killed and distributed among the people, a few being sent to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty. Rabbits, wild goats, and partridges are more or less numerous on the island, which is, besides, the breeding ground of the sooty tern or "wideawake," these birds coming in vast numbers to lay their eggs about every eighth month. The island is included in the Postal Union, and is connected by the Eastern Telegraph Company with St. Helena, St. Vincent, Sierra Leone, and Buenos Aires; with England and with the Cape of Good Hope by telegraph.

BRITISH EAST AFRICA

British East Africa consists of a large area on the mainland (including the East Africa Protectorate and the Uganda Protectorate), together with the Islands of Zanzibar and Pemba. For details as to international agreements, &c., with regard to the British sphere in East Africa, see the Statesman's Year Book for 1907, pp. 216 and 217.

THE EAST AFRICAN PROTECTORATE.

Government.—The East Africa Protectorate extends from the Umba to the Juba River, and inland as far as the borders of Uganda. It includes certain mainland dominions of the Sultan of Zanzibar, viz.—a strip extending 10 miles inland along the coast from the German frontier to Kipini, the islands of the Lamu Archipelago, and an area of 10 miles round the fort of Kismayu, these territories having been leased to Great Britain for an annual rent of 17,000*l*. On April 1, 1905, it was transferred from the authority of the Foreign Office to that of the Colonial Office. By an Order in Council dated November 9, 1906, the Protectorate was placed under the control of a Governor and Commander-in-Chief. An Order in Council of October 22, 1906, constituted an Executive and a Legislative Council, the former consisting of 4 members, in addition to the Governor, the latter of 8 official and 4 unofficial members. In 1908 foreign consular jurisdiction in the Zanzibar strip of coast was transferred to the British Crown, and the whole Protectorate is now virtually a British Crown Colony. It consists of 7 provinces and a tract of territory partially organised lying to the north. The provinces are each under a provincial commissioner, and are divided into districts and sub-districts, as follows: Seyidie (capital Mombasa), comprising the districts of Vanga, Mombasa, Malindi and Voi, and the sub-districts of Rabai and Taveta; Ukamba (capital Nairobi), including the districts of Kitui, Kikuyu, and Machakos; Tanaland (capital Lamu), with districts of Lamu and Tana River; Jubaland (capital Kismayu), consisting of the districts of Kismayu and Gosha; Kenya (capital Fort Hall) with districts of Fort Hall, Nyeri, Embu, and Meru; Naivasha (capital Naivasha), including the districts of Naivasha, Eldama Ravine, Rumuruti, Turkhana, Uasin Gishu, and Southern Masai Reserve; the Nyanza Province (capital Kisumu), including the districts of Kisumu, Lumbwa, Nandi, and North and South Kavirondo, and the Northern Frontier District with headquarters at Moyale and posts at Ku lal, Uaso Nyiro, and Wajheir.

Area and Population.—The Protectorate has an area of 246,822 square miles; population estimated at 4,038,000, including 25,000 Asiatics and 5,000 Europeans and Eurasians. On the coast the Arabs and Swahilis predominate; further inland are races speaking Bantu languages, and non-Bantu tribes such as the Masai, the Somalis, and the Gallas. Mombasa is the largest town; population about 30,000, of whom 130 are Europeans. The harbour is situated on the eastern side of an island of the same name, and is the terminus of the Uganda Railway. Kilindini harbour on the south-western side of the island is the finest land-locked and sheltered harbour on the east coast of Africa and is accessible to vessels of deep draught. There is good warehouse accommodation and a pier connected with the Uganda Railway. The two principal rivers in the North are the Tana and Juba which flow into the Indian Ocean. They are both navigable for about 400 miles by shallow-draught steamers. Nairobi, the capital of the Protectorate and the headquarters of the Protectorate administration, has 14,000 inhabitants, of whom about 800 are European and 3,000 Indian. There are also 400 European farmers and 50,000 natives in the immediate neighbourhood of Nairobi.

Religion, Instruction, Justice.—The prevailing religious beliefs are Pagan; but on the coast Mohammedanism has made great progress. There are many Christian mission societies, British, French, German, Italian, Swedish, and American, two being Roman Catholic. There are Government schools at Nairobi, Mombasa, Nakuru, and Uasin Gishu. Legislation is by Ordinances made by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council. The High Court is at Mombasa and sessions are held at Nairobi, Naivasha, Kisumu, and other places. District Courts presided over by magistrates are held in each district. In native cases local ideas and customs are considered. The legal status of slavery has been abolished throughout East Africa. In the rest of the Protectorate slavery is non-existent.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for 4 years:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1911-12	729,078	772,354	1913-14	1,123,798	1,115,899
1912-13	952,525	961,178	1914-15	984,756	1,151,730

In 1914-15 the expenditure included 1,942*l.* for Special Expenditure for Magadi (71,264*l.* in 1912-13, and 43,259*l.* in 1913-14); grant-in-aid, nil. Of the revenue for 1914-15, customs inland accounted for 85,545*l.*; licences and internal revenue, 223,639*l.*; Government railways, 522,895*l.*; rents, 25,704*l.*; posts and telegraphs, 38,010*l.*; fees of court and other fees, 33,088*l.* Public debt, 569,840*l.*

Agriculture and Mining.—The agricultural products of the lowlands are essentially tropical, and include rice, maize, various native grains, casava, coconuts, etc. The cultivation of sisal hemp and Ceara rubber is now being undertaken on an extended scale. Cotton growing is receiving attention on the banks of the Juba River. Other plants of economic value are being experimented with. In the highlands almost all crops of the temperate zone are grown, viz.: oats, barley, wheat, potatoes, all European vegetables, beans, peas, linseed, etc. There is now a large acreage under wheat. Maize culture is rapidly extending, and a large export in this commodity is likely to be developed. Many coffee plantations are established. The growing of black wattle is becoming one of the principal industries of the country and suitable land commands a high price in the market. Ostrich farming has practically become an established industry. Sheep farming is proving very profitable, and many pure-bred merinos have been imported. Dairying is also proving a profitable branch of farming.

The forest area of the Protectorate extends over 3,200 square miles, of which the tropical forest covers about 183 square miles, the remainder being upland or highland, containing valuable timber trees. Near the coast are mangroves, and various rubber trees, besides ebony, copal, and other trees. The Taveta forest, on the German boundary, is supposed to contain useful timber. The Scrub forest which covers a large lowland area is capable of being turned to useful purposes. The Tana and Juba rivers are bordered by trees of tropical growth, and the Witu forest timber trees and furniture woods. But the valuable forests are within the highland area to the west and north of Nairobi. The Kenya forests of about 625 square miles contain cedar, yellow woods, camphor, jarrah, cork, iron-wood, pillar-wood, olive, and many other useful species. The Aberdare forests (about 750 square miles) contain abundance of similar trees. The Mau forest (about 1,200 square miles) is incompletely surveyed, but is known to contain many excellent timber trees. The forest on Mount Elgon (about 50 square miles) is little known.

The mineral resources are not yet fully explored, but do not appear to be very extensive. There are large deposits of natron in the Rift Valley, particularly at Lake Magadi, near the border of German East Africa. Diatomite also occurs in large quantities in the same region. Gold has been discovered in S. Kavirondo, but not in sufficient quantities to warrant mining.

Graphite and marble are found in the metamorphic rocks in various localities, and limestone is worked at various places for building purposes. Manganese is found in the sandstones near the coast; opals have been found in some of the streams on the west side of the Rift Valley, but up to now have not been considered of commercial importance.

In five years land was disposed of as follows :—

In 1914-15 the chief imports were : cotton piece goods, 269,244*l.*; grain and flour, 147,452*l.*; provisions, 140,430*l.*; sugar, 69,309*l.*; building materials, 65,996*l.*; vehicles and parts thereof, 58,537*l.*; machinery and parts thereof, 56,694*l.*; tobacco, cigars, and cigarettes, 46,589*l.*; spirits, wines, ale and beer, 64,988*l.*; oil, petroleum, 26,976*l.*; haberdashery and wearing apparel, 26,004*l.*; soap, 23,023*l.*; bags and sacks, 26,012*l.*; coal, 21,450*l.*; hardware and cutlery, 21,416*l.*; implements, agricultural, 21,132*l.*; iron and steel manufactures, 19,453*l.*; cotton manufactures, unenumerated, 17,764*l.*; brass and copper manufactures, 14,597*l.*; leather and leather manufactures, 14,660*l.*; arms and ammunition, 11,902*l.*; matches, 8,054*l.*; salt, 3,915*l.*

Chief exports, 1914-15 (including those also from Uganda, German East Africa, and the Congo): cotton, 369*l.* (mostly from Uganda); hides and skins, 273,478*l.*; grain and oil seeds, 53,232*l.*; fibres, 40,714*l.*; ivory, 21,732*l.*; cotton seeds, 30,613*l.*; coffee, 68,896*l.*; copra, 24,371*l.*

Of exports in 1914-15, 601,317*l.* went to the United Kingdom; 80,845*l.* to British Possessions; 101,665*l.* to Germany; 78,411*l.* to France; 35,895*l.* to Italy; and 50,033*l.* to the United States.

Arrivals and sailings during the year 1914-15 have been irregular, the Union Castle Line steamers having reduced their service to a minimum. The German Line, of course, ceased running. During the year a new line of steamers 'The Scandinavian East Africa Line' commenced trading with the East Africa Protectorate, bringing cargo from Norwegian, Swedish, and Danish ports. The British India line of steamers increased their service between Bombay, Mombasa, and East Africa and have now secured the whole of the carrying trade from Bombay, a large portion of which was formerly carried in German bottoms. The Clan, Ellerman, Hall and Harrison lines continue to run a joint service of cargo steamers between Liverpool and Mombasa. A fairly regular passenger service between Europe and the East coast of Africa is being kept by steamers of the Messageries Maritimes, and at more irregular dates by steamers of the British India, Union Castle, and Marittima Italiana Lines. The boats recently put on by some of the lines are of necessity of an inferior class to those to which the travelling public on this coast have been accustomed. Communication between the ports of the Protectorate is kept up by small steamers owned by Messrs. Cowasji Dinshaw Brothers at Aden.

The Mombasa-Victoria (Uganda) railway is a State railway of the Protectorate; length 618 miles, gauge 39·33 inches. The construction cost to March 31, 1915, was 6,409,481*l*. There is a telegraph along the line, and five steamers on the Lake in connection with the railway. In 1914-15, 184,505 tons of goods, exclusive of railway material, and 561,468 passengers were carried; revenue, 515,925*l*.; expenditure, 335,325*l*.

The Post Office of the Protectorate (exclusive of the Uganda Post Office, which is worked by the Protectorate Post Office) received and despatched 4,314,747 letters, packets, &c., and 245,681 telegrams during the year 1914-15. The telegraph system has 2,321 miles of wire (exclusive of Uganda). The lines connect Mombasa with Lamu (200 miles), with Kisumu (584); and Kilindini (2 miles) (double line); Kisumu with Entebbe (278) (75 miles double line in East Africa and rest in Uganda); Londiani with Eldama Ravine (22); Lumbwa with Kericho (17½); Nairobi with Nyeri and West Kenia (99); Kibigori with Nandi, Eldoret and Sergoit (64); Mazeras and Rabai (2); Magadi Junction with Machakos (16½); Kisumu, Gobwen, and Yotei (17½). A cable connects Mombasa with Zanzibar.

THE UGANDA PROTECTORATE.

The territories now comprised within this Protectorate came under British influence in 1890, and a portion of them was for a time administered by the Imperial British East African Company. In 1894 a British Protectorate was declared over the kingdom of Uganda and some of the adjoining territories. The present limits are approximately as follows:—On the north, the Uganda-Sudan boundary; on the east, a line drawn down the middle of Lake Rudolf, and along the west boundary of the East Africa Protectorate and the eastern shores of Lake Victoria; on the south, by the German frontier and by the 1st degree of south lat.; and on the west, by the eastern boundary of the Belgian Congo. Within these boundaries lie part of the Victoria Nyanza,<sup>1</sup> part of Lake Edward, the whole of Lake George, half of Lake Albert, the whole of Lake Kioga, the whole of Lake Salisbury, part of Lake Rudolf, and the course of the Nile from its exit from Lake Victoria to Nimule, where the Egyptian Sudan commences. Total area 100,119 square miles, including 16,377 square miles of water. For administrative purposes it is divided into 5 provinces: (1) the Eastern Province, comprising the districts of Busoga, Bukedi, Teso, Lango, Karamoja, and Lohor; (2) the Rudolf Province, comprising the districts of Turkwel, Turkana, and Dabossa (this province is at present only partially administered); (3) the Northern Province, comprising the districts of Bunyoro, Gulu, Chua, and West Nile; (4) the Western Province, comprising the districts Toro, Ankole, and Kigezi; and (5) Buganda Province, with islands in Lake Victoria, comprising the districts of Mengo, Masaka, Mubendi, and Entebbe. Owing to sleeping sickness the islands of Lake Victoria have been entirely depopulated, and the inhabitants, numbering about 20,000, settled on the mainland in fly-free districts.

With the exception of the Rudolf Province and the districts of Karamoja and Lohor, the whole Protectorate is now under direct administration; but the native kings or chiefs, whose rights are in some cases regulated by treaties, are encouraged to conduct the government of their own subjects. The province of Buganda is recognised as a native kingdom under a "Kabaka," with the title of "His Highness." The present Kabaka, H. H. Daudi Chua, grandson of the celebrated Mutesa, attained his majority on August 8, 1914. He is assisted in the government by three native ministers and a Lukiko, or native assembly. In Buganda, and in Bunyoro, Ankole and Toro, purely native matters are dealt with by the Lukiko, but in serious cases there is an appeal to higher courts. For Europeans and non-natives justice is administered by his Majesty's courts. The principal British representative is the Governor, who makes Ordinances for the administration of justice, the raising of revenue, and other purposes.

There are local and special courts of justice, and a High Court with civil and criminal jurisdiction. The appeal court consists of the judges of the High Courts of the East Africa Protectorate, Uganda, Nyasaland, and Zanzibar. In 1915, there were 1,216 criminal cases tried; 98 of which were cases of serious crime. There is a battalion of the King's African Rifles, under a British commandant, and an armed constabulary force, under a British Commissioner of Police and British officers. There is also a volunteer reserve of Europeans.

The total population of Uganda (year ending March 31, 1916) is given as 2,888,000, composed as follows: Natives, 2,888,000; Asiatics, 3,450; Europeans, 963 (including 272 females). Of the Europeans, the majority are British; the French come second in order. Of the white population 481 are Government servants. Among the natives approximately 600,000 belong to the intelligent, civilised Baganda, a race converted to Christianity by British and French missionaries, the Church Missionary Society having 1,428 church buildings, with an average attendance of 106,500 baptized Christians and numerous adherents. Two Catholic missionary societies have 40 churches, about 135,800 baptized Christians and 99,000 catechumens; besides a large number of places of worship under native teachers. There are Protestant schools with about 56,000 children, and Catholic with about 39,000 (1915-16). The various Missionary Societies receive grants amounting to 1,250*l.* towards scholarships, &c., for students and teachers. About 1,700,000 natives speak Bantu languages; there are a few Congo pygmies living near the Semliki river; the rest of the natives belong to the Masai, Nilotic, and Sudanese groups.

The soil is very fertile, except in the Rudolf region. Commercial products are cotton, the output of which is rapidly increasing (estimated acreage 1915-16, 92,000 acres, three-quarters of which area is in the Eastern Province; output 11 million lb.), chillies, ghee, ground nuts, coffee, ivory, hides and skins, and rubber, while arrowroot, cocoa, tea, tobacco and wheat are being experimentally cultivated. Iron is found abundantly in Bunyoro and Buganda, gold in unworkable quantities in a few places. Alum, graphite, coalshale, mica are found. Horned cattle, 1916, 700,000; sheep and goats, 1,100,000.

In 1915-16, total imports, 693,383*l*. Total exports, 593,755*l*. Principal imports, 1915-16: cotton piece goods, 233,218*l*; oils, fats, and greases, 23,151*l*; manufactured tobacco, 20,270*l*; cotton blankets, 19,272*l*; grain and flour, 18,967*l*; vehicles, cycles, &c, 16,969*l*; machinery and parts, 15,771*l*; soap, 15,019*l*. The exports are chiefly goat skins (18,260*l*. in 1915-16), hides (64,480*l*.), coffee (87,202*l*.), ghee (11,999*l*.), cotton ginned (239,483*l*.), cotton unginned (5,943*l*.), and cotton seed (9,760*l*.). The trade is chiefly with Great Britain (1915-16, imports from, 259,028*l*.), the United States, and India.

The revenue and expenditure for 4 years (ending March 31) were:—

Year	Revenue	Grant-in-aid	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Grant-in-aid	Expenditure
	£	£	£		£	£	£
1912-13	238,655	45,000	292,147	1914-15	232,831	10,000	269,213
1913-14	256,559	35,000	290,180	1915-16	287,025	—	265,072

In 1914-15 the poll-tax amounted to 165,145*l*., and customs to 69,807*l*. Debt, 296,700*l*.

The British headquarters are at Entebbe, the administrative capital of Uganda; the native capital of Uganda is at Mengo, Kampala. Nile steamers from Khartum ply to Rejaf, which is about eight days march from Nimule, the northern boundary of the Protectorate. A regular steamer service is maintained by the Uganda Railway Administration between Ki-unu, the railway terminus, and Entebbe, Port Bell, and Jinja, the principal Uganda ports on Lake Victoria; the service to German East African ports at the south of the Lake has been discontinued since the outbreak of war. The Busoga Railway Marine, which, with the Busoga Railway, is controlled by the Uganda Railway, deals with the traffic on Lake Kioga. There are four steamers and a large number of lighters on that waterway. An additional steamer and subsidiary craft ply on Lake Albert and the Nile between Butiaba and Nimule. The Busoga Railway, of the same gauge as the Uganda Railway, 62 miles in length, has been constructed from Jinja (on Lake Victoria) to Namasagali, a point on the Nile below the rapids. It was formally opened for business on January 1, 1912. This railway was built to deal with the cotton output in the regions round Lake Kioga, and connects that lake with Lake Victoria. The railway from Port Bell to Kampala, 8 miles in length, was practically completed by March 31, 1915, and was declared open for traffic on June 1, 1915. There is a fleet of government motor vans.

In June, 1912, East Africa received a loan of 500,000*l*. from the Imperial Government. Uganda's share amounts to 125,000*l*. and is being devoted to the construction of the railway Kampala-Port Bell, and to the improvement of communications in the Eastern Province, with a view to dealing more effectively with cotton transport.

A mail service by relays of runners radiates from Entebbe, and is being extended. Money and postal orders and parcel post exchange systems are working in most districts. The Sudan-Egyptian telegraph and telephone system is established to Rejaf. The Uganda telegraph line is extended to Wadelai and to Nimule, 89 miles from Rejaf. The length of telegraph line in the Protectorate is 1,277 miles, with 22 telegraph offices and 14 telephone stations (1915).

The currency is based on the Indian rupee, and consists of silver rupees with a subsidiary coinage of silver 50 and 25 cent pieces, and nickel 10 cent, 5 cent, 1 cent, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  cent pieces. British sovereigns and E. Africa Government currency notes of 500, 100, 50, 20, 10, and 5 rupees are also in circulation. New cental coins were issued during 1907-08. The Savings Bank had 6,332½ deposits and 408 depositors on March 31, 1915. The National Bank of India (Limited) has branches at Entebbe, Kampala, Jinja, and the Standard Bank of South Africa has opened a branch at Kampala. In 1912 the Imperial standards of weights and measures were introduced.

ZANZIBAR PROTECTORATE.

Situation and Area.—The Island of Zanzibar is situated in 6° S. latitude, and is separated from the mainland by a channel 22½ miles across at its narrowest part. It is the largest coralline island on the African coast, being 48 miles long by 15 broad, and having an area of 640 square miles. To the north-east, at a distance of some 30 miles, lies the Island of Pemba in 5° S. latitude. It is smaller than Zanzibar, being 40 miles long by 10 broad, and having an area of 380 square miles.

Constitution and Government.—The Sultan, Seyyid Khalifa bin Harub, K.C.M.G. (Hon.) (born 1879), succeeded on the abdication of his brother-in-law, Ali bin Hamoud bin Mahomed, December 9, 1911. The Government is administered by a High Commissioner and a British Resident, who are appointed by commissions under His Majesty's Sign Manual and Signet, and exercise their functions under the Zanzibar Order-in-Council, 1914.

Legislation consists of certain British and Indian Statutes and also of Decrees of His Highness the Sultan, which latter are binding on all persons when countersigned by the British Resident under the Order-in-Council.

There is a Council for the Protectorate, which exercises functions of an advisory and consultative nature, and consists of his Highness the Sultan as President, the British Resident as Vice-President, and three official and three unofficial members.

It was during the sixteenth century that the Arabs of the East Coast sought the assistance of the Imams of Muscat to drive out the Portuguese. On the ruins of the Portuguese power arose that of the Imams of Muscat. The allegiance to Muscat, however, was of a more or less nominal character until Seyyid Said, after having subdued his enemies on the mainland, transferred his capital to Zanzibar in 1832. On his death in 1856 the African possessions were, under an arbitration by Lord Canning (then Governor-General of India), declared independent of the parent state. In 1890 the supremacy of the British interests in the Island was recognised by France and Germany, and it was declared a British Protectorate in accordance with conventions by which Great Britain waived all claims to Madagascar in favour of France and ceded Heligoland to Germany. In the same year the mainland possessions which extended over the coast of East Africa, Warsheikh in 3° N. latitude to Tungbi Bay 10° 42' S. latitude, were ceded to Italy, Great Britain, and Germany, respectively, Great Britain and Italy paying rent for the territories under their protection, while Germany acquired the Sultan's rights by the payment of a sum of 200,000*l.* At a later date Italy also acquired these rights by payment of a sum of 144,000*l.* In 1891, a regular Government was formed for Zanzibar with a British representative as first minister. In 1906 the Imperial Government assumed more direct control over the Protectorate and re-organised the Government. In 1913 it was decided to transfer the control of the Protectorate from the Foreign Office to the Colonial Office, the transfer formally taking place on April 20, 1914.

Population, Religion, &c.—The population of Zanzibar and Pemba, according to the Census of 1910, was 197,199. Zanzibar, 114,069; Pemba, 83,130. The registered birth rate in 1915 was 19·7 per 1,000 as compared with 11·3 in 1914; the registered death rate, 21·2 per 1,000 against 20·5 in 1914. The Arabs, about 10,000, are the principal landlords and employers of labour. The black population is mostly Swahili, but there are representatives of nearly every African tribe. There are nearly 200 Europeans most of whom are English: about 10,000 British Indian subjects, through whose hands almost the whole trade of East Africa passes. Zanzibar town has a population of 35,000.

Most of the natives are Mohammedans (Sunnis of the Shafi school), the Sultan and relatives are of the Ibadhi sect. There are 3 Christian Missions: The Universities Mission to Central Africa (Church of England), the Catholic Mission (Roman Catholic), and the Friends' Industrial Mission.

There are Government schools mainly for Moslems, with a course of instruction extending over seven years. Education is voluntary and free. There are a number of mission high schools.

There are two Government hospitals, one for Europeans and one for natives, in Zanzibar, and one in Pemba. There is also a hospital at the Universities Mission.

Justice.—For the administration of justice in Zanzibar, one Court, his Britannic Majesty's, consisting of a Judge and one or more Assistant Judges, deals with all actions to which a British, or British protected, person or the subject of a foreign Power is a party, and others, the Sultan's Local Courts, deal with cases in which the subjects of the Sultan are alone concerned. Police force 559 in 1915. The total number of convictions in 1915 was 3,585 (3,564 in 1914).

Appeal lies to the High Court of Bombay, many of the cases tried being cases affecting British Indians, in whose hands is a large proportion of the trade of Zanzibar. The British Court has also certain Admiralty jurisdiction by virtue of the Zanzibar Order in Council, 1914.

The Sultan's Courts, under the general superintendence of H.M. Judge, administer justice in the town of Zanzibar by two European Magistrates assisted by Arab Kathis. In Pemba, and the country districts, criminal or civil cases are tried by a Magistrate or a District Commissioner, or Assistant District Commissioner. The final appeal, in all cases, lies to the British Judge sitting as Sultan's Judge.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for 6 years were as follows:—

Year	Revenue from Customs	Total Revenue (excluding loans)	Expenditure	Year	Revenue from Customs	Total Revenue (excluding loans)	Expenditure
	£	£	£		£	£	£
1910	107,077	161,705	192,925	1913	167,363	275,126	248,366
1911	109,067	237,422	207,951	1914	182,448	231,701	213,001
1912	140,814	242,498	334,679	1915	162,284	267,405	208,968

Besides Customs, the chief sources of revenue in 1915 were: interest on investments, 15,878*l.*; railway and electricity department, 12,559*l.*; agricultural department, 17,076*l.*; court fees, fines, etc., 27,205*l.*; rent, British East Africa, 11,000*l.* The chief heads of expenditure in 1915 were: public works department, 24,487*l.*; civil list, 13,645*l.*; police, 14,343*l.*; railway and electricity department, 13,105*l.*; judicial department, 12,099*l.*; agricultural department, 13,602*l.*

Public debt at end of 1915, 100,000*l.*; sinking fund, 42,105*l.*

Production and Industry.—The clove industry is by far the most important in the Protectorate, the Islands of Zanzibar and Pemba yielding the bulk of the world's supply. It is estimated that there are in both islands about 60,000 acres under cloves and about 5½ million trees in bearing. The large plantations are chiefly owned by Arabs, but many natives possess small holdings. The coconut industry ranks next in importance after cloves, the conditions in both islands being favourable to the growth of the tree and its nut-bearing properties. It is estimated that there are about 45,000 acres under cultivation and 2½ million trees in both islands. The export of copra, which is steadily increasing, amounted in 1915 to 10,286 tons. Much is produced by the small grower or trader, neither of whom possesses proper drying facilities, with a result that the quality of the product compares unfavourably with that of Cochin and Ceylon.

Commerce.—The total imports, exports, and shipping for 5 years, were:—

Years	Imports (Including bullion and specie)	Exports (Including bullion and specie)	Shipping entered (gross tonnage)
			British	Total
	£	£	Tons	Tons
1911	1,179,699	1,193,139	498,182	1,288,012

Imports into the United Kingdom from Zanzibar (British Board of Trade Returns) 1915, 216,561*l.*, including 197,129*l.* spices; 1,190*l.* rubber; and 1,919*l.* gum. Exports of British domestic products to Zanzibar, 122,201*l.*, including 54,694*l.* cottons, and 6,073*l.* iron and steel manufactures.

Shipping and Communications, &c.—The port of Zanzibar is one of the finest in Africa and was for long a main centre of commerce between India, Arabia, and the mainland. Of late years, however, the importance of Zanzibar as a port of transhipment and distributing centre has largely decreased owing to the development of the mainland, to the opening up of the coast ports to direct steamship service with Europe, and to the transfer to Aden of the seat of trade with the Benadir Coast. Recent figures, nevertheless, tend to indicate that the Island will continue by reason of its geographical position to retain control of the local traffic.

The British India Steam Navigation Company and the Union Castle* Steamship Company maintain monthly services between London-Zanzibar-Durban and Southampton-Zanzibar-Durban respectively, the Clan-Elleman-Harrison Line between Glasgow-Liverpool-Zanzibar-Beira (cargo only) and the Compagnie des Messageries Maritimes between Marseilles-Zanzibar-Madagascar. The British India Steam Navigation Company also maintain a service twice a month between Bombay-Zanzibar-Durban, and there are local services between Zanzibar-Mombasa-Aden and the Benadir Coast. The Government possesses two steamers which maintain regular weekly connection with Pemba.

Ocean-going shipping dealt with in 1915, 545,971 tons; coastwise, 61,318 tons; dhows, 42,755 tons.

There is cable communication with Europe either via Aden or via Durban.

There are 75 miles of roads throughout the Island of Zanzibar suitable for motor traffic. A light railway runs north from the Town to Bububu seven miles distant.

The Government maintains wireless stations in Zanzibar and Pemba and a telephone system in the town of Zanzibar, which is connected with the District and Agricultural stations in the country. There are seven post offices in the two islands. Total number of articles dealt with at the post office in 1915 was 543,413 (305,188 letters); in 1914, 449,243 (250,000 letters). The Post Office Savings Bank was started in 1907. At the end of 1915 there were 1,004 depositors, with 5,097*l.* on deposit.

The British Indian rupee is universally current; currency notes of 5 to 500 rupees are in circulation. Gold coins from the British Mint or any branch are legal tender at the rate of 15 rupees to 1*l.* A frasila (or frasila) of cloves is equivalent to 35*lbs.* av.

MAURITIUS.

Constitution and Government.

Mauritius, acquired by conquest in 1810, was formally ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris of 1814. Under Letters Patent of 1885, 1901, 1904, and 1912, partially representative institutions have been established. The government of the Colony, with its dependencies, Rodrigues, Diégo Garcia, &c., is vested in a Governor, aided by an Executive Council, consisting of the officer in command of His Majesty's troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Procureur-General, the Receiver-General, and of such other persons holding office in the service of the Government of the Colony as the Governor, through instructions from the Secretary of State, may from time to time appoint. There is also a Council of Government, consisting of the Governor and twenty-seven members, ten being elected under a moderate franchise, eight ex-officio, and nine nominated by the Governor. The official councillors comprise the four Executive members, the Collector of Customs, the Protector of Immigrants, the Director of Public Works and Surveys, and the Director of the Medical and Health Department.

Governor of Mauritius.—Sir H. Hesketh Bell, K.C.M.G.; salary, Rs. 50,000 (one Rupee = 1s. 4d.).

NYASALAND PROTECTORATE (BRITISH).

The Nyasaland (until 1907 British Central Africa) Protectorate, constituted on May 14, 1891, lies along the southern and western shores of Lake Nyasa, and extends towards the Zambezi. It is administered under the Colonial Office by the Governor and Commander-in Chief, assisted by an Executive and a Legislative Council, both consisting of nominated members, and the Governor having the right of veto (Order in Council of September 4, 1907). Area, 39,573 square miles, divided into fifteen districts, each administered by a Resident and his assistants. Population, 1916, 785 Europeans (mostly in the Shire Highlands), 379 Asiatics, and 1,140,000 natives. The chief settlement is Blantyre, in the Shire Highlands; others are Zomba (the seat of Government), Chiromo, Port Herald, Mlanje, Limbe, Liwonde; on Lake Nyasa are Fort Johnston, Kota-Kota, Bandawe, Chintechi, Nkata, Likoma, and Karonga. Good roads are being made in all directions, and life and property are safe. There are no Government schools, native education being undertaken by various missionary societies. Eleven Christian missions are at work; in 1915-16 there were 2,065 schools, with about 140 European teachers, 131,612 pupils and 85,127 in average attendance. Ten of the missions divide 1,000£ Government aid for their schools. In 1915-16, 4,216 offences were reported, 30 being cases of serious crime.

Within the Shire province coffee is cultivated; in 1912-13, 194,704 lbs.; 1913-14, 192,075 lbs.; in 1914-15, 99,477 lbs.; and in 1915-16, 106,086 lbs. were exported. Tobacco exported, after local demands were supplied, in 1912-13, 2,262,545 lbs.; 1913-14, 3,763,014 lbs.; in 1914-15, 3,308,948 lbs.; and in 1915-16, 3,706,203 lbs. The area under tobacco in 1916 was 7,484 acres. Cotton cultivation is very promising. Crop in 1912-13, 3,345,283 lbs.; in 1913-14, 2,401,142 lbs.; in 1914-15, 2,648,608 lbs.; and in 1915-16, 3,065,248 lbs. Tea-growing is tried on estates aggregating about 4,141 acres; in 1912-13, 67,726 lbs.; in 1913-14, 116,074 lbs.; in 1914-15, 166,248 lbs.; and in 1915-16, 288,341 lbs. were exported. Cattle (1916), 16,497; sheep, 2,142; goats, 951; pigs, 655; horses, mules, and asses, 226, mostly belonging to the natives.

There are military, volunteer reserve, and civil police forces. There is a Marine Transport Department on the Upper Shiré River and on Lake Nyasa, consisting of three vessels. For ordinary traffic there are small steamers, besides small sailing vessels.

There is communication with the coast at Chinde by river steamers. Chinde is situated on the only navigable mouth of the Zambezi, and the Portuguese Government has granted a small piece of land, called the 'British Concession,' where goods in transit for British Central Africa are free of customs duty, and in addition a large area for residential purpose styled 'the Extra Concession.'

There are 26 post offices through which, in 1915-16, 2,174,405 postal packets passed. A postal savings bank was opened on July 1, 1911. Depositors at end of 1915, 314; deposits, 9,474*l.* A railway, of 8 ft. 6 in. gauge, from the Portuguese boundary on the western bank of the Shiré to Blantyre has been constructed (129 miles) and an extension made to the Zambezi River. There is a telegraph line through the Protectorate to Tanganyika and Ujiji connecting with Cape Town, with a branch to Fort Jameson. At Zomba there is a water-power electric light installation which provides for the whole settlement.

At Blantyre there is a branch of the Standard Bank of South Africa.

The principal export in 1915 was fibre and tow, 11,101*l.*

Savings-bank deposits on December 31, 1915, 8,753*l.*, belonging to 188 depositors.

Fruit trees, Norfolk pines, eucalyptus, and cedars flourish in St. Helena. Cattle do well, but there is no outside market for the meat. The flax (phormium) industry is now established, and a Government mill commenced operations in 1908. Two private mills are also working. Large areas of land are now under flax. A lace-making industry has been started. The total and British tonnage entered (the same tonnage also cleared) :—

Tonnage (gross)	1911	1912	1913	1914	1915
Total	187,441 <sup>1</sup>	188,336	210,609	896,956	200,393
British	184,735	185,930	199,004	—	—

The Post Office traffic from St. Helena in 1915, 39,569 letters and post-cards, besides books, papers and parcels. The Eastern Telegraph Company's cable connects St. Helena with Cape Town and with St. Vincent. There are telephone lines, with 40 miles of wire.

St. Helena is an Admiralty coaling station. About two of the three cruisers of which the Cape of Good Hope Squadron consists visit St. Helena every year.

Tristan da Cunha, a small group of islands in the Atlantic, half-way between the Cape and S. America, in 37° 6' S. lat. 12° 1' W. long. Until the death of Napoleon I. they were occupied by a garrison. Besides Tristan da Cunha and Gough's Island, there are Inaccessible and Nightingale Islands, the former two and the latter one mile long, and a number of rocks. The population consists mainly of the families of shipwrecked sailors and wives from St. Helena, and numbered 102 in 1916. There is no form of government among them. Education is almost totally neglected. On the island potatoes grow well, but grain crops are destroyed by rats. Apple and peach trees are productive. Bullocks, sheep, and geese are reared. Fish are plentiful in the waters.

The surplus funds invested on December 31, 1915, amounted to £12,951.

Chief items of revenue, 1915: Customs, 11,195*l*.; Crown lands, 1,737*l*.; licence, excise, and internal revenue, 3,908*l*.; taxes, 3,507*l*.

Chief products, coconuts (over 12,000 acres under cultivation: 25,800,000 coconuts produced in 1915), and vanilla (2½ tons exported in 1915); about 184,000 plants of Para rubber are growing; on some islands mangrove-bark is collected and phosphate deposits are worked. Fishing is actively pursued, chiefly for local supply, but will probably be extended.

Imports, 1915, excluding specie, 73,833*l*.; specie, 2,000*l*.; 1914, 91,018*l*. and 5,360*l*. respectively. Exports, 1915, 92,468*l*.; specie, 1,530*l*.; 1914, 141,060*l*. and nil. respectively. Principal imports, 1915: Rice and other foodstuffs, 37,000*l*.; cotton goods, 11,100*l*.; haberdashery, 2,980*l*.; spirits, beer, and wine, 4,700*l*. The chief exports are copra, vanilla, coconut oil, soap, guano, cinnamon bark, tortoise-shell, calipre, and essential oils. Guano exported, 1915, 3,920*l*.; copra, 59,617*l*.; vanilla, 1,749*l*. Total imports from United Kingdom, 1915, 18,457*l*.; India, 33,361*l*.; exports to United Kingdom, 16,070*l*.

Shipping entered and cleared (1915), 231,541 tons, of which 90,200 tons were British, and the remainder foreign. The Messageries Maritimes Steamers between Marseilles and Mauritius call monthly; subsidy 3,033*l*. a year, paid by the Colony. The British India steamers call once a month from Bombay on their way to Mombassa. There is fairly regular communication between the islands.

There is a good road system in Mahé, and further road-making is in progress in Mahé and in Praslin and La Digue. In 1915 the post office despatched and received 185,000 letters and postcards, 100,000 news-

SOMALILAND PROTECTORATE.

The Somali Coast from Lahadu, west of Zeyla, to Bandar Ziyada 49° E. long., is administered by a Commissioner. After 1884, when Egyptian control ceased, the territory was administered by the Government of India, but was taken over by the Foreign Office on October 1, 1898, and was transferred to the Colonial Office on April 1, 1905.

The area is about 68,000 square miles; population about 300,000 Moham-medan, and entirely nomadic, except on the coast, where considerable towns have sprung up during the British occupation. By an arrangement with Italy in 1894 the limits of the British Protectorate were defined; but in 1897, by an arrangement with Abyssinia, a fresh boundary as required by that country was determined, and about 15,000 square miles were ceded to Abyssinia. An agreement for the regulation of Anglo-Italian relations in Somaliland was concluded on March 19, 1907.

The chief town, Berbera, had, at the 1911 census, 30,000 inhabitants in the trading season; Zeyla, 7,000; and Bálhar, 7,300. There are 3 Government schools: average attendance, 1915-16, 148. Police, 228 officers and men on March 31, 1916. Convictions in 1915-16, 449. The revenue in 1915-16 was 29,270*l.* (23,831*l.* in 1914-15), mainly from customs duties (26,021*l.* in 1915-16); the expenditure, 124,467*l.* (113,288*l.* in 1914-15). The grant in aid for 1915-16, 82,000*l.* (87,000*l.* in 1914-15). Imports (1915-16), Zeyla, Berbera, Bálhar Karam, and Heis, 211,781*l.* (202,883*l.* in 1914-15); exports (1915-16), 190,596*l.* (176,226*l.* in 1914-15). Bullion and specie are excluded. The imports are chiefly rice, textiles, dates, sugar, and specie; the exports, skins and hides, gum and resins, ghee, cattle and sheep, and specie. Tonnage entered and cleared in 1915-16, 142,521 tons, of which 129,203 tons were British (in 1914-15, 176,439 tons and 160,584 tons respectively). The rupee is the basis of the currency, and is of the same value as in India. Bank of England and Government of India notes are also in circulation. Transport is by camels; there are no porters. In 1908 the length of telegraph line was 200 miles, but since the withdrawal to the coast the Protectorate maintained only 40 miles length of telegraph line from Berbera to Búlhar. In 1914-15 a telegraph line from Berbera to Sheikh was constructed, a distance of 45 miles. There are in addition wireless telegraph stations at Berbera, Burao, and Búlhar, and a wireless station in Aden is also maintained from Protectorate funds.

The protection of the coast towns of Berbera, Bulhar, and Zeyla is entrusted to small garrisons of Indian troops, supplemented by a native police force. In March, 1910, British posts were withdrawn from the interior, and a policy of strict coastal concentration was then adopted. This policy having disappointed expectations, a Camel Constabulary 150 strong was raised at the end of 1912 to check intertribal fighting. It was later decided to increase the forces of the Protectorate in order to preserve the necessary grazing grounds of the friendly natives from dervish attack and to maintain peace among the tribes living in the west. The strength of the Indian contingent has accordingly been raised to 400 rank and file, and the Camel Constabulary re-constructed with an establishment of 9 officers and 500 men.

SOUTH AFRICA.

BASUTOLAND.

Basutoland, an elevated but rugged plateau, forms an irregular parallelogram on the north-east of the Cape of Good Hope Province. The provinces of the Orange Free State, Natal, and the Cape of Good Hope form its boundaries. Area, 11,716 square miles. The territory, which is well watered and has a fine climate, is stated to be the best grain-producing country in South Africa, and the abundant grass enables the Basutos to rear large herds of cattle.

Basutoland has been directly under the authority of the Crown since 1834. The Paramount Chief is Griffith, brother of Letsie, the late chief. Griffith was installed on April 11, 1913. The territory is governed by a Resident Commissioner under the direction of the High Commissioner for South Africa, the latter possessing the legislative authority, which is exercised by proclamation. The country is divided into seven districts, namely: Maseru, Leribe, Mohale's Hoek, Berea, Mafeteng, Quthing, and Qacha's Nek. Each of the districts is subdivided into wards, mostly presided over by hereditary chiefs allied to the Moshesh family.

In 1891 the population consisted of 578 Europeans and 218,324 natives. The census of 1911 gave a total of 404,507 natives and 1,396 Europeans. European settlement is in general prohibited, and is more or less limited to the few engaged in trade, government, and missionary work. Maseru, the capital and largest town, has a population of (approximately) 1,200 natives and 300 Europeans.

The productions are wool, wheat, mealies, and Kaffir corn. There are indications of iron and copper, and coal has been found and is used in some parts. Stock, &c. (1911): 433,000 cattle, 86,600 horses, 22,800 ploughs, 1,722 waggons.

There are 286 elementary schools with 22,410 pupils at the end of December, 1915; the average attendance in all schools and institutions in 1915 was 17,167; expenditure in connection with education amounted during the year ended March 31, 1916, to 17,632*l*. There are some Normal and Industrial schools (aided). There is also a large and well-fitted Government native industrial school at Maseru.

The police force numbers (1915) 13 white officers and 9 European constables, 3 native officers, and 287 men (natives), also 170 special native police for Border work.

The imports consist chiefly of blankets, ploughs, clothing, iron and tin ware, and groceries, and the exports of stock, grain, wool, &c. Basutoland is in the South African Customs Union, and separate statistics are not available.

The currency is exclusively British. The revenue arises mainly from the Post Office, native tax, licences, and customs rebate from neighbouring territories. Under the new Native Tax Law every adult male native pays 1*l*. per annum, and if he has more than one wife by native custom he pays 1*l*. per annum for his wives up to a maximum of 3*l*.

There are no navigable waterways, the rivers being low in winter and generally flooded in summer. Bridges have been built over the Caledon river at Maseru, Peka and Ficksburg, over the Hlotse river in Leribe district, over the Little Caledon river near Maseru, over the Mekhaleng river near Mohale's Hoek, over the Phutiatsana River near Teyateyaneng, over the Khomokhoana River near Hlotse Heights, and over the Tlametlu and Tsoaing rivers. The roads in the country are now in fair condition for any kind of transport.

There are telegraph offices at the various magistracies in connection with the systems of the Cape Province and Orange Free State.

A railway built by the C.S.A.R., 16 miles, connects Maseru with the Bloemfontein-Modderpoort line at Marseilles Station.

BECHUANALAND PROTECTORATE.

The Bechuanaland Protectorate comprises the territory lying between the Molopo River on the south and the Zambezi on the north, and extending from the Transvaal Province and Matabeleland on the east to South-West Africa. Area is about 275,000 square miles; population, according to the census taken on the 7th May, 1911, 125,350, of whom 1,692 were Europeans. The most important tribes are the Bamangwato (35,000), under the chief Khama, whose capital is Serowe (population 17,000) 40 miles west of the railway line at Palapye Road; the Bakhatla (11,000) under Lenchwe; the Bakwena (13,000) under Sechele; the Bangwaketse (18,000) under Kgosi motse, acting paramount chief during minority of Bathoen, a boy of nine years of age, the eldest son of the late chief Gaseitsiwe; the Batavana under Mathibe; and the Bamalets (4,500) under Baitlotle, who is acting during the minority of Seboko, the eldest son of the late chief Mokgosi. In 1885, the territory was declared to be within the British sphere; in 1889 it was included in the sphere of the British South Africa Company, but was never administered by the company; in 1891 a Resident Commissioner was appointed, and in 1895, on the annexation of the Crown Colony of British Bechuanaland to the Cape of Good Hope, new arrangements were made for the administration of the Protectorate, and special agreements were made in view of the extension of the railway northwards from Mafeking. Each of the chiefs rules his own people as formerly, under the protection of the King, who is represented by a Resident Commissioner, acting under the High Commissioner. The headquarters of the Administration are in Mafeking, in the Cape Province, where there is a reserve for Imperial purposes, with ample buildings. There are assistant commissioners at Gaborones in the southern, and Francistown in the northern portion of the Protectorate. There is a tax of 1*l.* on each hut. Licences for the sale of spirits are granted only at certain railway stations.

Cattle-rearing and agriculture (production of maize and Kafir corn) are the chief industries. Cattle numbered on the 7th of May, 1911, 323,900 head, sheep and goats, 358,000. During the year 1915-16 17,664 head of cattle were exported for slaughter, the majority going to the Johannesburg market. The police force consists of 79 Europeans and 63 Basutos, and 100 local natives as messengers. Education is provided (there were 7 European and 37 native schools, 1915-16), with Government assistance (1,320*l.* being granted in 1915-16), in the London Missionary Society (Church of England), Dutch Reformed Church, and other schools. There are schools for Europeans, subsidised by the Government, at Francistown, Serowe and Magalapye, and at Lobatsi, Hildavale and Pitsani. Total Government expenditure on education, 1915-16, 1,426*l.*

Gold (5,024 oz.) and silver (1,583 oz.) to the total value of 20,349*l.*, were mined in 1915-16.

Revenue and expenditure for five years:—

Revenue exceeded expenditure for the first time in 1915-16.

Chief items of revenue, 1915-16 : hut-tax, 39,854*l.* ; customs, 15,066*l.* ; posts, 6,891*l.* ; and licences, 3,488*l.* Chief items of expenditure, 1915-16 : Police, 34,562*l.* ; Resident Commissioner, 4,049*l.* ; district administration, 5,765*l.* ; public works, 5,450*l.* ; posts, 2,710*l.* There has been no Imperial grant-in-aid since 1911-12, when the grant amounted to 10,000*l.*

There is no public debt. Excess of assets over liabilities on April 1, 1916, 11,844*l.*

The Protectorate was within the South African Customs Union, and when the Union of South Africa was completed, an agreement was made with the Union Government under which duty on all dutiable articles imported into the Protectorate is collected by the Union Customs Department and paid into the Union Treasury, a lump sum representing a certain portion of the annual Customs Revenue of the Union being paid over to the Protectorate. Under this arrangement figures relating to imports and exports are not available.

The telegraph from the Cape of Good Hope to Rhodesia passes through the Protectorate and is owned by the British South Africa Company. Similarly the railway extending northwards from the Cape of Good Hope traverses the Protectorate. It is the property of the Rhodesia Railways, Limited. In the Protectorate are 11 post offices ; receipts, in 1915-16, 6,891*l.* ; expenditure, 2,710*l.* Posted during year, 214,854 letters, 6,760 postcards, 5,096 newspapers, 7,436 book packets, samples, and circulars, and 988 parcels.

The currency is British money. There is no bank in the Protectorate.

RHODESIA.

UNDER the title of Rhodesia is included the whole of the region extending from the Transvaal Province northwards to the borders of the Congo State and German East Africa, bounded on the east by Portuguese East Africa, Nyasaland, and German East Africa, and on the west by the Congo State, Portuguese West Africa, and Bechuanaland. The whole territory is under the administration of the British South Africa Company, which holds a Royal Charter dated October 29, 1889. The region south of the Zambezi is called Southern Rhodesia ; that north of the Zambezi, formerly divided into two parts, called, respectively Barotseland or North-Western Rhodesia, and North-Eastern Rhodesia, is now one territory known as Northern Rhodesia.

The administrative system of the Company in Southern Rhodesia is prescribed by the Orders in Council of 1898, 1903, 1909, 1911, and 1915. To assist the Company's Administrator there is an Executive Council consisting of not less than three members appointed for three years by the Company with the approval of the Secretary of State.

The Legislative Council consists of the Administrator (president), six nominees of the Company approved by the Secretary of State, and twelve members elected by the registered voters. The duration of each Legislative Council is three years, unless it be sooner dissolved. Ordinances passed by the Legislative Council when assented to by the High Commissioner take effect immediately, but within a year may be disallowed by the Secretary of State. There is a Resident Commissioner appointed by the Secretary of State; he has a seat on both the Executive and Legislative Councils, but without a vote. For the administration of justice there is a High Court with civil and criminal jurisdiction. In the districts there are Magistrates' Courts. There is a chief Native Commissioner, with subordinate Superintendents of Divisions, Native Commissioners and Assistant Native Commissioners, and, except with respect to arms, ammunition, and liquor, natives and Europeans are under the same conditions. Land has been set apart for tribal settlements, the mineral rights being reserved to the Company. There is in Rhodesia about 95 million acres of unalienated land (excluding native reserves), about half being in Southern Rhodesia. The British South Africa Company has recently made a free grant of 500,000 acres towards a scheme for the settlement of ex-service men on the land after the war.

Southern Rhodesia has an area of 148,575 square miles. According to the census taken on May 7, 1911, the European population was 23,606, but at the end of 1914 it was estimated to be about 31,500. The native population of Southern Rhodesia is estimated at about 750,000. There were also 2,912 Asiatics and other coloured persons. The country is rich in gold reefs and other minerals, and is well adapted for agriculture and European settlement. Live stock, 1914: cattle, 748,000; sheep, 324,000; goats, 675,000.

A Land Bank has been established which makes loans to settlers on easy terms of repayment, for the purpose of improving and developing their agricultural holdings.

The chief towns are Salisbury (the capital of Southern Rhodesia), Bulawayo, Victoria, Umtali, Gwelo, Enkeldoorn, Melssetter, Hartley, Selukwe, Gwanda, and Gatooma.

Numerous companies have been formed with the purpose of developing land and minerals in Southern Rhodesia, while the principal feature of the gold-mining industry of recent years has been the large increase in the number of properties worked on a small scale. The number of separate properties actually producing gold in 1914 was 496; and in 1915, 489. The total output of gold from 1890 to December 31, 1915, was 8,173,014 ounces, valued at 32,685,432*l*. The output of minerals in 1915 was: gold, value, 3,823,166*l*. (gold 1910, 3,895,000*l*.); silver, 185,233 ounces; copper, 3,517 tons; chrome ore, 60,581 tons; lead, 28 tons; coal, 469,763 tons; asbestos, 2,010 tons. Small amounts of wolframite, scheelite, antimony, arsenic, and iron stone, together with 10,835.13 carats of diamonds, were also produced.

machinery, 145,811*l.*; railway material, 65,680*l.*; specie, 80,810*l.* The value of the exports of South African produce was 827,283*l.*, the chief being: maize, 123,180*l.*; chrome ore, 143,510*l.*; copper, 324,224*l.*; tobacco, 41,396*l.* Imports of merchandise from United Kingdom, 1915, 1,042,787*l.*

The Rhodesian Railway system begins at Vryburg in the Cape Colony, and extends northwards to the Congo State border, a through communication from Cape Town to the Congo border (2,149 miles). Salisbury is connected by rail with Bulawayo (via Hartley and Gwelo), a distance of 301 miles. A line runs from Salisbury via Umtali to Beira, a distance of 374 miles. There is a railway from Salisbury to Sinoia via Banket Junction and the Eldorado Mine, a distance of 82 miles. Other branch lines are: Bulawayo to West Nicholson, 120 miles; Gwelo to Fort Victoria (via Umtali), 123 miles; Salisbury to Shamva, 86 miles; Gwelo to Selukwe, 23 miles. The total mileage of the Rhodesian Railway Systems (including the Beira Railway) at the end of 1915, was 2,472 miles.

On December 31, 1915, there were in Southern Rhodesia 105 post offices, 42 of which are money order offices. During the year ended December 31, 1915, 5,597,384 letters and post-cards were despatched. The total number of newspapers, books, and parcels despatched was 1,689,504, and registered articles 86,892. The postal revenue for the same year was 44,317*l.*, and the expenditure, 39,040*l.* Telegraphic revenue, 42,013*l.*, expenditure, 35,372*l.*

On January 1, 1905, a Post Office Savings Bank was established, and on December 31, 1915, the deposits amounted to 143,810*l.* to the credit of 5,820 depositors.

On December 31, 1915, the mileage of the Rhodesia telegraph system was 9,215 miles. There were 121 telegraph offices open. In Southern Rhodesia during the year 1915, 319,715 telegrams were received and 271,363 were despatched. There is, besides, an extensive telephone system in operation.

Administrative revenue of Southern Rhodesia, 1914-15, 718,127*l.* (mainly from customs, 224,076*l.*; native tax, 221,540*l.*; stamps and licences, 64,535*l.*; Mines Department revenue, 26,023*l.*; postal revenue, 47,171*l.*; telegraph revenues, 48,265*l.*); administrative expenditure, 848,611*l.* Estimates for 1915-16, revenue, 738,000*l.*; expenditure, 784,436*l.* (mainly defence, 190,589*l.*; posts and telegraphs, 84,023*l.*; public works, 32,219*l.*; native department, 68,554*l.*; education, 80,846*l.*).

Northern Rhodesia.—By an Order in Council, dated May 4, 1911, the two provinces of North-Eastern and North-Western Rhodesia were amalgamated under the title of Northern Rhodesia. The amalgamation took effect as from August 17, 1911. The limits of the territory, as defined by the Order in Council, are 'the parts of Africa bounded by Southern Rhodesia, German South-west Africa, Portuguese West Africa, the Congo Free State, German East Africa, Nyasaland, and Portuguese East Africa.'

Northern Rhodesia has an area of about 290,000 square miles, and consists for the most part of high plateau country, covered with thin forest. Much of the country is suitable for farming and contains large areas carrying good arable and grazing land. The permanent European population is estimated at 2,000 in 1914, of which number over 500 are children. The native population is estimated at about 860,000. The territory is divided into ten magisterial districts. The administrative headquarters are at Livingstone, on the Zambesi. The most important centres are Fort Jameson, Fife, Abercorn, Fort Rosebery, Broken Hill, Ndola, and Lealui.

The police force, called the Northern Rhodesia Police, is composed of natives, with European officers and non-commissioned officers.

Maize, cotton, and tobacco are grown. Altogether over 1,000 acres have been planted with cotton by white farmers. The indigenous rubber of Northern Rhodesia has been strictly protected since 1903, with the result that the number of young vines shows a great increase. It is estimated that five rubber forests alone cover upwards of 21,000 acres, and contain about 800,000 vines. There is plenty of timber of various kinds in Northern Rhodesia. Wheat and European fruits are grown, and fibre plants provide material for a new industry which promises satisfactory results. There are gold, copper, zinc, and lead mines in the territory; and coal has been discovered.

The trunk line of the Rhodesian railway system traverses Northern Rhodesia from Livingstone to the Congo border. The Zambezi, Kafue, Chambesi, and other rivers of Northern Rhodesia are navigable for a considerable portion of their extent.

In Northern Rhodesia there are 39 post offices, 7 being money order offices. There is a telegraph line alongside the railway from Livingstone to the Congo border. The African Transcontinental telegraph system extends to Abercorn, Fife, and Fort Jameson.

The Northern Rhodesia Order in Council (May 4, 1911), provides for the appointment of an Imperial officer, styled the Resident Commissioner, who may be the officer holding the same position in Southern Rhodesia, and of an Administrator appointed by the British South Africa Company with the approval of the Secretary of State.

SWAZILAND

Swaziland, at the South-eastern corner of the Transvaal, was, by the Convention of 1894, placed under the administration of (but not incorporated with) the South African Republic; the British Government has now the control of the territory. The paramount chief, Sobhuza, son of the late paramount chief Bunu, is a minor about eighteen years of age, and the chief regency is in the hands of his grandmother, Nabotsibeni, widow of Mbandini. Sobhuza is now continuing his education at the Lovedale Institute in Cape Colony. On June 25, 1903, an Order in Council was issued conferring on the Governor of the Transvaal authority over Swaziland, and by Order in Council of December 1, 1906, this authority was transferred to the High Commissioner for South Africa. The numerous mineral and land concessions and monopolies granted by Mbandini, many of which carried exemption from customs dues or invested private individuals with powers properly exercisable by the Crown, rendered any satisfactory form of Government difficult. A Proclamation, therefore, provided for the constitution of a Commission to inquire into the question of these concessions. Under this Proclamation the High Commissioner has exercised the power to expropriate monopolies conferring exclusive rights, compensation for which has been made out of loans raised for the purpose. Gold is subject to a tax of 10 per cent. on profit; base metals to a royalty of 2½ per cent. on output in addition to any rentals now payable.

The agricultural and grazing rights of natives have been safeguarded, and delimited; a general survey of the territory in connection with concession claims has also been carried out. A Special Court, having the full jurisdiction of a Superior Court, and Assistant Commissioners' Courts have been established. A local Swaziland police force was created in 1907. Authorised strength (1915-16), 26 Europeans and 146 natives. During the year ended March 31st, 1916, there were 2,772 summary convictions, and 17 convictions in the Superior Court. *

Native chiefs are allowed to continue to exercise jurisdiction according to native law and customs in all civil matters between natives, subject to a final appeal to the Resident Commissioner. The present seat of the administration is at Mbabane; altitude 4,000 feet.

Area, 6,536 square miles; population (1911), 99,959, of whom 98,733 are natives (of Zulu type), 143 other coloured persons, and 1,083 whites. The Government maintains 7 European Schools at different centres, and 1 native school at Zombode, the kraal of the Regent. Average European attendance, 1915-16, 188; at Zombode, 56. The Government also subsidises other native schools and a school for coloured children. Total expenditure on education, 1915-16, 2,954*l*.

Chief items of revenue, 1915-16: Native tax, 26,136*l*; import dues, 7,788*l*; sales and leases of Crown lands, &c., 13,388*l*; concession rents, 2,536*l*; licences, 2,102*l*; dog tax, 2,980*l*. Chief items of expenditure, 1915-16: Police, 12,860*l*; establishments, 12,425*l*; public works, 6,386*l*; eradication of East Coast fever, 5,367*l*; medical, 3,230*l*; education, 2,954*l*; justice, 2,862*l*.

Since 1904 176,644*l*. has been spent on the expropriation of monopolies and in connection with the Swaziland Concessions Commission and the Partitions of Concessions. The public debt of Swaziland amounts (1916) to 92,500*l*.

The agricultural products are tobacco, maize (the staple product), millet, pumpkins, ground nuts, beans, and sweet potatoes, grown only in sufficient quantities for local supply. Attempts are being made to introduce cotton-growing. Stock numbers approximately (1916): horses, 500; cattle, 100,000; native sheep and goats, 250,000; pigs, 9,000. Approximately 200,000 sheep are brought into Swaziland from the Transvaal each year for winter grazing. The territory is reported to be rich in minerals, but it has not yet been systematically prospected. Alluvial tin is being mined and shipped. In 1915-16 the output of tin was 584 tons, valued at 56,067*l*. Several gold mines are worked on a small scale, and during the year 1915-16 the output was 6,497 ozs. of fine gold, valued at 29,595*l*. By agreement (dated June 30, 1910) with the Union of South Africa, Swaziland is treated for customs purposes as part of the Union and receives a pro rata share of the Customs dues collected. During the year 1915-16 Swaziland's share of the Union Customs dues amounted to 7,788*l*. Separate returns of Swaziland imports and exports are not shown. The exports consist almost entirely of cassiterite tin and raw gold.

There is bi-weekly communication by coach between Mbabane and Greyten on the Springs Ermelo Extension. Elsewhere communication is by small carts or runners. Post offices working in 1915-16, 12. Dealt with:—312,208 letters, 7,852 postcards, 80,132 newspapers, 53,612 book packets, samples, and circulars, and 14,352 parcels. There are telegraph offices at Mbabane, Pigg's Peak, Bremersdorp, and Ezulweni. Post Office Savings Banks deposits, 1,968*l.* on March 31, 1916, belonging to 186 depositors.

The currency is British coin and coins of the late South African Republic, which are of similar denomination to the British. The National Bank of South Africa, Ltd., has a branch at Mbabane. The deposits on March 31, 1916, amounted to 40,516*l.* This branch also conducts savings bank business—17 depositors, 1916, total deposits 1,102*l.*

Resident Commissioner. (Vacant.)

Deputy Resident Commissioner and Government Secretary.—D. Honey.

THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Constitution and Government.

The Union of South Africa is constituted under the South Africa Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, Ch. 9), passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom on September 20, 1909. Under the terms of that Act the self-governing Colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony were united on May 31, 1910, in a legislative Union under one Government under the name of the Union of South Africa, these Colonies becoming original provinces of the Union under the names of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange Free State respectively. Under the Act constituting the Union, the Sovereign appoints a Governor-General, who, with an Executive Council (of which the members are chosen and summoned by him), administers the executive government of the Union as the Governor-General in Council. Departments of State have been established, the Governor-General appointing not more than ten officers to administer them. Such officers are King's Ministers of State for the Union and members of the executive Council.

Legislative power is vested in a Parliament consisting of the King, a Senate, and a House of Assembly. The Governor-General has power to summon, prorogue, and dissolve Parliament, either both Houses simultaneously or the House of Assembly alone; but the Senate may not be dissolved within 10 years of the establishment of the Union. There must be a session of Parliament every year.

The Senate consists of forty members. For ten years after the establishment of Union eight (four being selected mainly for their acquaintance with the reasonable wants and wishes of the coloured races) are nominated by the Governor-General in Council and thirty-two are elected, eight for each Province. The first election was made prior to the establishment of the Union by the two Houses of each of the Colonial Legislatures sitting as one body, and a vacancy is filled by the choice of the Provincial Council in respect of whose Province a vacancy occurs. The Constitution of the Senate after ten years may be provided for by Parliament, but if no such provision is made the arrangements made in the South Africa Act are to hold good. Each senator must be a British subject of European descent, at least 30 years of age, qualified as a voter in one of the provinces, and resident for five years within the Union; an elected senator must be a registered owner of property of the value of 500*l.* over any mortgage.

The House of Assembly consists of 130 members chosen in Electoral Divisions in numbers as follows:—The Cape of Good Hope, 51; Natal, 17; Transvaal, 45; Orange Free State, 17. Parliamentary voters must have the qualifications as existing in the several colonies at the time of the Union.

Each electoral district in each province returns one member, who must be a British subject of European descent, qualified as a registered voter, and resident five years within the Union. A House of Assembly is to continue five years from the date of its first meeting unless sooner dissolved.

Each member of each House must make Oath or Affirmation of Allegiance. A member of one House cannot be elected to the other, but a Minister of State may sit and speak, but not vote in the House of which he is not a member. To hold an office of profit under the Crown (with certain exceptions) is a disqualification for membership of either House, as are also insolvency, crime, and insanity.

The House of Assembly, not the Senate, must originate money bills, but may not pass a bill for taxation or appropriation unless it has been recommended by message from the Governor-General during the Session. Restrictions are placed on the amendment of money bills by the Senate. Provision is made for adjusting disagreements between the Houses, and for the Royal Assent to bills to be given or reserved, and for laws assented to by the Governor-General being disallowed.

The first Parliamentary election under the South Africa Act was held on the 15th September, 1910. The position of the various parties after the general election of October, 1915, was:—South African Party, 54; Unionist Party, 40; Nationalists, 27; Labour Party, 4; Independents, 5.

Pretoria is the seat of government of the Union, and Cape Town is the seat of Legislature.

Governor-General.—His Excellency the Right Hon. Viscount Buxton of Newtimber, P.C., G.C.M.G. (salary £10,000 per annum).

The executive council is constituted as follows:—

Prime Minister and Minister of Native Affairs.—General The Right Honourable Louis Botha, P.C. (3,500*l.*)

Minister of the Interior, and of Public Works.—The Honourable Sir Thos. Wau, K.C.M.G. (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Defence.—General The Right Honourable J. C. Smuts, K.C. (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Mines and Industries, and of Education.—The Honourable F. S. Malan (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Railways and Harbours, and of Finance.—The Honourable Henry Burton, K.C. (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Justice.—The Honourable N. J. de Wet, K.C. (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.—Senator The Honourable Sir Meiring Beck, K.C.M.G. (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Agriculture.—The Honourable H. C. van Heerden (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Lands.—Colonel The Honourable H. Mentz (2,500*l.*).

Minister without Portfolio.—Senator the Honourable J. A. C. Graaff.

In each province there is an Administrator appointed by the Governor-General for five years, and a provincial council elected for three years, each council having an executive committee of four (either members or not of the council), the administrator presiding at its meetings. Members of the Provincial Council are elected on the same system as members of Parliament, but the restriction as to European descent does not apply. The number of members in each Provincial Council is as follows:—Cape of Good Hope, 51; Natal, 25; Transvaal, 36; Orange Free State, 25. The provincial committees and councils have authority to deal with local matters such as provincial finance, education (elementary), agriculture, charity, municipal institutions, local works, roads and bridges, markets, fish and game, and penalties for breaches of laws respecting such subjects. Other matters may be delegated to these Councils. All ordinances passed by a Provincial Council are subject to the veto of the Governor-General-in-Council.

The first Provincial elections for the Cape of Good Hope and the Transvaal were held on the 15th September, 1910; those for Natal and the Orange Free State on the 12th October, 1910.

There is a provincial Revenue Fund in each province. The old colonial capitals are the capitals of the provinces.

A Harbour and Railway Board of not more than three commissioners appointed for five years, with a Minister of State as chairman, have the management of the railways, ports, and harbours. There is a Railway and Harbour Fund for the Union and into it are paid revenues from the administration of railways, ports, and harbours, and such Fund is appropriated by Parliament. Into a Consolidated Revenue Fund is paid all other money received for the purposes of the Union. On this fund the interest on debts of the colonies forms a first charge. To the Union has been transferred the public property, real and personal, of the colonies.

The English and Dutch languages are both official. The administration of native affairs and affairs specially or differentially affecting Asiatics vests in the Governor-General-in-Council. It is provided that the British South Africa Co.'s territories may be received into the Union, and the government of native territories may be transferred to the Union Government.

High Commissioner in London.—The Hon. William Philip Schreiner, K.C., C.M.G. (appointed November 12, 1914), 32, Victoria Street, S.W.

Area and Population.

Statistics of the Provinces of the Union are given as follows. For other and more detailed statistics reference should be made to the sections dealing with the Provinces separately.

Of the total 5,973,394 persons (1911), 3,069,392 were males and 2,904,002 females.

The increase for the Union (1904–1911) was 15·41 per cent. For the Provinces it was as follows:—Cape, 6·44 per cent.; Natal, 7·69 per cent.; Transvaal, 32·78 per cent.; Orange Free State, 36·37 per cent.

The population comprised (1911) 1,276,242 Europeans or whites (591,078 females), 4,019,006 natives (1,996,057 females), and 678,146 other coloured races (316,867 females). In 1904 the figures were:—Europeans, 1,116,806 (increase 1904–11 of 14·28 per cent.); natives, 3,491,056 (increase 1904–11 of 15·12 per cent.); and other coloured races 567,962 (increase 1904–11 of 19·40 per cent.) The total non-European increase (1904–11) was 15·72 per cent. The proportion of Europeans in the total population in 1904 was 21·58 per cent.; in 1911, 21·37 per cent.

Some of the principal urban centres in the Union, with over 10,000 inhabitants in 1911, had a white population as follows:—

Cities.	Census 1904	Census 1911	Cities.	Census 1904	Census 1911
Johannesburg . . . .	83,363	119,953	Germiston . . . .	9,123	15,579

Woodstock . . . . .	21,530	17,957	East London . . . . .	14,686	12,279

Occupations.—The census returns for 1911 showed the occupations of the people to be as follows:—Professional, 59,721; domestic, 290,560; commercial, 81,627; agricultural, 192,424; industrial, 143,255; indefinite, 10,745; dependants, 492,959; unspecified, 4,951. There were 26,258 white persons, of whom 294 were females, who were engaged in the general or local government or the defence of the Union of South Africa. There were some 342,000 persons of all races employed in the mining industry of the Union; of these 47,000 were Europeans.

Migration.—1915. Arrivals by sea 17,487 (old residents returning after absence, 12,329; new arrivals, 5,158); departures by sea, 27,220.

Religion and Instruction.

Religions.—The results of the 1911 census as regards religions are as follows:—Europeans: Dutch Churches, 693,898; Anglicans, 255,640; Presbyterian, 58,633; Congregationalists, 13,355; Wesleyans, 80,402; Lutherans, 22,958; Roman Catholics, 53,793; Baptists, 15,088; Jews 46,919; others and unspecified, 35,576; total, 1,276,242. Non-Europeans: Dutch Churches, 204,702; Anglican, 276,849; Presbyterians, 72,114; Independents (Congregationalists), 173,982; Wesleyans, 456,017; African Methodist Episcopal, 59,103; Lutherans, 195,308; Roman Catholics, 37,242; Hindus, 115,701; Buddhists and Confucians, 1,783; Mahomedans, 45,842; no religion, 3,012,648; others and unspecified, 45,861; total, 4,697,152.

Education.—In the South Africa Act, section 85 (iii.), it is provided that 'Education, other than higher education, for a period of five years and thereafter until Parliament otherwise provides,' shall be and remain under the jurisdiction of the respective Provincial Councils. For practical purposes it has been provisionally determined that all post-matriculation instruction shall be deemed to constitute higher education.

216 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA

The Department of Education, under the Minister, is therefore concerned with the following institutions (statistics for 1915-16):—

Institution	Town	Originally Incorporated	Teaching Staff	Students
University of South Africa	Pretoria	1873	—	—
University of Capetown	Capetown	1829	44	457
University of Stellenbosch	Stellenbosch	1881	34	341
Rhodes University College <sup>1</sup>	Grahamstown	1904	22	121
Huguenot College <sup>1</sup>	Wellington	1907	10	68
Grey University College <sup>1</sup>	Bloemfontein	1910	14	118
Transvaal University College <sup>1</sup>	Pretoria	1910	14	125
South African School of Mines and Technology <sup>1</sup>	Johannesburg	1910	17	82

In the course of 1916 Acts were passed—(1) incorporating the South African College into the University of Capetown; (2) granting the Victoria College at Stellenbosch a separate charter; and (3) reconstituting the University of the Cape of Good Hope, under the title of the University of South Africa, with its administrative seat at Pretoria, and having as constituent Colleges the six last named institutions in the table above.

The total State expenditure on Higher Education during 1915-16 was 108,790*l*.

Justice.

The Common Law of the Union is the Roman-Dutch Law, that is, the uncodified law of Holland as it was at the date of the cession of the Cape in 1806. The sources of the law are the Dutch Commentaries and text-books of the seventeenth, eighteenth, and early nineteenth centuries. The Law of England as such is not recognised as authoritative, though by Statute the principles of English Law relating to mercantile matters—e.g., companies, patents, trademarks, insolvency and the like, have been introduced. In shipping, insurance, and other modern business developments English Law is followed, and it has also largely influenced civil and criminal procedure. In all other matters, family relations, property, succession, contract, &c., Roman-Dutch Law rules, English decisions being valued only so far as they agree therewith. The prerogatives of the Crown are, generally speaking, the same as in England.

The Supreme Court consists of an Appellate Division with a Chief Justice and two ordinary and two additional Judges of Appeal. In each Province of the Union there is a Provincial Division of the Supreme Court; while in the Cape there are two, and the Transvaal one, Local Divisions, exercising the same jurisdiction within limited areas as the Provincial Divisions. The Judges hold office during good behaviour. The Circuit System is fully developed.

Each Province is further divided into Districts with a Magistrate's Court having a prescribed civil and criminal jurisdiction. From this Court there is an appeal to the Provincial and Local Divisions of the Supreme Court, and thence to the Appellate Division. A distinctive feature of the Criminal system is that, except in Natal, Magistrate's convictions carrying sentences above a prescribed limit are subject to automatic review by a Judge.

Chief-Justice of South Africa.—Sir James Rose-Innes, P.C., K.C.M.G. (Appointed 19 October, 1914).

Finance.

Prior to 1913-14 the expenditure of the four Provinces was entirely met from grants by the Union Government. Under the Financial Relations Act, 1913, which came into operation on April 1, 1913, certain revenues were transferred or assigned to the Provinces, and the grants by the Union Government were limited to 50 per cent. of the total normal or recurrent expenditure of the Provinces, with additional subsidies to two Provinces in which the funds so provided were shown to be inadequate to meet the necessary expenditure. The Act also provided that the capital expenditure of the Provinces should be financed by redeemable loans from the Union Treasury, the interest and sinking fund charges on which should be included in the normal or recurrent expenditure and thus be subject to the 50 per cent. grant.

The statement of revenue and expenditure given below includes the Provinces, but excludes railways and harbours, which are run as a separate administration.

The gross Public Debt of the Union at March 31, 1916, was 150,832,734*l.*, made up of (1) Stock and Debentures, at 3 per cent., 54,105,113*l.*; at 3½ per cent., 26,650,761*l.*; at 3¾ per cent., 3,000,000*l.*; at 4 per cent., 36,888,475*l.*; at 4½ per cent., 4,024,465*l.*; at 5 per cent., 419,507*l.*; being 125,088,321*l.* in all; and (2) Temporary Loans, from Imperial Government, at 3½ per cent., 2,335,790*l.*; and at 4½ per cent., 15,263,636*l.*; and Treasury Bills at varying rates, 8,144,987*l.*; being 25,744,413*l.* in all.

The expenditure out of Loan Funds for war services during 1914-15 and 1915-16 was 9,258,959*l.* and 10,970,186*l.* respectively.

Defence.

The Defence Forces comprise the following:—I. The Permanent Force; II. The Coast Garrison Force; III. The Citizen Force; IV. The Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve; and V. Special Reserves.

The Permanent Force—South African Mounted Riflemen—was established on April 1, 1913, and consists of 5 Regiments. The training of the personnel for the Permanent Batteries has been undertaken and the training carried out.

The Union has been divided into 15 Military Districts, to each of which has been allotted various Units of different Arms, to which the citizens entered for Peace Training are posted.

A District Staff-officer, assisted by a Staff Adjutant, is appointed to each Military District. The Head Quarters of the 15 Military Districts are:—Cape Town, Port Elizabeth, East London, Pietermaritzburg, Durban, Standerton, Potchefstroom, Johannesburg, Pretoria, Kroonstad, Bloemfontein, Calvinia, Kimberley, Worcester, and Graaff Reinet.

A cadet organization and rifle associations are also in existence.

A force, approximately 50,000 Troops of all arms, was raised for the German South-West African Campaign, which was brought to a successful conclusion in July, 1915.

An Imperial Service Contingent is furnished for service Overseas.

A Contingent is also furnished for service in Nyasaland.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—The progress of agriculture, though naturally slow, has shown signs of steady improvement. Maize is being brought up to a very high standard, and a large export trade seems to be assured. The dairying industry is being steadily developed, and very great progress has been made all round during the past year. The industry is being greatly assisted by the carriage, free of freight, of pedigree stock by the Union-Castle Mail Steamship Company. The quantity of butter produced in the Union during the year 1915 was 13,407,140 lbs., and that of cheese, 1,098,784 lbs.

The 1911 Census showed that the numbers of various classes of live stock in the Union were as follows:—5,796,949 cattle; 719,414 horses; 93,931 mules; 336,710 donkeys; 746,736 ostriches; 30,656,659 sheep; 11,762,979 goats; 1,081,600 pigs; and 10,533,909 poultry. Of the cattle, 42.68 per cent., of the pigs, 59.33 per cent., and of the poultry, 45.80 per cent. were owned by non-Europeans. The number of sheep in 1915 was 31,434,080, and of Angora and other goats, 8,918,272.

The production of wool is steadily increasing, but ostrich feathers show a decrease, owing to a slump in the ostrich feather trade.

Cotton growing is now being undertaken by many farmers, the plant being found a better drought resistant than either tobacco or maize. The prices realised on the English market have ruled ½d. to 1d. more for the South African product than for the same variety grown in America. The annual crop for the past two seasons has been approximately 400,000 lbs. of seed cotton, and the present indications are that the crop will be doubled next season.

The production of sugar has made rapid progress. The net yield of tea, according to the latest figures, was 5,010,091 lbs. There were 4,766 acres under cultivation.

The production of mohair is about 19,000,000 lbs. per annum.

The tobacco crop for 1915-16 approximated 9,000,000 lbs. for the Union, a larger crop than that obtained for the past four seasons.

Viticulture intended for the production of high class table grapes, sultana and hanepoot raisins, has made and is still making rapid progress. The export trade in table grapes can be doubled and trebled when sufficient cold storage accommodation is available on the boats.

Manufactures.—The conditions brought about by the war have given a decided impetus to local manufactures. During the last two years the production of leather, for which this country is most suitable, has been more than doubled. The value of the annual output is estimated at half a million pounds sterling. A commencement has also been made with the manufacture of tanning extract from wattle bark. In dairy products, increasing activity is everywhere being shown, and the output of cement is rapidly overtaking the demands of the country.

The Union already produces its own requirements in beer and matches. The output of sugar from Natal last season (1915-16) amounted to 112,000 tons, whilst tea to the amount of 1,800,000 lbs. was produced in the same Province. The manufacture of tobacco satisfactorily maintains its position as one of the most important industries in the country, whilst considerable advances have been made in the production of dried fruits, jam, &c., for which the Western Province of the Cape is more particularly adapted. Amongst other commodities which the Union is producing are dynamite, soap, rope, wine, spirits, furniture, vehicles, brooms and brushes, biscuits, earthenware pipes, and firebricks.

Details of the mineral production for the Union for two years are as follows:—

Gold production in Transvaal in 1916, 39,485,000*l.*

The value of the total production of diamonds in South Africa up to the end of 1915, compiled from existing records, is 169,742,678*l.*

220 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA

The labour employed in gold producing concerns in December, 1915, was:—23,069 whites and 223,764 coloured, as against 21,975 whites and 178,367 coloured in December, 1914. Of the former, 23,048 whites and 223,692 coloured were working in the Transvaal in December, 1915.

The labour employed in diamond mining, including individual diamond diggers, was in December, 1915:—Transvaal, 1,114 whites, 1,032 coloured; Cape, 2,051 whites, 6,954 coloured; Orange Free State, 159 whites, 166 coloured; totals, 3,324 whites, 8,152 coloured; compared with a total of 2,066 whites and 4,114 coloured for December, 1914.

Coal Resources.—The extent of the coal resources of South Africa are roughly estimated as follows:—

Area of Coal Resources		Estimated quantities of Coal contained
	Square Miles	Mln. Tons
Transvaal	5,000, average 6 ft. thick	36,000
Natal	1,000 " 7 " "	9,400
Zululand	1,250 " 4 " "	6,000
Orange Free State	Probably not less than 1,000, average 4 ft. thick	4,800
Cape Province
Basutoland
Swaziland
Total		56,200

Production in 1914 and 1915 is given in the following table:—

	Coal (Tons of 2,000 lbs.)				Salt (Tons of 2,000 lbs.)
	1914		1915		1914		1915

The labour employed in coal mining in December, 1915, was:—Transvaal, 577 whites, 11,579 coloured; Cape, 62 whites, 722 coloured; Orange Free State, 145 whites, 2,088 coloured; Natal, 490 whites, 10,206 coloured; totals, 1,274 whites, 24,595 coloured; compared with a total of 1,229 whites and 23,898 coloured for December, 1914.

Silver.—There are no silver mines in the Union. The output in 1915 of 966,177 fine ozs., value 106,245*l.*, represents silver contained in gold bullion and base metal ores.

Copper.—14,996 tons (of 2,000 lbs.) of concentrates valued at 525,106*l.* were shipped from the Transvaal in 1915, and 13,973 tons of matte and ore valued at 517,208*l.* from the Cape.

Tin.—3,441 tons (of 2,000 lbs.) of tin ores valued at 331,420*l.*, including 39 tons, 4,232*l.*, for the Cape Province, were shipped in 1915.

Other Base Minerals and Miscellaneous Products.—The total value of the Union's production for 1915 of other base minerals such as asbestos (35,899*l.*),

Commerce.

The total value of the Imports and Exports of the Union of South Africa, exclusive of Specie, was as follows :—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports

70·1 per cent. (17,207,706*l.*) of the exports were shipped to the United Kingdom in 1916, and 63·2 per cent. (10,555,979*l.*) in 1915; and 15·8 per cent. (3,890,059*l.*) to the United States of America in 1916, and 16·4 per cent. (2,748,127*l.*) in 1915.

Shipping and Communications.

Oversea shipping 1916: entered, 1,789 vessels of 5,933,234 tons net; cleared, 1,782 of 5,765,921 tons. Coastwise: entered, 2,568 vessels of 5,381,575 tons net; cleared 2,506 of 5,248,579 tons.

Prior to Union, which took effect in May, 1910, the state railways of the several colonies now comprising the Union were operated by the separate Governments. In May, 1910, the Government lines were merged into one system, the South African Railways, under the control of the Union Government. The total open mileage of this system at the end of 1915 was 8,924 miles (comprising Cape 3,964 miles, Orange Free State 1,265 miles, Transvaal 2,492 miles, and Natal, 1,203 miles), of which 8,404 miles are 3 ft. 6 in. gauge, and 520 miles 2 ft. 0 in. gauge. The capital expenditure on Government Railways up to December, 31, 1915, amounted to 71,949,398*l.* plus 15,040,642*l.* in respect of rolling stock; total 86,990,040*l.* (This does not include 1,081,666*l.* spent during the year on the construction of new lines.) The gross earnings for 1915 were 12,197,890*l.*, and the net profit after payment of interest, 1,310,380*l.* Working expenditure (excluding renewals) amounted to 7,499,306*l.*, or 61·5 per cent. of the gross revenue, as compared with 7,445,398*l.*, or 64·3 per cent. of the gross revenue in 1914. On December 31, 1915, 641½ miles of new railway were in course of construction.

At the end of 1915 there were in the Union 2,478 post offices. Telegrams dealt with numbered 6,165,568. The number of money orders issued during the year was 394,983, and the value 2,430,167*l.*, while 330,608 orders of the value of 1,954,554*l.* were paid. 3,467,201 postal orders amounting to 2,149,800*l.* were issued, and 2,870,576, valued at 1,712,362*l.* paid.

The revenue of the Post-office in 1915 was 1,042,325*l.*, and the expenditure 985,818*l.* The revenue of the telegraph and telephone services (excluded from the previous figures) was 703,199*l.*, and the expenditure, 657,220*l.*

16,053 miles of telegraph line, carrying 54,256 miles of wire, and 4,705 miles of telephone line carrying 107,946 miles of wire, were open. 1,651 wireless messages were dealt with during the year.

The number of depositors in the Government Savings Bank in the Union at the end of 1915 was 254,361, and the amount standing to their credit was 6,558,819*l.*

PROVINCE OF THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Constitution and Government.—The Colony of the Cape of Good Hope was originally founded by the Dutch in the year 1652. Britain took possession of it in 1795 but evacuated it in 1803. A British force again took possession in 1806 and the Colony has remained a British Possession since that date. It was formally ceded to Great Britain by the Convention of London, August 13, 1814. The original Colony has been extended from time to time. East and West Pondoland were annexed in 1894 and Bechuanaland in 1895. For many years the form of government in the Colony depended on the terms of the Royal Letters Patent and Instructions to governors. Letters Patent issued in 1850 to Governor Sir Henry Smith declared that in the Colony there should be a Parliament which should consist of the Governor, a Legislative Council, and a House of Assembly.

A Constitution Ordinance was enacted by Order in Council of March 11, 1853, and took effect on May 1 ensuing. This Order in Council provided that nothing it contained should prevent the Parliament of the Colony from making Acts (subject to the power of Her Majesty in Council either to disallow or assent to such Acts) in amendment of the said Ordinance. This power of amending the Constitution was exercised from time to time as the bounds of the Colony were extended. In 1872 an Act was passed at the Cape and assented to by Order in Council, providing for the system of executive administration known as Responsible Government. The Constitution formed under these various Acts vested the executive in the Governor and an Executive Council, composed of certain office holders appointed by the Crown. On the 31st May, 1910, the Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa, thereafter forming an original province of the Union.

Cape Town is the seat of the Provincial Administration.

Administrator.—The Hon. Sir Frederic de Waal, K.C.M.G. (Salary 2,500*l.*)

The Province is divided into 119 magisterial districts, and the Colony proper, including Bechuanaland, but exclusive of the Transkeian territories, into 86 fiscal divisions. In each division there is a Civil Commissioner, who is, in all cases where the fiscal and magisterial areas coincide, also the Resident Magistrate. Each division has a Council of at least 6 members (18 in the Cape Division) elected triennially by the owners or occupiers of immovable property. These Councils look after roads, boundaries, and beacons; return 3 members to the Licensing Court, and perform other local duties.

There are 124 Municipalities, each governed by a Mayor or Chairman and Councillors, a certain number of whom are elected annually by the ratepayers. There are also 80 Village Management Boards.

Area and Population.—The following table gives the area and population of the Province and native Territories according to the final census returns of 1911:—

—	Area, Square Miles	Population in 1911			Females included in previous column.
		European or White	Coloured	Total

Religion and Instruction.—In 1911 there were 1,437,688 Christians. —479,825 Dutch Churches, 282,619 Anglican Communion (including Church of England, Church of Province of South Africa, Church of Ireland, Episcopal Church of Scotland, Episcopalian), 74,005 Presbyterians, 147,378 Independents or Congregationalists, 285,283 Wesleyans, 19,161 other Methodists, 21,506 Lutherans, 21,167 Moravians, 22,953 Rhenish Mission, 12,234 other Lutherans, 13,704 Baptists, 35,934 Roman Catholics, 21,919 other Christians. Mohammedans, 24,189, Jews 16,744. Of no religion, 1,077,998, of whom 1,047,233 were Natives.

The Province is divided into 121 School Districts, each under the control of a School Board, two-thirds of the members being locally elected, and one-third nominated partly by Government and partly by Municipal or Divisional Councils. Education is compulsory for children of European extraction in 119 School Board Districts, and will probably be enforced in the remaining 2 districts at an early date. Grants in support of education are provided from the general revenue, the sources of revenue in the case of school boards being : Central government, 68·78 per cent.; local education rate, 6·11 per cent.; school fees, 24·42 per cent.; other sources, 69 per cent. Aided schools, June 30, 1916, 4,734, enrolment 250,930, attendance 216,721. There are 109,076 European pupils and 141,854 non-European. Total number of teachers, 9,743.

Charitable Institutions, Hospitals, Pauperism.—In the hospitals and kindred charitable institutions 16,260 patients were treated in the year 1915. There is no system of poor law relief but 1,306 persons received indoor relief during the year.

Finance.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there is only one financial statement for the four provinces together. Particulars are given above under the Union. Since the passing of the Financial Relations Act, 1918, the Provincial revenue consists of certain revenues assigned to the Province and an amount voted by Parliament by way of subsidy. The following figures show the estimates of expenditure to be defrayed by the Cape Province during the year ending March 31, 1916, in comparison with the approximate expenditure in the preceding year:—

Title	Estimates 1914-15	Estimates 1915-16

Surplus 1913-14 . . . . .	88,000	150,025
Total . . . . .	1,426,831	1,269,050

Production and Industry.—In 1914, 919,420 acres of Crown lands were alienated, the amount realised being 52,265*l*. Up to December 31, 1914, the total area disposed of was about 141,039,952 acres, the quantity undisposed of being 36,336,708 acres.

Irrigation development has made rapid strides in the past ten years, due mainly to the stimulating effect of the ostrich feather industry, and to technical and financial assistance given by the State under the Irrigation Laws of 1906 and 1912, which were designed to encourage irrigation, more especially by co-operative effort. Since the passing of the Irrigation Act of 1906 up to March 31, 1916, 1,013,676*l*. has been granted in the form of irrigation loans; 45 co-operative irrigation societies, known as Irrigation Boards, have been constituted, having an aggregate rateable irrigable area of approximately 155,000 acres.

For Mineral Production, see p. 219.

Commerce.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there are no special records of trade for each of the Provinces. The British Board of Trade statistics, however, continue to give details of trade between the United Kingdom and each Province separately. The following figures show the value of the trade between the Cape of Good Hope Province and the United Kingdom for five years:—

	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Cape . . . . .	8,660,232	9,380,716	7,547,731	7,184,774	7,782,472

Foreign and Colonial merchandise . . . . .	955,447	958,371	817,956	860,285	884,685

The more important imports and exports in 1915 were:—Imports into United Kingdom: feathers, 562,941*l.*; sheep's wool (94,666,669 lbs.) 3,576,392*l.*; mohair, 671,585*l.*; raw hides, 343,815*l.*; skins and furs, 919,192*l.*; copper, regulus and precipitate, 310,637*l.*; maize, 153,674*l.* The exports of diamonds to the United Kingdom in 1915, as given in the Cape returns, were 606,021 carats, value 1,652,003*l.* (these figures are not included in the table above). Exports from United Kingdom (British produce): cotton goods, 1,011,905*l.*; woollens, 541,030*l.*; apparel, 1,123,298*l.*; machinery, 313,702*l.*; iron and steel goods, 629,546*l.*; leather boots and shoes, 384,575*l.*; carriages, all sorts, and parts, 488,744*l.*

Money, Weights, and Measures.—The coins and the standard weights and measures are British, but the following old Dutch measures are still used:—Liquid Measure: Leaguer = about 128 imperial gallons; half aum = 15½ imperial gallons; anker = 7½ imperial gallons. Capacity: Muid = 3 bushels. The general surface measure is Morgen, equal to 2·1165402 acres; 1,000 Cape lineal feet are equal to 1,033 British imperial feet. Recently a Bill was introduced to provide for the standardisation of the metric system for weights and measures, with the optional use of imperial standards, except in the case of chemists, who are compelled to use the metric system.

PROVINCE OF NATAL.

Constitution and Government.—Natal, which had been annexed to Cape Colony in 1844*, was placed under separate government in 1845, and under charter of July 15, 1856, was erected into a separate Colony. By this charter partially representative institutions were established, and, under a Natal Act of 1893, assented to by Order in Council, June 26, 1893, the Colony obtained responsible government. The province of Zululand was annexed to Natal on December 30, 1897. The districts of Vryheid, Utrecht and part of Wakkerstroom, formerly belonging to the Transvaal, were in January, 1903, annexed to the colony. On May 31, 1910, the Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa, becoming an original province of the Union.

The seat of provincial government in Natal is Pietermaritzburg.

Administrator.—The Hon. C. J. Smythe.

Area and Population.—The Province (including Zululand, 10,424 square miles) has an area of 35,290 square miles, with a seaboard of about 360 miles. The climate is sub-tropical on the coast and somewhat colder inland. It is well suited to Europeans. The Province is divided into 40 Magisterial Divisions.

The European population has more than trebled since 1879. The returns of the total population in 1891, 1901 and at the censuses of April 17, 1904, and May 7, 1911, were :—

—	1891	1901	1904	1911
Europeans . . . . .	46,788	63,821	97,109	98,114
Indians and Asiatics . . . . .	41,142	74,385	100,918	133,439
Natives . . . . .	455,983	786,912	910,727 <sup>1</sup>	962,490 <sup>2</sup>

The figures for 1891 exclude Zululand; those for 1904 and 1911 include the districts of Vryheid, Utrecht, Paulpietersburg, Ngotshe, and Babanango. The number of males in 1911 was 564,648, and of females, 629,395.

Population of the borough of Durban according to the census of May 7, 1911, 69,187, consisting of Europeans, 31,783, natives (including half-castes) 17,784, Indians and Asiatics, 19,620; and of Pietermaritzburg, 30,555, consisting of 14,737 Europeans, 7,789 Indians and Asiatics, 8,029 natives, including half-castes.

So far as registered, the births in 1915 numbered 23,052 (2,832 European, 13,931 native, 6,083 Indian and other Asiatic, and 206 Mixed and other Coloured); deaths, 11,474 (1,052 European, 8,554 native, 1,785 Indian and other Asiatic, and 83 Mixed and other Coloured); and marriages, 2,741 (977 European, including half caste, 585 native, 1,179 Indian and other Asiatic).

Instruction.—With the exception of Higher Education, which has been placed under the control of the Union Government, Education comes under the Provincial Administration. There are 3 Government high schools, 2 preparatory schools, 73 Government primary schools, 2 Government art schools, 1 Agricultural and Trades school, 5 Government Indian schools, 2 Government schools for coloured children, besides 107 Government-aided schools, and 163 Government-aided farmhouse schools for European children. Also there are 2 Technical Institutes, 34 Indian schools, 302 native schools, and 17 coloured schools, all of which receive Government aid; and a considerable number of private schools in the province. Three of the aided schools are secondary schools for girls. The aggregate number of European pupils in regular attendance at the Government and inspected schools was 19,802 for 1915; the average daily attendance 86 per cent. of the number on the registers. At the Government high and preparatory schools there is an average daily attendance of 1,274 pupils. About 1,500 children attend private unaided schools, and it is estimated that only a very small percentage of white children are receiving no education. The number of European children receiving gratuitous education in 1915 was 2,695. The direct Government expenditure on Government schools for 1915 was 125,660*l.* (excluding expenditure for furniture, buildings, but including maintenance). Fees paid by pupils in Government schools for 1915, 22,889*l.*

The 302 Government-aided schools for natives had a total enrolment of 21,700, and received in 1915 grants in aid to the amount of 21,587*l.*; and the 34 Government-aided schools for the children of Indians had a total enrolment of 4,438 in 1915, for which a grant of 5,659*l.* was expended.

Finance.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there is only one financial statement for the four provinces together. Particulars are given above under the Union. Since the passing of the Financial Relations Act, 1913, the provincial revenue consists of certain revenues assigned to the Province and an amount voted by Parliament by way of subsidy. The following figures show the estimate of expenditure to be defrayed by the Natal Province during the year ending March 31, 1917, and a comparison with the approximate expenditure in the preceding year:—

Production and Industry.—Up to the end of 1915, 8,863,425 acres of land had been alienated, 1,936,125 acres conditionally alienated, and 7,195,911 acres remained unalienated. These figures exclude 4,590,057 acres granted, leased, &c., up to the end of 1915 in Zululand and the Northern Territories. On the Coast and in Zululand there are vast plantations of sugar and tea, while cereals of all kinds (especially maize), fruits, vegetables, the Acacia molissima, the bark of which is so much used for tanning purposes, and other crops grow prolifically.

The Province is rich in mineral wealth (for statistics, see pp. 219-220). The coal industry is advancing, and several gold mines on a small scale are successfully worked. Among the valuable minerals known to exist in the Province are asbestos, copper ore, fireclay, gold, graphite, gypsum, iron ore, lead and silver ore, limestone and marble, manganese ore, mica, molybdenum ore, nickel ore, nitre, oil shale, and tin ore. Attention is being increasingly devoted to prospecting for gold, that metal being found very widely distributed both in quartz and 'banket' reefs.

The various factory industries of Natal at the time of the last census (1911) numbered 350, with an annual output valued at nearly 4,500,000*l*. They had 4,300,000*l*. invested in machinery, lands, and buildings, annually used materials worth 2,300,000*l*., and paid over 1,100,000*l*. yearly in wages to 27,096 employees.

A Whaling Industry exists at Durban, and is carried on by six companies. In 1914 the number of whales killed and landed was 1,061. The output for 1914 of the Natal companies was 6,186 tons of oil, 1,709 tons of fertilisers, and 27 tons of 'finners' (the whale-bone of the 'humpback' whale), valued at 117,000*l*. The industry is now regulated by the Provincial Government, as indiscriminate slaughter was driving the whales away from the South African waters.

Commerce.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there are no special records made for each of the Provinces; the British Board of Trade statistics, however, continue to give details of trade between the United Kingdom and each Province separately. The following figures show the value of the trade between Natal Province and the United Kingdom for five years:—

The more important imports and exports in 1915 were:—Imports into United Kingdom: maize, 609,521*l*.; raw hides, 170,071*l*.; sheep's wool (41,898,609 lbs.), 1,582,116*l*.; sheep skins, woolled, 178,852*l*.; dye and tanning stuffs, &c., 286,648*l*. Exports from United Kingdom (British produce): cotton manufactures, 402,998*l*.; machinery, 679,593*l*.; iron and steel goods, 937,307*l*.; apparel, 383,573*l*.; chemicals and preparations, 306,723*l*.

PROVINCE OF THE TRANSVAAL.

Constitution and Government.—The territory comprised within the limits of The Transvaal was colonised by Boers who left Cape Colony in 1836-37. In 1852 the independence of the Transvaal Government was recognised by Great Britain, but, in 1877, in consequence of financial difficulties and troubles with the natives, and in accordance with representations and petitions from the Boers, the territory was annexed by the British Government. In 1880 the Boers took up arms for the restoration of their independence, and, in 1881, a Convention was signed restoring to the inhabitants of the territory their self-government, but with conditions, reservations, and limitations, and subject to the suzerainty of the Queen. This arrangement was modified by a Convention made in 1884, in which the name of the South African Republic was given to the Transvaal State; but the control over external affairs, other than engagements with the Orange Free State, was reserved to her Majesty. These Conventions, however, did not preserve harmony within the Transvaal territory, or with the British Government. The discovery of gold and the conditions which followed this discovery occasioned difficulties from which the two Boer States sought release by military action. The result of this was the military occupation of the two countries, and their annexation to the British Crown, the one on September 1, 1900, under the name of The Transvaal, and the other (May 24) as the Orange River Colony. Hostilities continued till May 31, 1902, when an agreement as to terms of surrender was signed by the representatives of the burgher forces in the field. [See STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1906, under The Transvaal.]

The administration was thereafter carried on under a Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive and a Legislative Council. On December 6, 1906, letters patent were issued providing for a Constitution of responsible Government in the Colony. The Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa on May 31, 1910, as an original Province of the Union.

The seat of provincial government for the Transvaal is at Pretoria.

Administrator.—The Hon. J. F. B. Rissik (salary, 2,500*l.*)

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 110,426 square miles, divided into 24 districts. The census of May 7, 1911 showed for the Transvaal a population amounting to 1,686,212, of whom 971,555 were males, and 714,657 females. The population comprised 420,562 Europeans or whites, 1,219,845 natives, and 45,805 other coloured races.

The white population of Pretoria in 1911 was 29,618. The largest town is Johannesburg, the mining centre of Witwatersrand goldfields, with a population (1911) of 237,104, consisting of 119,953 whites and 117,151 coloured.

	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Excess of births over deaths.
1912	19,841	15,743	6,842	4,098
1913	19,790	14,790	6,501	5,000

Instruction.—The system of education was embodied in the Education Act which was passed during the first session of the first Parliament elected under responsible government, and which provides that all education except that of a university type shall be under the provincial authority. The Colony has been divided for the purposes of local control and management into twenty-eight school districts, each under a School Board chosen by the Parliamentary electors. All the schools within the school district, with the exception of schools for natives and certain secondary schools, are under the supervision of the Board. Each school may have a Committee elected by the parents and guardians of the children enrolled. Recommendations of Committees come under the review of the Boards and may be modified or rejected by them.

The following statistics of education are for the year ending Dec. 31, 1915 :—770 primary schools had 70,644 pupils ; 14 secondary schools had 3,056 pupils ; 3 normal colleges with 255 pupils ; 15 schools for coloured, native and Indian children with 2,532 pupils ; making a grand total of 802 schools with 76,487 pupils. There were also 267 aided schools for native children with 15,908 pupils.

In respect of the question of language, the medium of instruction up to and including the fourth standard is the home language (English or Dutch) of the pupil, but parents may request that the second language be gradually introduced as a second medium. Above the fourth standard provision is made for the instruction of pupils through the medium of English and Dutch, and the parent of each pupil may choose one of the two languages as the sole medium of instruction, or both of the languages as the media of instruction. If the parent of any pupil fails to exercise his right of choice, the pupil is instructed through the medium of the language which is the better known and understood by him, the other language being also used as far as possible as a medium of instruction. Bible History is taught in every school, but no doctrine or dogma peculiar to any religious denomination or sect may be taught.

Finance.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there is only one financial statement for the four provinces together. Particulars are given above under the Union. Since the passing of the Financial Relations Act, 1913, the Provincial Revenue consists of certain revenues assigned to the Province and an amount voted by Parliament by way of subsidy. The estimates for 1916-17 are given as follows:—

Production and Industry.—The Province of the Transvaal is in the main a stock-raising country, though there are considerable areas well adapted for agriculture, including the growing of tropical crops. The extent of land under cultivation is given as over 2,000,000 acres; fallow land as about 470,000 acres; and grazing land as 29,900,000 acres. The maize and tobacco crops may be regarded as the most important.

The live stock numbered, in 1913, 5,024,898 sheep, 2,104,527 goats.

For mineral production, see above, pp. 219-220. The Transvaal Province has iron and brass foundries and engineering works, grain-mills, breweries, brick, tile, and pottery works, tobacco, soap, and candle factories, coach and wagon works, &c.

Commerce.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there are no special records of trade for each of the Provinces. The British Board of Trade statistics, however, continue to give details of trade between the United Kingdom and each Province. The following figures show the value of the trade between the Transvaal Province and the United Kingdom for five years:—

PROVINCE OF THE ORANGE FREE STATE.

The Orange River was first crossed by Europeans about the middle of the 18th century. Between 1810 and 1820, several Europeans settled in the southern parts of the Orange Free State. The Great Trek greatly augmented the number of settlers during and after 1836. At first no settled government was established. In 1848, Sir Harry Smith proclaimed the whole territory between the Orange and Vaal Rivers as a British Possession and established what was called the Orange River Sovereignty. A British Resident was appointed at Bloemfontein, with Assistant Commissioners at Winburg and Caledon River. Great dissatisfaction was caused by this step, as well as by the native policy of the British Government. In 1854 the Convention of Bloemfontein, by which British Sovereignty was withdrawn and the independence of the country was recognised, was signed by Sir George Russell Clerk.

During the first five years of its existence the Orange Free State was much harassed by incessant raids by, and fighting with, the Basutos. These were at length conquered. The British Government then stepped in and arranged matters much to the dissatisfaction of the conquering party. By the treaty of Aliwal North, only a part of the territory of the Basutos was incorporated in the Orange Free State. This part is still known as the Conquered Territory.

A great deal of unpleasantness was caused by the dispute over the Kimberley Diamond Fields, which belonged to the Orange Free State, but were annexed to the Cape Colony by the British Government.

On account of the Treaty between the Orange Free State and South African Republic, the former State took a prominent part in the South African War (1899–1902), and was annexed to the British Dominions by proclamation of Lord Roberts, on May 28, 1900, as the Orange River Colony. After peace was declared Crown Colony Government was established and continued until 1907, when responsible government was introduced. On May 31, 1910, the Orange River Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa as the Province of the Orange Free State.

The seat of provincial government is at Bloemfontein.

Administrator.—The Hon. C. H. Wessels (salary, 2,000*l.*)

There are municipalities at Bloemfontein and other centres, 50 in all; local authorities have, so far as possible, the usual local administrative powers.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 50,389 square miles; it is divided into 24 districts. The population at the last 3 censuses was as follows:—

Year	White			Coloured			Total
	Males	Females	Total	Males	Females	Total	Males	Females	In all
1890	40,571	37,145	77,716	67,791	61,996	129,787	108,362	99,141	207,503
1904	81,571	61,108	142,679	128,524	116,112	244,636	210,095	177,220	387,315
1911	94,488	80,701	175,189	183,030	169,955	352,985	277,518	250,656	528,174

The capital, Bloemfontein, had, in 1911, 14,720 white* inhabitants (8,995 males and 5,725 females), and 12,205 natives and other coloured persons (6,212 males and 5,993 females); total, 26,925.

—	Births <sup>1</sup>	Deaths <sup>1</sup>	Marriages		Surplus of births over deaths <sup>1</sup>
			European	Coloured
1912	5,128	1,470	1,629	1,108	3,058

1914	4,571	1,321	1,232	1,051	3,250

Religion.—The principal body, according to the census of 1911, is the Dutch Reformed Church with 175,311 adherents; of Wesleyans there were 88,857; Anglican Communion, 42,401; Presbyterians, 7,549; Congregationalists, 8,368; Lutherans, 8,727; Roman Catholics, 5,696; Jews, 2,808; no religion (so stated), 173,336, of whom 173,192 were natives and other coloured persons.

Instruction.—Higher education is under the control of the Minister of Education for the Union, while primary and secondary education is controlled by the Administrator of the Province. Under the School Act of 1908 the Province is divided into a number of School Districts. Each Government School is under the supervision of a School Committee elected by the parents. For each District there is also a School Board, appointed partly by the School Committees and partly by the Government, which exercises general supervision over all schools within its district. The School Committees have the right of nominating teachers, subject to the approval of the Department. Grants are given conditionally to private schools. At present there are 643 public and 151 aided private schools in the Province, with a total enrolment of over 35,000 pupils. Fees are charged at all schools, exemption being granted under certain prescribed regulations, and attendance is compulsory up to Standard VI. Except where the parents object both English and Dutch are taught to all children, and where possible are used as equal media of instruction.

The Normal College trains from 80 to 90 teachers annually. Since January, 1910, there has also been a chair in Education at the Grey University College. The Polytechnic College, established in 1912, trains teachers in art, dressmaking, &c. The Home Industries Board directs the spinning and weaving schools throughout the country. The Government Industrial School for boys was opened at Blenheimfontein in 1907. Secondary schools have been established in all the leading towns of the Province with more advanced departments preparing pupils up to University Matriculation standard.

The gross expenditure on education for the financial year 1915-16 was approximately 384,760*l*. This sum does not include the cost of construction of educational buildings.

Finance.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there is only one financial statement for the four Provinces together. Particulars are given above under the Union. Since the passing of the Financial Relations Act, 1913, the Provincial revenue consists of certain revenues assigned to the Province and an amount voted by Parliament by way of subsidy. The following figures show the estimates of expenditure to be defrayed by the Orange Free State Province during the year ending March 31, 1917, and a comparison with the estimated expenditure in the preceding year.

Production and Industry.—The Province consists of undulating plains, affording excellent grazing and wide tracks for agricultural purposes. The rainfall is moderate. The country is still mainly devoted to stock-farming, although a rapidly increasing quantity of grain is being raised, especially in the Eastern Districts.

WEST AFRICA.

These Possessions are the Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria; the Gambia Colony and Protectorate; the Gold Coast Colony with Ashanti and Northern Territories; and the Sierra Leone Colony and Protectorate.

NIGERIA.

History and Constitution.—This territory comprises a number of areas formerly under separate administrations. Lagos, bought in August, 1861, from a native king, was placed under the Governor of Sierra Leone in 1866. In 1874 it was detached, together with the Gold Coast Colony, and formed part of the latter until January, 1886, when a separate "Colony and Protectorate of Lagos" was constituted. Meanwhile the National African Company had established British interests in the Niger valley, and in July, 1886, the company obtained a charter under the name of the Royal Niger Company. This Company surrendered its charter to the Crown in 1899, and on January 1, 1900, its territories were formed into the two Protectorates of Northern and Southern Nigeria. The latter absorbed the "Niger Coast Protectorate," which was formed in May, 1893, from the "Protectorate of the Oil Rivers," which had been constituted in June, 1885. In February, 1906, Lagos and Southern Nigeria were united into the "Colony and Protectorate of Southern Nigeria," and on January 1, 1914, the latter was amalgamated with the Protectorate of Northern Nigeria to form the 'Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria,' under a Governor-General. Lagos is at present the seat of the Central Government.

The Colony of Nigeria had its boundaries defined afresh, and the Protectorate was divided into two groups of provinces, the 'Northern Provinces' and the 'Southern Provinces,' each under a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the King, and subject to the control and authority of the Governor-General.

The Executive Council of the Colony was made, from January 1, 1914, the Executive Council of the Protectorate also. There is an advisory and deliberative body known as the Nigerian Council, consisting of the Governor, the members of the Executive Council, and other official members; a member, resident in Nigeria, of the Lagos Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Calabar Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the Chamber of Mines, nominated by those bodies; four Europeans nominated by the Governor, and representative of Commerce, Shipping, Mining, and Banking; and six native members, also nominated by the Governor. This Council has no legislative or executive authority.

Governor-General of Nigeria.—Sir Frederick J. D. Lugard, G.C.M.G., C.B., D.S.O.

Secretary to Central Government.—D. C. Cameron.

Lieutenant-Governors in the Protectorate.—A. G. Boyle, C.M.G. (Southern Provinces), and C. L. Temple, C.M.G. (Northern Provinces).

Area and Population.—Area approximately 336,000 square miles; population, about 17,000,000. In 1900 a proclamation was issued in Northern Nigeria which, without abolishing domestic slavery, declared all children born after January 1, 1900, free; and forbade the removal of domestic slaves for sale or transfer. Slave markets have been suppressed by native rulers, and slave dealing is now practically non-existent. In 1914, 9,577, and in 1915, 4,770, slaves were liberated in the Northern Provinces.

Justice.—The Supreme Courts of Northern and Southern Nigeria are united under one Chief Justice of Nigeria. In each province is a Provincial Court consisting of the Resident and his assistants, and such justices of the peace as may be appointed by the Governor. Native courts exist in Mohammedan localities where there are chiefs and councillors, and amongst pagan tribes Judicial Councils with limited judicial powers have been established in localities where the intelligence of the natives renders such a policy possible. There are cantonments at Zungeru on the Kaduna and Lokoja on the Niger, and there magistrates have been appointed. The number of persons apprehended or summoned before the Provincial Courts in the Northern Provinces in 1915 was 2,638. 864 persons were convicted. In the Southern Provinces 5,611 persons were brought before the Provincial Courts in 1915, and 3,817 were summarily convicted. Out of 10,817 brought before a Magistrates Court in 1915, 9,294 were convicted, and out of 322 brought before the Supreme Court, 163 were convicted.

Religion and Education.—Northern Provinces.—Mohammedanism is widely diffused, the Fulani and Hausas and other ruling tribes being of that religion, but in some parts of the territory paganism is predominant. Protestant and Catholic missions are at work, and have industrial and other schools at several stations. The principles governing the education of natives in the Egyptian Sudan are being closely followed. Secular subjects only are compulsory; the acceptance of religious teaching is optional. At present the principal schools are situated at Kano, a great Mohammedan centre. In 1915 there were 12 Government schools, and 46 unassisted private schools, the total average attendance being 793, and 1,125 respectively. It is estimated that there are also over 24,000 Mohammedan schools, with more than 200,000 pupils.

Southern Provinces.—There is a system of primary and secondary schools, with a staff (1914) of 647 teachers, including pupil teachers. There are also a residential school at Bonny, supported by Government grants, and by Chiefs' subscriptions, and a Government secondary school and mission grammar school at Lagos, and a high school at Calabar. In 1915 there were 51 Government schools with 4,874 scholars on the roll, and an average attendance of 3,681; 82 assisted schools, 15,171 on the roll, and 11,550 in average attendance; and some 700 private schools with about 44,000 on the roll, and 33,000 in average attendance. Total expenditure from public funds, 46,000*l.*

Four British Protestant Societies and two French Roman Catholic Societies are established, each with several stations, and altogether there are approximately 1,000 places of worship with an average attendance of about 130,000.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure:—

Northern Nigeria		Southern Nigeria <sup>2</sup>
Revenue	Expenditure	Revenue	Expenditure
£	£	£	£
1910-11 . . .	619,989	1,933,235	1,592,282
1912 <sup>2</sup> . . . .	623,993	2,235,412	2,110,498
1913 . . . . .	794,300	2,668,193	2,096,311

In 1914 the revenue of Nigeria was 3,048,380*l.*, and the expenditure 3,596,764*l.*, while in 1915 the figures were 2,703,258*l.* and 3,434,215*l.* respectively. The expenditure in 1914 includes 628,925*l.* expended on construction of Eastern Railway from Port Harcourt, while in 1915 it includes 632,168*l.* expended on the Eastern Railway and 155,981*l.* on the expenses of the Cameroons campaign.

The main items of revenue in 1915 were:—Customs, 1,383,467*l.*; railway, 586,981*l.*; direct taxes, 305,134*l.*; fees of court, &c., 105,106*l.*; Imperial grant-in-aid, 100,000*l.* The chief items of expenditure were:—Political, 231,180*l.*; West African Frontier Force, 200,505*l.*; Posts and Telegraphs, 80,240*l.*; Medical, 138,216*l.*; Police, 88,696*l.*; Public Debt, 388,226*l.*; Railway, 579,632*l.*; Marine, 195,543*l.*; Public Works Extraordinary, 109,371*l.*; Eastern Railway, 632,168*l.*; War Costs, 155,981*l.*

There is established in each native State in northern Nigeria a Treasury, locally known as a 'Beit-el-Mal,' which regulates the expenditure of that portion of the local revenue which is annually assigned to the native administration of each Emirate for its support and maintenance. The establishment of a Beit-el-Mal consolidates the rank and authority of the Emirs and Chiefs in each province. It strengthens the position of the native judiciary and diminishes extortion and corruption.

Production and Industry.—The products are palm-oil (exports 1916, 67,537 tons) and kernels (exports 1916, 161,580 tons); rubber, ground-nuts, shea-butter, ivory, hides, live stock, ostrich feathers, capsicums, cotton, cocoa, coffee, kola-nuts and various drugs. Tobacco is also grown. There are nurseries for rubber seedlings in the Southern Provinces, and botanical stations at Calabar, Onitsha, Oloke-Meji, and Agege, and at Maiganna, Bida, Zaria, and Ilorin in the Northern Provinces. Mahogany is exported in large quantities. Sheep and goat skins are tanned and dyed. A geological survey under the direction of the Imperial Institute has been completed and the final reports have been published. The natives have worked iron, lead and tin for centuries. Rich alluvial deposits of tin ore have been discovered in the Bauchi, Kano, Zaria, Nassarawa and Kabba Provinces. Lodes have also been found and mining operations have commenced. At present the ore is being won almost entirely by panning or calabashing, but the ground is suitable for sluicing operations, and some of the companies have imported and erected extensive sluicing plant. The ore is exported in the form of washed and dressed concentrates which average 70 per cent. of metallic tin. The tin-bearing area so far as it is now known extends over 9,000 square miles of territory in the Northern Provinces, the output of tin in 1915 being 6,535 tons. There are also deposits of tin in the Southern Provinces. A colliery has been opened by Government at Udi in the Southern Provinces, which is connected by rail with Port Harcourt on the Bonny River. The coal is of good quality.

There are rich reefs of galena carrying a considerable silver return. Pockets of native silver have from time to time been discovered in the vicinity of Orufu and Wukari. There are also deposits of manganese ore, lignite, and monazite (which contains thorium).

Mining rights are vested in the Government, but under an agreement made with the Royal Niger Company at the date of the revocation of the charter, the Niger Company receives half the gross profits derived from royalties on minerals won between the main stream of the Niger on the west and a line running direct from Yola to Zinder on the east for a period of 99 years with effect from January 1, 1900.

Commerce and Communications.—The principal ports are Lagos, Warri, Burutu, Forcados, Sapele, Brass, Degema, Port Harcourt, Bonny, Opobo, and Calabar. Numerous rivers and creeks form the chief routes for transport, and there are many well-made roads driven through the country. There is now a metalled road between Kano and Katsena, a distance of 95 miles, and it is probable that an attempt will be made in 1916 to establish motor transport between these two centres. At Lagos, Calabar, and Forcados, there are engineering and repairing workshops and slipways for the repair of hulls.

At Lagos moles are being constructed, and a deep channel is being made over the Bar which admits ocean steamers entering the harbour.

Considerable trade is carried on in the Northern Provinces, and several new trading stations have been recently opened. There is, besides, a large trade by caravans which, coming from Salaga in the west, the Sahara in the north, and Lake Chad and Wadai in the east, make use of Kano as an emporium.

The trade of the Protectorate is shown as follows (bullion and specie are included):—

	£	£	£	£
1911	886,463	886,268	5,680,980	5,391,467
1912	799,275 <sup>3</sup>	974,241 <sup>3</sup>	6,430,601	6,089,706
1913 <sup>4</sup>	—	—	7,291,819	7,352,377
1914	—	—	6,901,072	6,610,046
1915	—	—	5,016,951	5,660,796

<sup>1</sup> Reliable statements regarding the volume and value of imports and exports are not available, as the bulk of the customs duties are collected on the Coast. The figures given are approximate only, and represent mainly trade via the Niger River.

The chief imports (1915) were: cotton piece goods, 1,507,429*l.*; spirits, 276,614*l.*; iron and steel, 346,048*l.*; bullion and specie, 33,223*l.* Chief exports (1915): palm kernels, 1,692,711*l.*; palm oil, 1,462,162*l.*; raw cotton, 56,351*l.*; tin ore, 723,480*l.*

The shipping entered and cleared in foreign trade is given as follows:—total tonnage, 1911, 1,609,978; 1912, 1,655,817; 1913, 1,735,036; 1914, 1,423,641; 1915, 1,129,363; British tonnage, 1911, 915,838; 1912, 925,611; 1913, 1,041,787; 1914, 971,798; 1915, 1,068,030.

There are (1915) 975 open miles of railways, the Nigeria Railway, and the Bauchi Light Section. A weekly boat-train with sleeping accommodation and a restaurant car runs between Lagos and Zaria. A new trunk railway, 550 miles in length, is being constructed, to start from Port Harcourt (discovered March, 1913, on the Bonny River), proceeding to the Udi coalfields, thence to the Benue River and along the edge of the Bauchi plateau, joining the existing system at the Kaduna. Construction beyond the coalfields has been postponed owing to the war.

There are several thousand miles of telegraph wires, and the system is connected with the French Dahomey system. There are also several hundred miles of telephone wires. A wireless station was opened for traffic at Lagos at the end of 1913.

In 1915 there were 105 Post Offices in Nigeria. The savings bank on December 31, 1915, had 5,477 depositors, with 46,721*l.* to their credit.

A special silver coinage for West Africa was introduced in 1913, the denominations being 2*s.*, 1*s.*, 6*d.*, and 3*d.*, of the same size, weight, and fineness as corresponding coins of the United Kingdom. The new currency, with adequate reserves in London, based on gold and securities, is under the control of the West African Currency Board. A nickel coinage (penny and tenth of a penny) is also in use. In 1916 local currency notes were introduced. At present there are only two denominations, viz., 20*s.* and 10*s.*

The Bank of British West Africa, Ltd., has branches at Lagos, Calabar, Warri, Burutu, Onitsha, Lokoja, Jebba, Zungeru, Kano, and Zaria.

There is a weekly mail service between Liverpool, Forcados, and Calabar via Lagos.

GAMBIA.

Gambia, at the mouth of the river Gambia, formerly formed part of the West African Settlements, but in December, 1888, was erected into a separate Colony. The Colony is administered under a Governor with an Executive and a Legislative Council nominated. Area of Colony proper, 4 square miles; population 7,700. In the Protectorate (area, 4,500 square miles) the population is estimated at 138,000 (census 1911). With exception of the Island of St. Mary, on which Bathurst, the capital, stands, the whole Colony is administered on the Protectorate system. In June, 1901, an agreement was made with the local chief for the administration of the Fuladugu district by the British, both banks of the Gambia being now under direct British control up to the Anglo-French boundary.

There were in 1915 8 elementary Government-aided schools, with 1,531 pupils enrolled; and an average attendance of about 459 standard pupils; Government grant, proportionate to results (1915), 641*l*. Of the elementary schools three are Roman Catholic, three Wesleyan, one Anglican, and one Mohammedan. The Wesleyans have also a secondary school with 25 boys, and a technical school with 17 pupils, which receives a grant of 300*l*. Total Government expenditure on education (1915), 1,472*l*. There is a company of the West African Frontier Force of 137 men. The armed police has a strength of 92 men. In 1915 13 cases were tried in the supreme court; 574 cases were disposed of in the police court; 336 cases were reported from the Protectorate.

There is a fortnightly mail-service between Liverpool and Bathurst. Internal communication is maintained by steamers or launches. There are two post offices. Postal packets and parcels dealt with in 1915, 147,688. Bathurst is connected with St. Vincent (Cape de Verde) and with Sierra Leone by cable, but there are no local telegraphs or railways. The Gambia savings bank had 767 depositors in 1915, and deposits amounting to 3,704*l*. A special West African silver currency was introduced in 1913 (see under Nigeria, p. 243). The Bank of British West Africa is the only bank in the colony.

Governor.—Sir Edward John Cameron, K.C.M.G., appointed February, 1914 (2,500*l*.).

Colonial Secretary.—W. Telfer Campbell.

GOLD COAST.

The Gold Coast stretches for 334 miles along the Gulf of Guinea, between the French Ivory Coast and German Togoland. The Colony is administered by a Governor with an Executive and a Legislative Council, both nominated, with four unofficial members in latter. The area of the Colony, Ashanti, and Protectorate is about 80,000 square miles; population, census 1911, 1,503,386; Europeans, 1915, 2,206. Chief towns: Accra, 19,585; Secondee, 7,725; Cape Coast Castle, 11,364; Quittah, Saltpond, Winnebah, Axim, and Akuse. There were in 1915 14 Government schools, and 154 inspected schools which are under the control of the various religious bodies, the Basel, Wesleyan, Roman Catholic, Bremen Missions, Church of England (S.P.G.), and African Methodist Episcopal Zionist; average attendance of primary and secondary schools, 15,918 (1915); enrolled 20,681; Government expenditure on education in 1915, 32,414*l*. There are also 276 unassisted primary schools supported by the various religious bodies. The strength of the police (1915), 19 European officers and 1,098 of other ranks. This includes 1 European officer and 125 other ranks in Ashanti. The constabulary (Northern Territories) consists of 2 officers and about 320 of other ranks. Summary convictions in 1915, 9,761; convictions in Supreme Courts, 289. Staple products and exports, palm oil, kola nuts, palm kernels, cocoa, and indiarubber; the export of valuable native woods is increasing. The botanical station at Aburi aids in the plantation of coconut trees, rubber, cocoa, coffee, cotton, pepper, nutmeg, pimento, and croton. Gold is found in quartz, in banket, and in alluvium. The output of gold in recent years was: 1911, 253,976 oz. (1,079,024*l*.); 1912, 352,957 oz. (1,499,469*l*.); 1913, 388,126 oz. (1,648,770*l*.); 1914, 419,510 oz. (1,744,498*l*.); 1915, 404,780 oz. (1,719,638*l*.); 1916, 1,615,306*l*. Many of the coast inhabitants are fishermen, and there is considerable traffic in dried fish by rail into the interior.

British only	1,557,686	1,625,804	1,782,545	1,863,207	1,354,217

There is a Government railway, from Secondee on the coast to Coomassie, a total length of 168 miles; capital expenditure to end of 1915, 3,049,246*l.* A line between Accra and Mangoase (40 miles) has been constructed, and it is proposed that further construction shall be put in hand in 1917. Road construction is proceeding rapidly; there are over 320 miles of main roads and 2,100 miles of secondary roads. There are in the Colony 1,319 miles of telegraph line and 52 offices, and telephone exchanges at Accra, Secondee, Tarquah and Dodowa; telegrams in 1914, 293,937. There is a wireless telegraph station at Accra. The number of letters, packets, &c., handled in the postal service in 1914 was 6,337,235. In 1915 the savings bank had 5,107 depositors with 55,613*l.* to their credit.

Ashanti was placed under British protection on August 27, 1896, and a British Resident was appointed to Coomassie. Under orders in Council of September 26, 1901, the country was definitely annexed by Great Britain, the Governor of the Gold Coast being appointed Governor of Ashanti, though the laws and ordinances of the Gold Coast do not apply to the annexed territory. The population (census 1911) was 287,814. Coomassie, the chief town, has about 24,000 inhabitants. There are Government schools at Kumasi and Sunyani, and 44 mission schools (1915). Police force (1915), 124; convictions (1914), 2,800, but there is little serious crime. Revenue (1915), 52,644*l.* (from post office, liquor licences, rents, fees, &c.). Expenditure, 105,804*l.* (excluding Gold Coast Regiment) Agriculture is extending, cocoa and rubber plantations are being formed. Gold output (1915), 111,608 oz. (474,240*l.*). In the western parts of the Gold Coast Colony and especially of Ashanti are rich forests with excellent timber trees (mahogany, cedar, &c.), trees yielding fruits, rich in oil, rubber-bearing plants, and species yielding gum copal. The country is well watered, and with proper restraints on wasteful native farming and on over-exploitation, would contain inexhaustible supplies of valuable forest products. On the eastern side the forests are sparser, though timber and oil trees are common and game plentiful; the products there are chiefly maize, koko, yams, bananas, ground-nuts, and cocoa, the plantations of which are rapidly extending. Imports into Ashanti, 1915. 919,900*l.*; exports, 1,525,291*l.* (mainly gold, 474,240*l.*; cocoa, 725,161*l.*; kola, 200,000*l.*; rubber, 20,185*l.*).

In 1901 the Northern Territories lying to the north of the parallel of 8° N. lat., bounded on the west and north by the French possessions and on the east by the German possessions, were placed under British protection. They are administered, under the Governor, by a Chief Commissioner with his headquarters at Tamale. The country is divided into three provinces under Commissioners; the Southern Province, with headquarters at Tamale; North-Eastern province, with headquarters at Navarro; and North-Western Province with headquarters at Wa. By the census taken in 1911 the population of the region to the north of Kintampo (variously estimated at from 38,000 to 50,000 square miles) is put at about 360,000. The Mohammedans have substantial mosques; there are Roman Catholic and other missions, and a Government school at Tamale (average attendance of 80 in 1915), and one at Gambaga (average attendance, 15 in 1915). The revenue (1913) amounted to 3,709*l.*; expenditure, 82,419*l.* Good permanent roads are being made. The Northern Territories are capable of producing various agricultural crops (cereals, indigo, tobacco), and are said to contain wide auriferous areas.

There is one bank (with 8 branches), the Bank of British West Africa, Ltd. The legal currency of the Gold Coast is British sterling; silver coins are legal tender to any amount, and bronze up to one shilling. French, Spanish, and American gold coins are legal at fixed values. A silver currency has been introduced with good results, but for small purchases cowries are still used (see under Nigeria, p. 243). There is also a subsidiary nickel currency.

Governor of the Gold Coast.—Sir Hugh Clifford, K.C.M.G. (3,000*l.* and 1,000*l.* duty allowance).

Chief Commissioner of Ashanti.—F. C. Fuller, C.M.G.

Chief Commissioner of the Northern Territories of the Gold Coast.—Captain C. H. Armitage, D.S.O., C.M.G.

SIERRA LEONE.

Sierra Leone lies between French Guinea on the north and the Republic of Liberia on the east and south-east. Sierra Leone proper consists of a peninsula about 26 miles long, and 12 miles broad, with an area of about 300 square miles, terminating in Cape Sierra Leone. The Colony of Sierra Leone extends from the Scarcies River on the north, to the border of Liberia on the south, 180 miles. It extends inland to a distance varying from 8 to 20 miles and includes the Yellaboi and other islands towards the north, as well as Sherbro and several smaller islands to the south, but the Isles de Los were ceded to France under the Convention of 1904. There are in the Colony Executive and Legislative Councils, nominated.

Area of the Colony 4,000 square miles approximately; population (census, 1911), 75,572, of whom 702 were whites. The birth-rate for Freetown (1915) was 21 per thousand, and the death-rate 29; infant mortality is very high, but is decreasing. The assisted schools are all denominational, belonging to 8 missionary societies. In 1915 there were 112 elementary schools with 7,005 enrolled pupils and an average attendance of 4,760; grants-in-aid to the assisted schools, 100 in number, 8,285*l.* There were (1915) 13 secondary schools in the Colony, 8 of which are missionary institutions, while the remainder are owned privately. A technical school had (1915) 30 pupils. Fourah Bay College is affiliated to the University of Durham; at the close of 1915 it had 15 students. There are 5 Mohammedan schools in the Colony, with an average attendance (1915) of 411. Mohammedan youths are being trained as teachers. Chief town, Freetown, 84,090 inhabitants (1911), headquarters of H.M.'s forces in West Africa. The battalion of the West African Frontier Force has its headquarters at Daru on the Moa River. Freetown, the greatest seaport in West Africa, is a second-class Imperial coaling station, with an excellent harbour fortified with several batteries. Police force at end of 1915 had an authorised strength of 285, including 3 European officers. There is a Supreme Court, and a police and petty debt courts in each district; in 1915, 45 persons were convicted of indictable offences in the Supreme Court, and 2,262 summarily convicted in the police courts.

A Government railway, a single line of 2ft. 6in. gauge, is open from Freetown to Pendenbu, near the Liberian frontier, a length of 227½ miles. From Boia Junction, 64½ miles from Freetown, a branch line runs to Kamabai, a distance of 104 miles; and a further extension to Baga in the Koinadugu District is contemplated. The receipts in 1915 amounted to 147,113*l.*, and the expenditure to 139,619*l.* In 1915, 1,618,921 postal packets were dealt with in the Colony; money order transactions amounted to 115,559*l.* There are 536 miles of combined telegraph and telephone service in operation. There are 51 post offices and postal agencies. At the end of 1915 there were 6,606 depositors in the savings bank with 109,547*l.* (inclusive of interest) to their credit. The West African Silver Currency was introduced in 1913 (see under Nigeria, p. 243); but British coins are still largely used. The five-franc piece is also legal tender, at the value of 3*s.* 10½*d.*

The Protectorate.—On March 7, 1913, an Order in Council was issued providing for the administration of the Protectorate of Sierra Leone. The Order applies to the territories, not being portions of the Colony of Sierra Leone, lying between the sixth and tenth degrees of north latitude and the tenth and fourteenth degrees of west longitude, and beginning at the extreme southerly point of the Colony on the Anglo-Liberian boundary, as delimited under the provisions of the Anglo-Liberian Conventions, November 11, 1885, and January 21, 1911. The Protectorate extends inland about 180 miles.

The Governor and Commander-in-Chief for the time being of the Colony of Sierra Leone is also the Governor of the Protectorate. Authority is given to the Legislative Council of Sierra Leone, by ordinance, to exercise and provide for giving effect to the powers and jurisdiction acquired by the Crown.

The Protectorate has an area of 27,000 square miles, and a population, according to the census of 1911, of 1,327,560. The Protectorate was proclaimed August 21, 1896, and the whole territory has been divided into 5 districts, each of which is placed under a European commissioner. Circuit courts are held at the chief centres of population; convictions in 1915, 95. There are also district commissioners' courts, chiefs' courts for purely native cases (not serious crime), and combined courts (a chief and a non-native) for small debts and trivial misdemeanours (assault, abusive language) arising between native and non-native. The chief articles of imports are cotton goods, spirits, hardware and tobacco; the chief exports are palm kernels, kola nuts, and palm oil. There are several mission and Mohammedan schools. A Government school for the sons and nominees of native chiefs was established at Bo in the Railway district of the Protectorate on March 1, 1906. The school, which is under European supervision, opened with 18 pupils; at the end of 1915 there were 113 pupils.

EGYPT.

(MISR.)

Sultan.

Hussein Kâmil Pasha, G.C.B., born in 1854, son of the Khedive Ismail Pasha; became Sultan on December 19, 1914; married the present Sultana (second marriage) on December 23, 1886. Offspring: (1) Prince Kamâl ed-Din, born in 1875, married in 1901 Princess Ni'mat Hânem, who was born in 1882, (2) Princess Kâzîma Hânem, born in 1877, (3) Princess Qâdria Hânem, born May 26, 1888, (4) Princess Samiha Hânem, born July 17, 1889, (5) Princess Badiha Hânem, born July 3, 1897, married September 6, 1913, and died on November 6, 1913.

He has three surviving brothers, Prince Ibrâhim Hilmi, born in 1860; Prince Mahmûd Hamdi, born in 1863; and Prince Ahmad Fââd, born in 1868; and three sisters, Princess Fâtima, born in 1853; Princess Amîna, born in 1874 and Princess Ni'mat Alla, born in 1877.

The present sovereign of Egypt is the eighth ruler of the dynasty of Muhammed Ali, appointed Governor of Egypt in 1805, who made himself, in 1811, absolute master of the country by force of arms. The position of the Sultan's father, Ismail I.—forced to abdicate, under pressure of the British and French Governments, in 1879—was recognised by the Imperial Hatti Sherif of February 13, 1841, issued under the guarantee of the five great European Powers, which established the hereditary succession to the throne of Egypt under the same rules and regulations as those to the throne of Turkey. The title given to Muhammad Ali and his immediate successors was the Turkish one of 'Vali,' or Viceroy; but this was changed by an Imperial firman of June 12, 1867 into the Persian-Arabic of 'Khîdêw-Mîsr,' or, as more commonly called, Khedive. By a firman of June 12, 1866, the succession to the throne of Egypt was made direct from father to son, instead of descending after the Turkish law to the eldest heir; and in 1873 the tribute was fixed at £692,850 (sterling). By a firman issued June 8, 1873, the Sultan of Turkey granted to Ismail I. the rights hitherto withheld of concluding commercial treaties with foreign Powers, and of maintaining armies.

On December 18, 1914, a British Protectorate over Egypt was declared, and on the next day the following Proclamation was issued:—"His Britannic Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs gives notice that, in view of the action of His Highness Abbâs Hilmi Pasha, lately Khedive of Egypt, who has adhered to the King's enemies, His Majesty's Government have seen fit to depose him from the Khedivate, and that high dignity has been offered, with the title of Sultan of Egypt, to His Highness Prince Hussein Kâmil Pasha, eldest living Prince of the family of Muhammad Ali, and has been accepted by him." The British Protectorate has been recognised by France, Russia, Belgium, Norway, Serbia, Greece, and Portugal.

The new Egyptian flag consists of three white crescents with their backs to the staff, each with a five-pointed white star between the horns on a red field. This flag was the personal standard of the Khedive, and now takes the place of the former national flag, which was distinguished from the Turkish by having a star of five instead of six points.

The predecessors of the present ruler of Egypt were—

Government and Constitution.

The administration of Egypt is carried on by native Ministers, subject to the ruling of the Sultan. From 1879 to 1883 two Controllers-General, appointed by France and England, had considerable powers in the direction of the affairs of the country (Khedivial Decree, November 10, 1879). In the summer of 1882, in consequence of a military rebellion, England intervened, subdued the rising, and restored the authority of the Khedive. In this intervention England was not joined by France, and as a result, on January 18, 1883, the Khedive signed a decree abolishing the joint control of England and France. In the place of the Control, the Khedive, on the recommendation of England, appointed an English financial adviser, without whose concurrence no financial decision could be taken. The Khedivial Decree appended to and approved by the Anglo-French Convention of April 4, 1904, removed most of the restrictions which encumbered the management of Egyptian Finance. No modification may be introduced into the terms of the Decree without the assent of the signatory powers to the Convention of London of 1885.

The Egyptian Ministry, composed of seven members, first appointed on December 19, 1914, is constituted (February, 1917) as follows:—

Premier and Minister of the Interior.—Hussein Rushdi Pasha, G.C.M.G.

Minister of Public Works and of War.—Ismail Sirri Pasha, K.C.M.G.

Minister of Education.—Adli Yeghen Pasha.

Minister of Finance.—Yûsuf Wahba Pasha.

Minister of Pious Foundations.—Ibrahim Fathi Pasha, K.C.M.G.

Minister of Justice.—Abd el Khâlek Surûdt Pasha.

Minister of Agriculture.—Ahmed Hilmi Pasha.

The Ministries of Pious Foundations and of Agriculture were instituted in 1913.

On May 1, 1883, an organic law was promulgated by the Khedive creating a number of representative institutions, including a Legislative Council, a General Assembly, and Provincial Councils. But these bodies were mainly consultative and the Khedive and his Ministers retained most of the legislative power. The above Law was replaced in July, 1913, by the present Organic and Electoral Laws, by which for the Legislative Council and General Assembly was substituted a new body called the Legislative Assembly. This consists of (i) the Ministers, (ii) 66 elected members, and (iii) 17 members nominated by the Government to represent certain minorities. The elections are indirect: every 50 electors choose an elector-delegate, and the elector-delegate elect the members of the Assembly, but are liable to be recalled before any fresh exercise of their functions. The members of this Assembly sit for six years, their numbers being renewed one-third at a time every two years: they also receive payment. The Assembly can initiate legislation and must be consulted on all measures relating to loans, land-tax assessment, or modifications of the railway or irrigation systems. The Government, however, is not bound by the resolutions of the Assembly, and, in the event of a disagreement between the two about any proposed law, the Government can eventually enact the law in such form as it may think fit. The Assembly has the right of veto on new direct, personal or land tax-s, which cannot be imposed without its sanction. The ordinary session of the Assembly is from November 1 to May 31.

The Provincial Councils have been reorganised, and in 1909 were endowed with the powers of applying bye-laws, authorising public-markets, fixing the number and pay of ghalirs (village watchmen), authorising the creation of ezbas (hamlets), and they are created local authorities in connection with elementary vernacular education and trade schools. They consist of two elected representatives from each Markaz. The Mudir is the ex-officio President of the Council.

Egypt Proper is administratively divided into 5 governorships (muháfzas) of principal towns, and 14 mudirías or provinces, subdivided into districts or Markazes. In 1890 the Powers consented to a decree constituting a Municipality in Alexandria, with power to impose local taxes.<sup>1</sup>

In thirteen towns (Mansûra, Medinet el-Fayûm, Tanta, Zagazig, Damanhûr, Beni-Suêf, Mahalla el-Kubra, Minya, Mit Ghamr, Zifta, Kafr el-Zayât, Helwân, and Port Said), Mixed Commissions have been formed with power to impose taxes on residents who have given an express consent to be taxed for municipal purposes.

In 37 other towns a third class of town council (Local Commissions) exists, but there is no power to impose local taxes, the revenue being derived from grants from the central Government and receipts from water supply, slaughter houses, &c.

A new district has been established over the west coast and western desert. It is called the Western Directorate and is placed under the control of the Director-General, Coastguard Administration.

Area and Population.

The total area of Egypt proper, including the Libyan Desert, the region between the Nile and the Red Sea, and the Sinai Peninsula, but excluding the Sudan, is about 350,000 square miles; but the cultivated and settled area, that is, the Nile Valley and Delta, covers only 12,226 square miles. Canals, roads, date plantations, &c., cover 1,900 square miles; 2,860 square miles are comprised in the surface of the Nile, marshes, and lakes. Egypt is divided into two great districts—'Masr-el-Bahri,' or Lower Egypt, and 'El-Said,' or Upper Egypt.

The following table gives the area of the settled land surface, and the results of the census of 1907:—

Of the total population, 5,667,074 were males and 5,620,285 females. A population consisting of 3,884 persons was enumerated in the Oasis of Siwa.

The foreign population, 286,302 in all, comprised 62,973 Greeks, 34,926 Italians, 20,653 British, 14,591 French, 7,704 Austro-Hungarians, 2,410 Russians, 1,847 Germans, 1,385 Persians, and 139,813 of other nationalities, including Sudanese and non-Egyptian Ottomans.

The growth of the general population of the country is exhibited by the following figures:—

1800 (French estimate) . . . . .	2,460,200	1882 (Census) . . . . .	6,831,131
1821 (Muhammad Ali) . . . . .	2,536,400	1897 (Census) . . . . .	9,734,405
1846 (Census) . . . . .	4,476,440	1907 (Census) . . . . .	11,287,359

The average annual increase from 1846 to 1882 was 1·25 per cent.; from 1882 to 1897, 2·76 per cent.; 1897-1907, 1·5 per cent.; from 1846-1907, 1·53 per cent.

For the distribution of the population, according to occupation in 1907, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1915, p. 251.

The principal towns, with their estimated populations in July, 1916, are:—Cairo, 740,000; Alexandria, 405,882; Port Said, 61,380; Tintah, 58,957; Damanhour, 46,555; Mansourah, 45,294; Assiout, 43,731; Fayoum, 41,606; Zagazig, 39,001; Damietta, 36,643; Mehalla el-Kubra, 38,020; Minya, 30,246; Belgas, 23,870; Akhmim, 26,966; Beni-Suêf, 30,827; Menûf, 25,290; Shebîn el-Kôm, 26,347; Mellawi, 22,947; Qena, 21,509.

Religion and Instruction.

In 1907 the population consisted of 10,366,826 Moslems; 706,322 Copts; 38,635 Jews. Christians: 12,736 Protestants; 57,744 Roman Catholics; 76,953 Greek Orthodox; 27,937 Eastern Christians; 206 others. Thus Moslems formed 91·84 per cent. of the population; Christians, 7·81 per cent.; Jews, 0·34 per cent.; others, 0·01 per cent. The principal seat of Koranic learning is the Mosque and University of El-Azhar at Cairo, founded year 361 of the Hegira, 972 of the Christian era. In 1914 it had 405 professors and 9,749 students of Islam and subjects connected therewith. The Mosque of El-Ahmadi at Tanta had 113 professors and 2,860 students at the end of 1914. The Mosque of Damietta had in the same year 16 professors and 411 students, that of Dessûqi (Tanta), 16 professors and 280 students, and the Meshiakhat Olama of Alexandria 75 professors and 1,854 students. All these institutions are under the supervision of the Council of the University of El-Azhar.

There are in Egypt large numbers of native Christians connected with the various Oriental churches; of these, the largest and most influential are the Copts, the descendants of the ancient Egyptians; their creed is Orthodox (Jacobite), and was adopted in the first century of the Christian era. Its head is the Patriarch of Alexandria as the successor of St. Mark. There are three metropolitans and twelve bishops in Egypt, one metropolitan and two bishops in Abyssinia, and one bishop for Khartum; there are also arch-priests, priests, deacons, and monks. Priests must be married before ordination, but celibacy is imposed on monks and high dignitaries. The Copts use the Diocletian (or Martyrs') calendar, which differs by 284 years from the Gregorian calendar.

The following table shows the proportion of illiterates in the various religious communities (1907 census):—

Religion	Population	Number illiterate per 1000
		Males	Females	Total
Moslems . . . . .	10,269,445	922	993	960
Copts . . . . .	706,322	812	984	897
Jews . . . . .	38,635	141	6·7	662
Others . . . . .	175,576	281	523	392
Total . . . . .	11,199,978	902	989	946

Subject to certain adjustments for purposes of comparison, it appears that the proportion of the native Egyptian population able to read and write in 1907, as compared with the returns of the previous census in 1897, is as follows:—

1907		1897
Males	Females	Males	Females
85 per 1000	3 per 1000	80 per 1000	2 per 1000

Until 1897, Government initiative in the matter of education was limited to supplying a Europeanised course of education designed to fit Egyptians for various branches of the public service and for professional careers. This system of schools, which owes its origin to the Europeanising zeal of Muhammad Ali Pasha, the first viceroy, consists of Primary Schools, Secondary Schools, and Professional Colleges (Law, Medicine, Engineering, Veterinary, Military, Teaching, Accountancy and Commerce, and Agriculture), in addition to a number of special schools.

Scattered throughout the country there have existed from time immemorial a number of indigenous schools called 'Maktabs.' In 1897, the Ministry of Education endeavoured to bring these independent 'Maktabs' voluntarily under Departmental supervision by means of a system of inspection and reward. Government aid was made dependent upon daily instruction being given in reading, writing, and arithmetic, apart from any religious teaching, and upon the school reaching a satisfactory level of efficiency. The extent to which the scheme had developed is shown in the following table :

Year	Maktabs awarded grants-in-aid and under inspection					Grant-in-aid £E
	Number of Maktabs	Teachers	Attendance
			Boys	Girls	Total
1911-12	3,275	6,678	174,209	17,223	191,432	22,932

1914-15	3,799	8,325	228,553	20,034	257,587	22,610

Since 1913 the grants-in-aid to maktabs situated within the areas governed by Provincial Councils have been paid from the funds of the Councils.

The following table gives statistics (corrected to December 31st, 1916), concerning the schools under the immediate direction of the Egyptian Government in 1897 and 1916 respectively. The schools marked with an asterisk are under Departments other than the Ministry of Education.

The number of schools under the control of the Provincial Councils on December 31st, 1915, either through direct management or through grants-in-aid, was as follows :—

	No. of Schools	No. of Pupils
		Boys	Girls	Total
Maktabas (Elementary Vernacular Schools)	3,545	214,454	23,887	238,341

Total	3,666	225,073	25,502	250,575

By agreement with the Provincial Councils it was decided in 1912 that the Ministry of Education should hand over to the Councils the duty of making provision for Elementary Schools in their areas, including the giving of grants-in-aid to the private Maktabas. Tentative steps towards the devolution of Primary Education have also been taken by the transfer of two Primary Schools.

The Ministry of Education has under its direct management (December, 1915) :—

Under other Government Departments are the School of Law (230 students), the Military School (76 cadets), the Veterinary School (46 students), the Higher School of Agriculture (121 students), and Intermediate School of Agriculture (100 students), the School for Cadets (423 students), the Police School (57 cadets, 300 constables), and the 2 reformatories (811 boys, 88 girls).

Justice.

The indigenous tribunals of the country are the Mahkemas, presided over by the Qadis. At the present time, they retain jurisdiction only in matters of personal law (marriage, succession, &c.), and wakfs—the latter being either charitable foundations, or family settlements with an ultimate remainder in favour of a charitable foundation—and also in certain non-religious cases (e.g. succession) between non-Moslem natives. In matters of personal law other than intestate succession non-Mussulmans are, however, in general subject to their own Patriarchate, or other religious authority. In other matters, natives are justiciable before the so-called Native Tribunals established in 1883. These now consist of 90 Summary Tribunals, each presided over by a single judge, with civil jurisdiction in matters up to £E150 in value, and criminal jurisdiction in offences punishable by fine or by imprisonment up to three years, that is, police offences and misdemeanours; eight Central Tribunals, each of the Chambers of which consists of three judges; and a Court of Appeal at Cairo, about one-third of its members being European. Under a law of 1904, there are also weekly sittings in the Governorate Qisims (to the number of 28) for the disposal of petty offences, the judge having powers up to three months' imprisonment or fine of £E10, and the prosecution being conducted by the police. Civil cases not within the competence of the Summary Tribunals are heard in first instance by the Central Tribunals, with an appeal to the Court of Appeal. The Central Tribunals also hear civil and criminal appeals from the Summary Tribunals. Since 1905 serious crimes (and, under a law of 1910, all press offences) are tried at the Central Tribunals by three judges of the Court of Appeal sitting as an Assize Court, assizes being held monthly. There is a recourse on points of law, in criminal matters, to five judges of the Court of Appeal sitting in Cairo as a Court of Cassation. The prosecution before Summary Tribunals and Assize Courts is entrusted to the Parquet, which is directed by a Procureur Général; the investigation of crime is ordinarily conducted by the Parquet, or by the police under the direction of the Parquet: cases going before an Assize Court are further submitted to a special committing judge. Offences against irrigation laws, &c., are tried by special administrative tribunals.

The so-called "Cantonal Courts," created by a law of July, 1912, should also be mentioned. They are composed of village notables, and have general civil jurisdiction in suits up to £E5 in value, besides an extended jurisdiction in special matters, and a petty criminal jurisdiction with penalties up to 24 hours' imprisonment or £E25 fine. The jurisdiction of each court extends to a group of villages. The courts are now 236 in number.

Owing to the Capitulations, which still apply to Egypt, foreigners are exempted from the jurisdiction of the local tribunals. Mixed tribunals were instituted in 1876, consisting partly of native and partly of foreign judges, with jurisdiction, in civil matters, between natives and foreigners and between foreigners of different nationalities, or even between foreigners of the same nationality if the dispute relates to land in Egypt. These Tribunals have, also, a limited penal jurisdiction, notably in cases of police offences, offences against the bankruptcy laws, and misappropriation of property seized by order of the tribunal. There are three Mixed Tribunals of First Instance, with a Court of Appeal sitting at Alexandria.

The foreign debt of Egypt began in 1862, when loans amounting to 3,292,800*l.* were issued for the purpose of extinguishing the floating debt. Other issues followed in rapid succession. The dual control by England and France began in 1879. In January, 1880, the two Controllers-General reported that Egypt could not possibly meet her engagements in full, and in July the Liquidation Law, in accordance with the recommendation of an International Commission of the Great Powers, was promulgated. By this law the Unified debt was reduced to 4 per cent. interest; further conversions were made, and the Unified debt thus increased to 60,958,240 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; certain unconsolidated liabilities were added to the Preference debt, which thus rose to 22,743,800 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; and the Daira Sania debt was increased to 9,512,900 $\frac{1}{2}$ , the interest being reduced to 4 per cent. In 1885 and subsequent years further loans and conversions were entered into.

The Daira Sania and the Domains loans were paid off on October 15, 1905, and June 1, 1913, respectively. The amount and the charge of the various debts in April, 1916, were as follows:—

	Debt	Charge
	£	£E
Guaranteed Loan, 3 per cent. . . . .	6,803,500	307,125
Privileged Debt, $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. . . . .	31,127,780	1,062,235
Unified Debt, 4 per cent. . . . .	55,971,960	2,182,900
Total . . . . .	93,903,240	3,552,260

On April 1, 1916, the debt stood at £stg.93,903,240, inclusive of the amount of £stg.5,599,820 held by the Government and the Caisse de la Dette Publique.

In 1915 the debt was reduced by £125,600.

The charges on account of debts of all kinds (including tribute), as shown in the estimates for 1916-17, amount to £E4,604,061.

In 1888 and 1890, reserve funds were established, the balances of which, in virtue of the Anglo-French Convention of April 4, 1904, were placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government in 1905, less certain sums remaining in the hands of the Caisse de la Dette Publique for the service of the debt. The amount received by the Egyptian Government was carried to a General Reserve Fund.

In the General Reserve Fund on April 1, 1916, there was a balance of £E4,799,642.

Defence.

EGYPTIAN ARMY.

On September 19, 1882, the existing Egyptian army was disbanded. The organisation of a new army was entrusted to a British general officer, who was given the title of Sirdar. Service is compulsory, but owing to the small contingent required only a fraction (4 per cent.) of the men who are liable actually serve. Service is for three years. In the Sudanese battalions service is voluntary and extended. The army consists of 5 squadrons of cavalry, a camel corps, 5 batteries, 18 battalions of infantry (of which 6 are Sudanese and 1 is a special "Equatorial" battalion), a railway battalion, and various departments. Most of the higher posts are held by British officers. The strength of the army is about 17,000.

ARMY OF OCCUPATION.

Before the outbreak of war in August, 1914, the British garrison, or army of occupation, consisted of a cavalry regiment, a horse artillery battery, a mountain battery, a company of engineers, and 4 battalions (one company in Cyprus) stationed in the Nile Delta, and of a battalion of infantry and detachment of garrison artillery stationed in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

The establishment, including departmental services, was 6,067 of all ranks. The Egyptian Government contributed 150,000*l.* towards the cost of these troops. No definite information can be given about the troops in Egypt during the war, but it is known that the forces in Egypt from Great Britain, India, and the Dominions have been very largely increased.

Production and Industry.

The cultivable area of Egypt proper was reckoned in 1915-16 at 8,005,925 feddāns (1 feddān = 1·038 acre), and of this 2,773,654 were uncultivated for want of reclamation. The readjustment of the land-tax is now complete, the old distinction between Kharāgi and Ushūri tax has disappeared, and the taxes on land range from 2 piastres (1 piastre = 2*d.*) to 164 piastres per feddān according to the rental value. The corvée, or forced labour, has been abolished, but the inhabitants are still called out to guard or repair the Nile banks in flood time, and are also liable in any sudden emergency; in 1913 none were called out; in 1914, 21,600; in 1916, 113,000. The agricultural population (Fellahin) forms about 62 per cent. of the whole. A large proportion of them are small landholders with under 51 feddāns, while others, almost or altogether landless, are labourers, the relation between the employers and the employed being mostly hereditary. The following table shows, for 1915, the number of landholders and the distribution of the land between foreigners and natives:—

Extent of holding in feddāns	Foreigners		Natives		Total of area		Total of landowners

The Egyptian agricultural year includes three seasons or crops. The leading winter crops, sown in November and harvested in May and June, are cereal produce of all kinds; the principal summer crops, sown in March and harvested in October and November, are cotton, sugar, and rice; the autumn crops, sown in July and gathered in September and October, are rice, maize, millet, and vegetables generally. In Fayūm and Lower Egypt, where perennial irrigation is effected by means of a network of canals tapping the Nile and traversing the Delta in every direction, the chief crops are cotton, rice, Indian corn, wheat, barley, clover, cucumber; in Upper Egypt, south of Deirūt, where the basin system of irrigation, i.e. submersion at high Nile, is generally adhered to, cereals and vegetables are produced; north of Deirūt the same conditions prevail as in Lower Egypt, except that no rice is grown. Where there is perennial irrigation, two or three crops are secured annually.

Extensive reservoir works, consisting of a dam at Aswān, a barrage at Esna, a barrage and lock at Asyūt, and a barrage at Zifta, have been completed. The original storage capacity of the reservoir was 1,065,000,000 cubic metres. The level of the dam has been raised by 6 metres and the capacity of the reservoir increased to 2,423,000,000 cubic metres. The barrage at Esna ensures adequate irrigation to a large area of basin land even in a year of low Nile. North of Deirût an area of approximately half a million acres has been converted from basin to perennial irrigation in the last ten years. The production of cotton in six years was :—

Year	Qantârs	Year	Qantârs
1910-11	7,505,000	1913-14	7,664,000
1911-12	7,388,000	1914-15	6,451,000
1912-13	7,499,000	1915-16	4,775,000

In 1916 the area and yield of wheat were 1,447,163 acres and 994,552 tons; barley, 438,830 acres and 287,037 tons; maize and millet, 2,098,090 acres; and rice, 150,310 acres.

In 1916 the sugar exported amounted to 28,818 tons, valued at £E640,640, and the cotton exported amounted to 5,416,936 qantârs, valued at £E29,813,682 (1 qantâr = 99·05 lbs).

The quantity of raw cotton exported was, in 1914, 5,909,758 cantars, valued at £E18,669,861; in 1915, 6,899,122 cantars, valued at £E19,145,644; in 1916, 5,416,936 cantars, valued at £E29,813,682.

Of the total imports in 1914 the value of £E18,434,301, and of the exports the value of £E23,117,486, passed through the port of Alexandria; in 1915, of the imports, £E51,037,435; of the exports, £E25,621,591; in 1916, of the imports, £E22,637,649; of the exports, £E36,099,233.

Goods imported into Egypt are examined by experts, who determine their value according to the market price in their original country, plus the cost of transport, freight, insurance, &c. In order, however, to facilitate customs operations, the administration, in communication with the merchants interested, establishes, on the same basis as above, periodical tariffs for common articles of importation. In the statistics of the Custom House, the values are estimated according to the estimated price which served as the basis for the payment of duty now fixed at 8 per cent. ad valorem (except coal, liquid fuel, charcoal, firewood, timber for building purposes, petroleum; oxen, cows, sheep and goats, whether alive or cold stored, the duty on which was reduced to 4 per cent. ad valorem from November 25, 1905) without taking into account the amount of that duty. As regards exports, there are tariffs for nearly all of them, estimated in the same manner as the tariffs of imports. The quantities recorded in statistics are those declared by the merchants and controlled by the Customs.

The origin of imports and destination of exports are declared by importers and exporters, and controlled, as much as possible, by the searchers and appraisers of the Custom House.

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1916, excluding warships, and vessels requisitioned by the military authorities, 3,349 steamers of a net registered tonnage of 8,794,979 tons entered, and 3,430 steamers of a net registered tonnage of 9,046,236 tons cleared, all the Egyptian ports (Alexandria, Port Said, Suez Basin, Suez Road, Tor and El Kosseir). The total number of sailing vessels (both foreign and coasting trade, but excluding sponge and fishing boats, none in 1916) that entered the ports was 1,026 of 59,397 tons, and of those that cleared, 1,027 of 61,309 tons.

The number of passengers (civil and military) who went through the canal was, in 1908, 219,024 ; in 1909, 213,358 ; in 1910, 233,978 ; in 1911, 275,694 ; in 1912, 266,406 ; in 1913, 232,235 ; in 1914, 391,773 ; 1915, 210,530.

The Suez Canal is 103 miles long, including 4 miles of approach channels for the harbours, connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea, opened for navigation November 17, 1869. The concession to the Suez Canal Company expires on November 17, 1968.

Internal Communications.

On March 31, 1916, there were (exclusive of sidings) 2,076 miles of rails (double and single) belonging to and worked by the State, and 840 miles of rails of agricultural light railways owned by private companies: 1,264 miles of State and 737 miles of companies' rails are in the Delta, and 812 miles of State and 103 miles of light railways are in Upper Egypt. This is exclusive of the Sudan military railway to Khartum, 375 miles long, of gauge 4 ft. 8½ in. The railways have a gauge of 4 ft. 8½ in. inside rails, except the line from Luxor to Aswan, which is 3 ft. 6 in. gauge, and that to the Western Oases, which is 2 ft. 5½ in.

The following table shows for the last five years the length of line of the State Railways, the number of passengers and weight of goods carried, and the net receipts :—

Year	Line	Number of Passengers	Goods carried	Net receipts
	Miles		Tons	£E
1911	1,481	28,695,000	4,318,582	1,558,130
1912	1,487	29,632,000	4,768,150	1,622,081
1913	1,486	29,446,000	4,496,381	1,628,845
1914-15	2,065	24,214,000	3,594,049	1,061,902
1915-16	2,110	26,807,000	4,148,000	1,520,210

The working expenses, £E2,159,588 in 1915-16, represent an average of 58·88 per cent. of the gross receipts, which were £E3,667,932.

The telegraphs and telephones belonging to the Egyptian Government were, at the end of 1915, of a total length of 9,686 kilom., the length of the wire being 22,481 kilom. The Eastern Telegraph Company, by concessions, have telegraph lines across Egypt from Alexandria via Cairo to Suez, and from Port Said to Suez, connecting their cables to England and India. Number of telegrams in 1915-16 was 1,565,317, as against 1,738,162 in 1914-15, not including service telegrams and those sent by the Eastern Telegraph.

There were, in 1915, 2,007 post offices and stations. In the internal service (1915) there passed through the post-office 29,551,000 letters and post-cards, and 14,114,000 newspapers, &c., and samples; in the external service, 19,177,000 letters and post-cards, and 9,518,000 newspapers, &c., and samples. Official correspondence, not here included, amounted in 1915 to 4,472,000 articles. Receipts £E300,761; expenses £E282,720.

Banks and Credit.

The National Bank has a capital of 3,000,000*l.* with reserve funds amounting to 1,301,000*l.* The Agricultural Bank has a capital of 3,740,000*l.* It has Government guarantee of interest at 3 per cent., and it lends money to the Fellahin at 8 per cent. interest.

There are in addition ten mortgage banks and five ordinary banks working chiefly in Egypt with a total paid up capital of £E47,513,530, i.e., £E45,855,407 for the former and £E1,658,123 for the latter. The reserve funds of these two groups of banks and of the National and the Agricultural Banks of Egypt amount to £E1,339,914 and £E2,386,346 respectively.

In 1901, a Post-Office Savings Bank was opened, and on December 31 of that year, it had 6,740 depositors with balances amounting to £E47,492. On December 31, 1915, the depositors numbered 198,840, and their balances amounted to £E474,440.

In April, 1912, a rural savings bank service was inaugurated. At the end of that year the balance of deposits in the new branch amounted to £E25,413, and the number of accounts to 127,927. On December 31, 1916, the balance amounted to £E8,059, and the number of accounts to 67,325. The balance of deposits in the savings banks of the foreign banks on the same date amounted to £E363,795 and the number of depositors to 6,088.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

By decree of October 18, 1916 (20 Li-l-Higga 1334), the monetary unit of Egypt is the gold Egyptian pound of 100 piastres. It weighs 8·5 grammes ·875 fine, and therefore contains 7·4375 grammes of fine gold. Its value in sterling is £1 0s. 6½d. A new coinage was introduced at the same time. It replaces the monogram of the Sultan of Turkey by that of the Sultan of Egypt.

The 10-piastre silver piece weighs 14 grammes ·833 fine, and therefore contains 11·67 grammes of fine silver. The piastre is worth 2·46d. in English money. It is subdivided into tenths (ushr el girsh or milliemmes).

Coins in circulation are the Egyptian pound (100 piastres) and half pound in gold; 20, 10, 5, and 2 piastre pieces in silver; 1, ½, ¼, ⅓ piastre pieces in nickel, and ⅓ piece in bronze. Silver coin is legal tender only up to £E2, and nickel or bronze coins up to 10 piastres. For some years gold coins have not been issued, and the gold circulating in Egypt and the Sudan is almost exclusively English sovereigns, which are legal tender at the rate of 97½ piastres. The gold pieces of the Latin Monetary Union equivalent to the French 20 franc piece will be permitted to circulate at a uniform rate of £E0·7715. As a temporary measure, the Indian rupee has been made legal tender at the rate of 6·5 piastres.

Bank notes are issued by the National Bank in various denominations from £E0 5 to £E100. They are in principle not legal tender, but since the war they have been made legal tender and inconvertible. Their circulation has received an extraordinary impetus since the withdrawal of gold from circulation. The amount issued at the end of 1915 was about £E11,550,000, whereas it had never previous to the war surpassed £E3,000,000.

Egyptian money is now minted at the Birmingham and other foreign Mints. The nominal value of the coinage (including recoinage) from 1887 to 1915 was:—

The principal units of Egyptian weights and measures are defined in terms of the metre of the "Commission Internationale du mètre" by the Law No. 10 of September 26, 1914. The equivalents remain the same as were defined by the Decree of April 28, 1891.

Measures of length: Diraa balawi = 0 metre 58 centimetres.
 „ weight: Dirhem = 3 grams 12 centigrams.
 „ capacity: Ardeb = 198 litres.

MEASURE OF CAPACITY.

The Ardeb is equal to 43·555 gallons, or 5·44436 bushels.

The approximate weight of the ardeb is as follows:—Wheat, 334 rotls; beans, 345 rotls; barley, 267 rotls; maize, 312 rotls; cotton seed, 270.

WEIGHTS.

Okieh . . . . = 1·3207 ounce.
Rotl . . . . = ·99049 lb.
Oke . . . . = 2·7513 lbs.
Qantâr { or 100 Rotls or } = 99·0493 lbs.
           { 36 Okes }

LENGTH MEASURES.

	Inches
Diraa Baladi (town) . . . . .	= 22·8347
Diraa Mimari for building, &c . . . . .	= 29·5276
Qassabah = 3·8823 yards . . . . .	= 139·7639

MEASURES OF SURFACE.

Feddan, the unit of measure for land, = 7,463·148 sq. pics = 1·03808 acres 1 sq. pic = 6·06 sq. ft. = 0·5628 sq. metre.

ANGLO-EGYPTIAN SUDAN.

Government.

The rule of Egypt in the Sudan, after having gradually extended during the course of 60 years, was interrupted in 1882 by the revolt of the Mahdi, who, with his successor, the Khalifa, held the country for about sixteen years under a desolating tyranny. In 1896 the Anglo-Egyptian army commenced operations for the recovery of the lost provinces, and on September 2, 1898, the overthrow of the Khalifa was completed. In November, 1899, he was overtaken by the Egyptian forces near Gedid, where he was slain in battle, and his remaining followers taken prisoners.

A convention between the British and Egyptian Governments, signed at Cairo, January 19, 1899, provides for the administration of the territory south of the 22nd parallel of latitude by a Governor-General, appointed by Egypt with the assent of Great Britain, and declares the general principles in accordance with which the administration shall be carried on. The British and Egyptian flags shall be used together; laws shall be made by proclamation; no duties shall be levied on imports from Egypt, and duties on imports from other countries, via the Red Sea, shall not exceed those levied in Egypt; the import and export of slaves is prohibited, and special attention shall be paid to the Brussels Act of 1890 respecting the import and export of arms, ammunition, and spirits.

The Sudan has been divided into fourteen Provinces. The Governors of provinces are British Officers of the Egyptian Army employed under the Sudan Government or British civil officials of the Government. Administration is carried out through British Inspectors in charge of one or more districts into which the provinces are subdivided, these units being supervised by District officials who are in most cases Egyptian officers lent from the Egyptian Army.

In 1910 a Governor-General's Council was created to assist the Governor-General in the discharge of his executive and legislative powers. All ordinances, laws and regulations are now made by the Governor-General in Council.

Darfur, to the west of Kordofan, is within the limits of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and pays tribute, but the management of its internal affairs is left almost entirely to its hereditary Sultan.

The Enclave of Lado, which was continued in the occupation of H.M. King Leopold II, King of the Belgians, during his reign, by the Agreement signed at Brussels on May 12, 1906, reverted to the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan on his death, and has been included in the Mongalla province.

Area and Population.

Extending southwards from the frontier of Egypt to Uganda and the Belgian Congo (approximately N. lat. 5°), a distance of about 1,650 miles, and stretching from the Red Sea to the confines of Wadai in Central Africa, the subject territory has an area of about 984,520 square miles. The population in 1914 was estimated at 3,380,531. The Gambela Enclave which is situated within the boundaries of Abyssinia, is leased by the Sudan Government from the Abyssinian Government as a Trading Post. The Eritrea-Sudan frontier has been completely delimited and demarcated, as also has the greater part of the frontier with Abyssinia (see under Abyssinia). The chief towns are: Khartum, population (1916) 23,083, the capital; Omdurman (the old Dervish capital), population (1915) 59,429; Khartum North, population (1915) 15,973; Halfa, Merowé, El Damer, Atbara, Port Sudan, Suakin, Kassala, El Dueim, Kosti, El Obeid, Nahud, Wad Medani, and Singa.

Instruction.

The schools under the Central Authority are classified as follows:—There are first the elementary vernacular schools (Kuttabs), 56 in number (January, 1916), situated in all parts of the country, and with a total number of about 4,375 pupils. In these schools instruction is given to boys from 7 to 10 years of age in reading, writing, arithmetic and religion. Next there are the primary schools, of which there are now eight—at Khartum, Omdurman, Berber, Wad Medani, Halfa, Atbara, El Obeid, and Suakin. The subjects taught in schools of this class include English, Arabic, Mathematics, and the total number of boys in attendance is 1,008. After completing their primary course, boys can proceed to the upper school at the Gordon College, or they may be employed as clerks or translators in Government Offices. The upper school at Gordon College numbers 68 pupils, some of whom take a course in engineering and surveying, while the rest are trained to be teachers in primary schools or translators. There is also in the Gordon College buildings a training college attended by 33 students, who undergo a five years' course of training, after which they are drafted out as teachers in vernacular or primary schools or as Kadis in district courts. The industrial workshops, of which there are at present three, at Khartum, Kassala, and Omdurman, total 248 boy apprentices. At Khartum and Kassala, smith work, carpentry, fitting, &c., is taught, and at Omdurman stone-cutting, pottery, and brick-work. A primary school has been constructed adjacent to the Gordon College, and some of the boys board in the Gordon College. A start has been made in the education of girls by the opening of a Girls' school at Rufaa—which is at present attended by 64 girls, and there are also girls' schools at Dongola, Merowe, and Kamlin numbering 35, 20, and 44 girls respectively. Affiliated to the Gordon College are the Wellcome Tropical Research Laboratorics, where investigations are carried on in connection with diseases and with the economic products of the country.

A Central Research Farm has been organised at Khartum North, under the auspices of the Education Department, for the furtherance of agricultural research and education. Laboratories have been built and equipped for the study of agricultural botany, physiology and bacteriology. Comparative field experiments with such staple crops as cotton, wheat and lubia are supplemented by sections devoted to plant introduction, seed selection, horticulture, experimental forestry and market gardening.

The geological survey, the antiquities service, and the natural history museum, are also attached to the Education Department.

Justice.

The High Court of Justice for the trial of civil suits comprises the Court of Appeal and Courts of original jurisdiction. Judges of the High Court sitting singly have general original jurisdiction. The Court of Appeal is constituted by three or more Judges of the High Court sitting together, all Judges of the High Court being members of the Court of Appeal.

The general superintendence of the High Court is vested in the Chief Justice. In addition to the Chief Justice there are four Judges of the High Court, all of whom are British barristers. The High Court sits at Khartum, but judges from time to time go on circuit.

Subordinate to the High Court of Justice in every province is the Province Court. This comprises a Province Judge, except in Khartum Province, and District Judges of three grades. Appeals from decisions of a District Judge lie to the Province Judge, except in Khartum Province, where such appeals lie to the High Court. Appeals from decisions of a Province Judge lie to the High Court.

In Provinces where there is neither a High Court Judge nor a specially appointed Province Judge the Governor acts as Province Judge, and in any District where there is no specially appointed District Judge the provincial inspectors and district officers act as District Judges.

The Mohammedan Law Courts administer the Moslem religious law in cases between Mohammedans relating to succession on death, marriage, divorce, and family relations generally, and also Mohammedan charitable endowments.

Criminal justice is administered either by single magistrates, or courts of three magistrates. Judges of the High Court, governors, and inspectors of provinces, and the district officials above-mentioned, are the magistrates. Decisions of courts require confirmation either by the Governor of the province or by the Governor-General, both of whom have extensive powers of revision. Appeal lies from convictions by magistrates other than Governors, where the sentence exceeds two months' imprisonment or £2 fine.

The Sudan penal code is an adaptation of the Indian penal code.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure of the Sudan for six years are stated as follows (£Fl = £1 0s. 6d.) :—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	££	££		££	££
1910 . . .	1,171,007	1,214,676	1913 . . .	1,654,149	1,614,007
1911 . . .	1,311,218	1,350,854	1914 . . .	1,543,549	1,581,346
1912 . . .	1,428,605	1,490,663	1915 . . .	1,495,200	1,463,900

In 1913, owing to the increased prosperity of the country, the Egyptian Government decided to discontinue the annual contribution which it previously made to enable the Sudan to balance its Budget. But the Egyptian Government pays to the Sudan the customs duties collected in Egypt on goods going to or coming from the Sudan.

The revenue is derived mainly from Land Tax, Animal Tax, Royalties on Gum and Ivory, and Customs, and from the receipts of the Railways, Post, Telegraph, and Nile Steamer Services.

From 1914 onwards, the figures do not include the revenue and expenditure of Local Provincial Services, which amounted in 1915 to 98,000% and 87,000% respectively. In 1915 the influence of the War, combined with the low Nile-flood of 1914, following upon the low flood and scanty rains of 1913, continued adversely to affect the revenue.

Production and Commerce.

The Sudan is the chief source of the world's supply of gum arabic and ivory. Other products include cotton, ostrich feathers, dom palm nuts (which produce a kind of vegetable ivory used extensively in the manufacture of buttons), dates, sesame, senna leaves and pods, groundnuts, hides, skins, and gold. Rubber is also obtained from the southern districts. The principal grain crop is durra, a kind of millet used for making bread.

About one-fourth of the area is said to be susceptible of cultivation. The following table shows the areas of land cultivated in 1914 and the two previous years:—

Irrigated by artificial means—	Feddans	Feddans	Feddans
(a.) From the river	106,157	106,679	104,281
(b.) From wells or storage tanks	10,562	11,262	11,729
Irrigated by natural agency—
(a.) By flood or rise of river	132,313	85,675	54,198
(b.) By rain	1,582,740	2,022,710	1,926,627
Total	1,831,772	2,229,326	2,096,835

Egyptian cotton has been successfully established on the Nile, as well as in the Tokar district of the Red Sea Province, and increasing quantities of cotton, which compare favourably with corresponding varieties grown in Egypt, are being produced annually. Experimental cotton growing is also being conducted in the Gezira, the fertile tract of country between the Blue and White Niles, where with a proper system of irrigation, an extensive area can be put under cultivation.

The cattle trade in the Sudan also shows remarkable growth in recent years, and this will probably be continued, not only because it is easy for the natives to raise cattle but because the Government through an efficient and well organised veterinary department is endeavouring to foster the trade, to eliminate cattle diseases, and to improve the quality of live stock.

The forests which line the river banks, rich in fibres and tanning material, extend to the frontiers of Abyssinia. On the White Nile the forests contain valuable trees—the ebony tree, the gum acacia, the bamboo, and the rubber creeper. The finest gum forests are in Kordofan, and the best rubber in the Bahr el Ghazal.

Gold is the only mineral at present being successfully exploited in the Sudan and mines are being worked at Um Nabardi and Gabait.

Internal Communications.

The railway from Wadi Halfa to Khartum, which was constructed for military purposes during the re-conquest, was declared open for general traffic on December 12, 1899. A connection with the Red Sea at Port Sudan was opened in October, 1905, and an extension of the line to Sennar and El Obeid was opened for traffic in February, 1912. The total length of line is, approximately, 1,500 miles.

All navigable arms of the Nile and its tributaries between Assuan (Egypt) and Refaj are served by a fleet of Government passenger and cargo steamers which maintain a regular scheduled service over more than 2,500 miles of water.

There is telegraphic communication with Egypt, Erythrea, and Abyssinia, and also wireless communication with Gambela in Western Abyssinia. There is a wireless station at Port-Sudan with a range of 250 miles. At the beginning of 1916 there were 4,687 miles of telegraph line open, and 6,836 miles of wire. There are 80 stationary and 12 travelling Post and Telegraph Offices.

CANADA.

(DOMINION OF CANADA.)

Constitution and Government.

The territories which now constitute the Dominion of Canada came under British power at various times, some by settlement and others by conquest or session. Nova Scotia was occupied in 1627; the Hudson's Bay Company's Charter, conferring rights over the territories to the east and west of, the Bay, was granted in 1670; Canada was conquered in 1759 and, along with New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, was formally ceded to Great Britain by France in 1763; Vancouver Island was acknowledged to be British by the Oregon Boundary Treaty of 1846, and British Columbia was occupied in 1858. As originally constituted the Dominion was composed of the provinces of Canada—Upper and Lower—Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick. They were united under the provisions of an Act of the Imperial Parliament passed in March, 1867, known as 'The British North America Act, 1867,' which came into operation on July 1, 1867, by royal proclamation. The Act provides that the Constitution of the Dominion shall be 'similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom'; that the executive authority shall be vested in the Sovereign of Great Britain and Ireland, and carried on in his name by a Governor-General and Privy Council; and that the legislative power shall be exercised by a Parliament of two Houses, called the 'Senate' and the 'House of Commons.' The powers of the Federal Parliament include all subjects not assigned exclusively to the provincial legislatures. Provision was made in the Act for the admission of British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, the North-West Territories, and Newfoundland into the Dominion; Newfoundland alone has not availed itself of such provision. In 1869, the extensive region known as the North-West Territories was added to the Dominion by purchase from the Hudson's Bay Company; the province of Manitoba was set apart out of a portion of it, and admitted into the confederation on July 15, 1870. On July 20, 1871, the provinces of British Columbia, and by an Imperial Order in Council of May 16, in the same year, Prince Edward Island, were admitted into the confederation. The provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were formed from the provisional districts of Alberta, Athabaska, Assiniboia, and Saskatchewan, and were admitted to the Union as provinces on September 1, 1905.

The members of the Senate are nominated for life, by summons of the Governor-General under the Great Seal of Canada. The numerical representation of the Senate by provinces is as follows: Prince Edward Island, 4; Nova Scotia, 10; New Brunswick, 10; Quebec, 24; Ontario, 24; Manitoba, 4; Saskatchewan, 4; Alberta, 4; British Columbia, 3; Total, 87. By the Amendment of the British North America Act, 1867 (April, 1915), which comes into effect after the dissolution of the present Parliament, the Senate will consist of 96 senators—namely, 24 from the province of Ontario, 24 from Quebec, 10 from Nova Scotia, 10 from New Brunswick, 4 from Prince Edward Island, 6 from Manitoba, 6 from British Columbia, 6 from Alberta, and 6 from Saskatchewan. The number of Senators may not exceed 104. Each senator must be 30 years of age, a born or naturalised subject, and must reside in, and be possessed of property, real or personal, of the value of 4,000 dollars, within the province for which he is appointed. The House of Commons is elected by the people, for five years, unless sooner dissolved, at the rate at present of one representative for every 25,367 persons, the province of Quebec always having 65 members, and the others provinces proportionally, according to their populations at each decennial census. The House of Commons consists of 221 members—86 for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 18 for Nova Scotia, 13 for New Brunswick, 10 for Manitoba, 7 for British Columbia, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 10 for Saskatchewan, 7 for Alberta, and 1 for the Yukon Territory. For the next parliament the unit of representation will be, on the basis of the population of Quebec at the census of 1911, 30,819, and the number of members will be : Ontario, 82 ; Quebec, 65 ; Nova Scotia, 16 ; New Brunswick, 11 ; Manitoba, 15 ; British Columbia, 13 ; Prince Edward Island, 3 ; Alberta, 12 ; Saskatchewan, 16 ; Yukon, 1.

The members of the House of Commons are elected by constituencies, the electors of which are supplied by franchises under the control of the several provincial assemblies. The qualifications for voting at provincial elections vary in the several provinces. Voting is by ballot.

Last Election, September, 1911. State of parties :—Conservatives, 134 ; Liberals, 87.

The Speaker in the House of Commons has a salary of 4,000 dollars per annum, and each member an allowance of 2,500 dollars for the session with a deduction of 15 dollars a day for absences. The Leader of the Opposition receives 7,000 dollars in addition to his ordinary sessional allowance.

The Speaker and members of the Senate have the same allowances as in the House of Commons with no extra allowances.

Governor-General.—The Duke of Devonshire, K.G., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. Appointed August 19, 1916. Salary, 50,000 dollars per annum.

He is assisted in his functions, under the provisions of the Act of 1867, by a Council, composed of 15 heads of departments.

Hon. Sir George H. Perley, K.C.M.G. (acting). } 17, Victoria Street,
Permanent Secretary.—W. L. Griffith. } London, S.W.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT.

The nine provinces have each a separate parliament and administration, with a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the Governor-General at the head of the executive. They have full powers to regulate their own local affairs and dispose of their revenues, provided only they do not interfere with the action and policy of the central administration. Among the subjects assigned exclusively to the provincial legislatures are: the amendment of the provincial constitution, except as regards the office of the Lieutenant-Governor; direct taxation for revenue purposes; borrowing; management and sale of public lands; provincial hospitals, reformatories, &c.; shop, saloon, tavern, auctioneer, and other licences for local or provincial purposes; local works and undertakings, except lines of ships, railways, canals, telegraphs, &c., extending beyond the province or connecting with other provinces, and also except such works as the Federal Parliament declare are for the general good; marriages; administration of justice within the province; education. Quebec and Nova Scotia have each two Chambers (a Legislative Council and a Legislative Assembly) and a responsible Ministry. In New Brunswick, Ontario, Manitoba, British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, Alberta and Saskatchewan there is only one Chamber (the Legislative Assembly) and a responsible Ministry. The members of the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia number 18, and Quebec 24. The membership of the Legislative Assemblies is—Prince Edward Island 30, Nova Scotia 43, New Brunswick 47, Quebec 81, Ontario 111, Manitoba 49, British Columbia 47, Alberta 56, and Saskatchewan 54. The North-West Territories, comprising all the territories formerly known as Rupert's Land, and the North-Western Territory except the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the district of Keewatin and the Yukon Territory, are governed by a Commissioner and a Council of four, appointed by the Governor in Council at Ottawa. The territory of Yukon is governed by a Commissioner and an Executive Council of ten members elected by the people.

The total 'urban' population of Canada in 1911 is given as 3,280,964, against 2,021,799 in 1901. Of the number in 1911, 270,000 were in 'cities and towns' of under 1,000 inhabitants.

There are no complete vital statistics collected for the Dominion, the registration of births, deaths and marriages being under provincial control. But not all the provinces collect these statistics (New Brunswick has no returns), nor is there a uniform system in the method of collection. The following table shows the returns so far as they are available for 1913 and 1914. New Brunswick is not included, Yukon published no statistics for 1913.

Instruction.

The Provincial Governments have control of education in public schools high schools, normal schools and universities ; the systems are all based on the principle of free education, the funds being supplied in nearly all the provinces by Government grants and local taxation. Education is more or less compulsory, but the law is not very strictly enforced. In Ontario, Quebec, Alberta, and Saskatchewan there are separate schools for Roman Catholics ; in the other provinces the schools are unsectarian.

Each province has one or more universities (21 in all, with about 500 professors and teachers, and 10,000 students), and several colleges. The most important of these are the University of Toronto ; McGill University, Montreal ; and the French Canadian University of Laval, which has colleges in Montreal and Quebec City. There are in all about 20 degree-granting bodies in the Dominion, with about 40 colleges ; estimated attendance, 25,000.

In 1915 there were in Canada 1,538 periodical publications, classified as follows : Dailies, 150 ; triweeklies, 7 ; weeklies, 1,065 ; semiweeklies, 45 ; monthlies, 250 ; bimonthlies, 3 ; and quarterlies, 18.

Justice and Crime.

There is a Supreme Court in Ottawa, having appellate, civil and criminal jurisdiction in and throughout Canada. There is an exchequer court, which is also a colonial court of admiralty, with powers as provided in the Imperial 'Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890.' There is a Superior Court in each province ; county courts, with limited jurisdiction, in most of the provinces ; all the judges in these courts being appointed by the Governor-General. Police magistrates and justices of the peace are appointed by the Provincial Governments.

In 1914, 28,007 persons were charged with indictable offences ; of these 21,438 were convicted. 161,597 were summarily convicted.

Finance.

Financial accounts are under three headings—first, 'Consolidated Fund,' comprising the general sources of revenue and branches of expenditure ; secondly, 'Loans' in revenue, and 'Redemption' with 'Premiums and Discounts' in expenditure ; and thirdly, 'Open accounts.' The headings 'Loans' and 'Redemption' include the deposits in and withdrawals from the Post Office and Government Savings Banks, the amount on deposit forming part of the floating or unfunded debt of the country. Under the head of 'Open Accounts' are included investments, trust funds, Province accounts, and expenditure on capital account on public works.

Defence.

Under the Militia Act of 1904, the command in chief of the militia is vested in the King, by whom, or by the Governor-General as his representative, it is exercised and administered. The Act further provides for the appointment of a Minister of Militia and Defence, charged with the administration of militia affairs, and of a Deputy Minister; also for the appointment of a Militia Council which includes, besides the Minister and Deputy Minister, four military members and a finance member. There are also two Inspectors-General (one for the West and one for Eastern Canada) who report to the Minister of Militia and Defence in Council upon the training and efficiency of the troops.

The land forces consist of the active militia and the reserve militia; and, for purposes of command and administration, the country is divided into six divisional areas and three military districts.

The active militia is raised and maintained by voluntary three-year enlistments; or, in case of need, by compulsory enrolment, by ballot. With the exception of a small force permanently embodied, it consists of troops administered and trained on a strictly militia basis.

The organisation of the reserve militia was not authorised until 1915; and it has not yet had time to develop.

The duties of the militia are to support the civil power and to defend the country from aggression; while to the permanent force and permanent staff there fall the additional duties of providing instruction for the rest of the militia, of maintaining the standard of military knowledge, and of furnishing that permanent element in the garrisons of defended ports which is necessary for their protection against sudden attack as well as for the preservation of valuable armaments and works.

Owing to the war, the training of the militia was suspended for 1915-16; and training establishments have not been authorised. But the Militia List shows the composition of the active militia to be as follows:—

Permanent Force.—Two regiments of cavalry; a brigade of horse artillery; five companies of garrison artillery; one field company and two fortress companies of engineers; a battalion of infantry; army service corps; army medical corps; army veterinary corps; ordnance corps; army pay corps; corps of military staff clerks; school of musketry corps.

Non-permanent units.—Thirty-five regiments and an independent squadron of cavalry; thirty-nine batteries of field artillery; five batteries of heavy artillery; thirteen companies of garrison artillery; two siege companies; fourteen troops and companies of engineers; corps of guides; one hundred and eleven battalions and two independent companies of infantry; signal corps; army service corps; army medical services; army dental corps; army veterinary corps; ordnance corps; postal corps.

In addition there are fifteen contingents of the officers' training corps and a corps of school cadet instructors; also numerous cadet corps and rifle associations, military and civil.

Male inhabitants who are British subjects, between eighteen and sixty years of age, and not exempt or disqualified by law, are liable to service in the militia; and in the case of a levée en masse all male inhabitants, capable of bearing arms, are liable without exception.

It is provided by law that the male population shall be divided into four classes which (except in the case of a levée en masse) shall be called out for service in succession; first, unmarried men and widowers (without children) between eighteen and thirty years of age; secondly, unmarried men and widowers (without children) between thirty and forty-five; thirdly, married men and widowers (with children) between eighteen and forty-five; fourthly, all men between forty-five and sixty.

Up to September 1, 1916, there had been sent overseas for active service in the war 210,394 officers, non-commissioned officers and men. At the same date there were training in Canada in camps in the various military districts 4,577 officers and 107,998 other ranks, a total of 112,575. In addition, there have been maintained on guard duty in Canada (canals, certain railway bridges and public buildings) about 12,500 all ranks.

Schemes for a Canadian Navy have been mooted but are at present somewhat in abeyance. The old cruisers Niobe and Rainbow, taken over as training ships, have been employed in commerce protection. The local force consists otherwise of a number of miscellaneous gun-vessels and icebreakers, some of which are on the Great Lakes. At the outbreak of the war two submarines, which were building in the United States for Chile, were bought (C. C. 1 and 2), and are on the Pacific coast.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—In 1911, there were 48,375,000 acres of improved land out of 109,777,085 acres of occupied land. The following table, compiled from data collected at the Dominion censuses of 1901 and 1911, shows the distribution of farm holdings according to size in the whole of Canada and in the Provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan for the two years named:—

In 1915, 37,063,455 acres were under field crops, those most widely cultivated being wheat, oats, barley and flax. The total value of all field crops, including roots and fodder, in 1915 was estimated at 798 million dollars, and in 1916 at 845 million dollars. Other products (1916 provisional figures) were rye, 101,000 acres, 2,059,000 bushels (mainly Ontario, 69,000 acres, 1,254,990 bushels); peas, 150,000 acres, 2,166,000 bushels (Ontario, 126,000 acres, 1,792,000 bushels, Quebec, 22,000 acres, 310,000 bushels); mixed grain, 398,000 acres, 10,333,000 bushels (Ontario, 286,000 acres, 7,422,000 bushels, Quebec, 91,000 acres, 2,084,000 bushels); buckwheat, 342,000 acres, 6,720,000 bushels (Ontario, 175,000 acres, 2,940,000 bushels, Quebec, 101,000 acres, 2,166,000 bushels, New Brunswick, 53,000 acres, 1,299,000 bushels); beans, 32,500 acres, 541,000 bushels (Ontario, 27,000 acres, 444,000 bushels); sugar beets (Ontario), 15,000 acres, 71,000 tons; turnips and other roots, 156,000 acres, 41,256,000 bushels (Ontario, 97,000 acres, 20,467,000 bushels); corn for husking, 173,000 acres, 6,271,000 bushels (Ontario, 160,000 acres, 5,976,000 bushels); fodder corn, 297,000 acres, 1,977,000 tons (Ontario, 248,000 acres, 1,612,000 tons); alfalfa, 90,000 acres, 261,000 tons (Ontario, 56,000 acres, 168,000 tons). In Ontario, apples, the vine, and tobacco are grown. The live stock in Canada on June 30, 1916, comprised 2,990,635 horses, 2,608,645 milk cows, 3,826,519 other cattle, 1,965,101 sheep, and 2,814,065 swine. In 1914, there were divided among ranches in Manitoba, 24,843 acres, British Columbia, 392,380 acres, Alberta, 2,330,110 acres, and Saskatchewan, 2,106,222 acres: total, 4,853,555 acres (2,568 ranches). In year ended March 31, 1916, 68,800 tons of cheese, and 1,362 tons of butter were exported from Canada.

Forestry.—The total area of land covered by timber is officially estimated at between 500 and 600 million acres. Of this 200 to 300 million acres are covered with commercial timber. This is distributed by provinces as follows:—

	Acres		Acres
British Columbia . . . .	30,000,000	Quebec . . . . .	100,000,000
Manitoba, Saskatchewan,		New Brunswick . . . .	9,000,000
Alberta . . . . .	11,000,000	Nova Scotia . . . . .	5,000,000
Ontario . . . . .	70,000,000

The forest products exported to the United Kingdom in 1915-16 amounted in value to 14,092,769 dollars, out of a total of 51,271,400 dollars. The estimated value of the total forest products for the calendar year 1916 was 190,000,000 dollars. The exportable surplus of the wood pulp industry was 10,376,548 dollars in 1915-16, chiefly to Great Britain and the United States. The Crown forests belong to the Provincial Governments, except in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, and the Railway Belt (forty miles wide) in British Columbia, where they belong to the Dominion.

Fisheries.—The coast line of the Atlantic Provinces, from the Bay of Fundy to the Strait of Belle Isle, without taking into account the lesser bays and indentations, measures over 5,000 miles. On the Pacific coast the Province of British Columbia, because of its numerous islands, bays, and fiords, has a sea-washed shore of 7,000 miles. In addition to this immense salt-water fishing area Canada has 220,000 square miles of fresh water abundantly stocked with many species of excellent food fishes.

The fisheries of the Atlantic coast may be divided into two distinct classes: The deep sea, which take cod, haddock, hake, pollock, and halibut; and the inshore or coastal, which take cod, hake, haddock, pollock, halibut, herring, mackerel, alewife, shad, smelt, flounder, and sardine. The most extensive lobster fishery known is carried on along the eastern shore of Canada, while excellent oyster beds exist in many parts of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The salmon fishery is the predominant one on the Pacific coast, but an important halibut fishery is also carried on. The inland lake fisheries yield whitefish, trout, pickerel, pike, sturgeon, and fresh-water herring. The capital invested in vessels, gear, canneries, etc., is 25,856,000 dollars. The total value of the produce of the fisheries of Canada in 1915-16 was 35,860,708 dollars, and in 1914-15, 31,057,550 dollars. The principal kinds of fish caught in 1915-16 were: salmon, 11,262,381 dollars; lobsters, 4,506,155 dollars; codfish, 4,489,496 dollars; herrings, 2,906,887 dollars; halibut, 2,261,776 dollars; haddock, 1,232,022 dollars; sardines, 1,229,096 dollars; white-fish, 1,048,641 dollars. The exports were valued at 21,982,925 dollars. The exports of dry-salted codfish were 86,457,300 lb.; canned lobsters, 8,339,980 lb.; canned salmon, 49,142,900 lb. The number of persons employed in 1915-16 was 102,000, including those in shore work and canneries. There were 1,984 vessels used and 38,536 boats. In 1915-16, according to provinces, the values were: Nova Scotia, 9,166,851 dollars; British Columbia, 14,538,320 dollars; New Brunswick, 4,737,145 dollars; Quebec, 2,076,851 dollars; Ontario, 3,341,182 dollars; Prince Edward Island, 933,682 dollars; Manitoba, 742,925 dollars; Saskatchewan, 165,888 dollars; Alberta, 94,134 dollars; and Yukon, 63,730 dollars.

Mining.—Nova Scotia, British Columbia, Quebec, N. and W. Ontario, Alberta, and Yukon Territory are the chief mining districts. The total value of the mineral produce was in 1913, 145,634,812 dollars; in 1914, 128,863,075 dollars; in 1915, 138,513,750 dollars; in 1916, 170,000,000 dollars. The principal metals and minerals produced in 1914 and 1915 were as follows:

Commerce.

The customs tariff of Canada is protective, but there is a preferential tariff in favour of the United Kingdom and most of the colonies ; the duties on direct imports from the United Kingdom and the colonies, &c., being reduced, but alcoholic liquors, liquid medicines, tobacco, and refined sugar from raw sugar produced elsewhere than in British colonies, are excluded from the reduction.

The returns of values of imports and exports are those supplied in entries at the Customs, where imports must be entered for duty at their fair market value as for home consumption in the country of purchase. Quantities are ascertained from invoices and by examination, wines are gauged and spirits tested. The country whence imports are received is the country of purchase or whence shipment was made to Canada ; the country of destination is that to which shipment is made. Thus, Canadian wheat, purchased by New York dealers shipped to and entered in bond at New York, and thence exported to Great Britain, would appear only as exported from Canada to the United States. The only Canadian port where transit trade is recorded is Montreal, such trade comprising chiefly goods received from the United States and transhipped to other countries by the St. Lawrence route. Transit trade is not included in the general trade, which comprises all other imports into and exports from Canada. The term "special trade," in Canada, is applied to imports from Newfoundland which are exempt from duties leviable on similar goods from other countries.

The accuracy of the statistical results may at times be affected by fraudulent misdescription or undervaluation by importers, and by the adoption of "sight entries" which, under the Customs Act, may be passed when importers declare on oath that, for want of full information, they cannot make a perfect entry. In such circumstances the goods may be landed, examined, and (a sum being deposited sufficient, in the collector's opinion, to pay the duty) delivered to the importer. A time is fixed within which a perfect entry should be made, but when this time has elapsed the deposit is held as payment of the duty, and the provisional valuation, which may be only approximate, is not corrected. All export entries are delivered at the 'frontier port of exit,' and the totals thereof are credited to the respective ports where the goods pass onward from Canada.

On April 9, 1912, a trade agreement providing for preference treatment between the two parties was signed between Canada and the West Indies, to last for 10 years and to come into operation on January 1, 1913. Canada brought the Act into force on June 2, 1913.

In 1916 the vessels entered and cleared at Canadian ports on inland waters between Canada and the United States were: Canadian, 25,514 of 13,478,105 tons; United States, 56,852 of 19,415,343 tons.

Internal Communications.

Canada has a system of canal, river, and lake navigation over 2,700 miles in length, and vessels from the lake ports reach the Atlantic without breaking bulk. Up to 1914 106,946,814 dollars had been spent on canals for construction and enlargement alone. In 1915 27,990 vessels, of 16,783,308 tons, passed through the Canadian canals, carrying 250,836 passengers and 15,198,803 tons of freight, chiefly grain, timber, iron ore, and coal. On January 11, 1909, was signed at Washington a treaty between the United Kingdom and the United States relating to the use of the boundary waters between Canada and the United States. The treaty provides for the establishment and maintenance of an international joint commission, consisting of three representatives appointed by H.M. the King on the recommendation of the Governor in Council of the Dominion of Canada, and three appointed by the President of the United States. This commission, subject to the conditions of the treaty, has jurisdiction in all cases involving the use or obstruction or diversion of the boundary waters. Precedence is given by the treaty to uses of the waters in the following order, viz., (1) for domestic and sanitary purposes, (2) for navigation, (3) for power and irrigation.

Total length of railways, June 1915, 35,582 miles, an increase of 4,787 miles over 1914, all of the 4 ft. 8½ inch gauge. The railway mileage was distributed as follows:—Ontario, 10,702 miles; Quebec, 4,677 miles; Manitoba, 4,498 miles; Saskatchewan, 5,327 miles; Alberta, 3,174 miles; British Columbia, 3,100 miles; New Brunswick, 1,962 miles; Nova Scotia, 1,367 miles; Prince Edward Island, 275 miles; Yukon, 102 miles; and in the United States, 398 miles. 1,161 miles of steam railway were under construction at June 30, 1915. The Canadian Pacific Railway main line from Montreal to Vancouver is 2,903 miles in length. By means of this railway and a line of Pacific steamers subsidised by the Imperial and Dominion Governments,

Montreal and Yokohama are brought within 18 days of one another. In April, 1914, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway was completed. It has a main line length of about 3,600 miles and starts at Moncton, New Brunswick, and runs via Quebec, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, and Edmonton, to the Pacific Coast at Prince Rupert, British Columbia. The line runs throughout in British territory, and is a link in the shortest route between Europe and Asia. There is a monthly steam service between Australia and British Columbia, for which the Dominion Government gives 37,091*l.* annually.

The traffic on Canadian steam railways in three years was:—

Yrs. ended June 30.	Miles	Passengers No.	Freight Tons of 2000 lbs.	Receipts	Working Expenses	Net profits	Capital liability.

In 1915, of the capital, 183,479,193 dollars represented Federal Government aid (exclusive of the cost of Government Railways, 118,717,647 dollars) and 55,352,731 dollars from Provincial Governments and Municipalities. The latter amount does not include cost of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway (20,085,218 dollars). The expenditure by Dominion Government on National Transcontinental Railway up to March 31, 1915, was 152,802,746 dollars.

Electric railways in 1915, 59, mileage 1,590; passengers during the year, 562,302,373; tons of freight carried, 1,433,602. The gross earnings in 1915 reached an aggregate of 26,922,900 dollars, as compared with 29,691,007 dollars in 1914. Operating expenses amounted to 18,131,842 dollars, a decrease of 975,976 dollars over the preceding year. Paid up capital, 150,344,002 dollars.

On March 31, 1915, there were 13,318 post offices. Letters sent during the year, 684,901,000; postcards, 65,934,000; Gross revenue, 16,834,683 dollars; net revenue, 13,046,650 dollars; expenditure, 15,961,191 dollars. At the end of the calendar year, 1915, there were 3,432 rural mail delivery routes, on which were erected 154,183 boxes; the corresponding figures for 1914 were 2,737 routes and 116,683 boxes. The rates of postage are as follows:—To Canada, United Kingdom, and all other parts of the British Empire, United States, and Mexico 2 cents per oz.; to all other countries 5 cents for first oz. and 3 cents for each subsequent oz., or fraction thereof. Beginning on April 15, 1915, a war tax of 1 cent has been imposed on each letter and postcard mailed in Canada, on which the postage rates are less than 5 cents for the first oz. on letters, and 2 cents each on post-cards.

Money order offices on March 31, 1915, 4,499; orders issued (1914-15), 6,990,813, value 89,957,907 dollars. The Ocean Mail subsidies and steamship subventions paid by the Government amounted to 2,162,633 dollars in 1915.

There were 46,333 miles (10,356 being Government) of telegraph lines in Canada in 1914 and 184,602 miles of wire (exclusive of Government lines), with 4,113 offices. There were in 1915 1,452,360 miles of telephone wire, of which 1,009,147 miles were urban and 443,213 rural, and 533,090 telephones. The earnings of telephone companies in Canada in 1915 amounted to 17,601,673 dollars, and the operating expenses to 12,836,715 dollars. The capital liability amounted to 74,284,991 dollars in 1915.

Wireless Telegraphy.—In 1915 there were 57 Radiotelegraph stations operated in the public service of Canada, having a range of 100 to 750 nautical miles, or an average of 247 nautical miles. Messages sent and received numbered 174,017. There is a long-distance station near Glace Bay, Cape Breton, N.S., with a range of 3,000 nautical miles; and also one at New Castle, N.B., with a range of 2,500 nautical miles. There are 23 Government steamers equipped with wireless apparatus having a range of 100 to 400 miles, or an average of 170 miles.

Money and Credit.

The Bank Acts of Canada impose stringent conditions as to capital, notes in circulation, limit of dividend, returns to the Dominion Government, and other points in all chartered and incorporated banks. The Dominion Government by statute must always hold as security for the redemption of Dominion notes issued and outstanding up to and including fifty million dollars, an amount in gold or in gold and guaranteed securities of Canada equal to not less than 25 per cent. of the amount of such notes (Dominion Notes Act, 1914). To secure the issue of notes in excess of fifty millions it must hold a dollar in gold for each dollar in notes. War measure.—Under the provisions of the Finance Act, 1914, the Minister of Finance is empowered to issue Dominion notes to banks upon the deposit of approved securities with the Minister. On May 31, 1916, there were 22 incorporated banks making returns to the Government, with about 3,160 branches. The following are some particulars of the banks :—

In September, 1916, the deposits aggregated 1,468,313,018 dollars, and the circulation 135,285,031 dollars.

In addition to the capital there was in 1915 the sum of 113,020,310 dollars of rest or reserve funds belonging to the banks.

There are 23 clearing houses in Canada. The transactions for 1916 amounted to 10,557,188,000 dollars, against 7,796,781,000 dollars in 1915. Of the transactions of 1915, Montreal had 34 per cent., Toronto 24 per cent., Winnipeg 20 per cent., and Vancouver 4 per cent.

Government post-office savings-banks have been in operation in Canada since 1868; there are also Government savings-banks, under the Finance Department, in the Maritime Provinces, Manitoba, and British Columbia. In 1916 the post-office savings-banks had 134,345 depositors and 40,008,418 dollars on deposit. The Government savings banks had 30,618 depositors and 13,520,009 dollars on deposit. Statement of transactions of the post-office and Government savings-banks, in dollars:—

Year ended March 31.	Balances, April 1	Cash Deposited (Incl. interest)	Withdrawals	Balances, March 31
1912-13	58,219,328	15,538,372	16,617,216	57,140,484

1915-16	54,001,570	12,306,461	12,779,757	53,528,274

The deposits in special savings-banks amounted in 1914 to 39,110,439 dollars, in 1915 to 37,817,474 dollars, and in 1916 to 40,405,037 dollars.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Dollar of 100 cents. The value of the money of the United Kingdom is fixed by law as follows:—The sovereign, 4·86½ dollars; the crown piece, 1·2 dollars; and other silver coins at proportionate values. Notes are issued by the Government for 5, 4, 2, and 1 dollar, and 25 cents; no bank is allowed to issue notes for a less sum than 5 dollars.

The Ottawa Branch of the Royal Mint was established in pursuance of The Ottawa Mint Act, 1901, under which an annual sum not exceeding 75,000 dollars is payable to the Imperial Treasury for the purpose of defraying the salaries of officials and other expenses of the Mint, the fees and all sums received being retained by Canada. The Mint issues gold, silver and copper coins for circulation in Canada, and sovereigns and half-sovereigns coined will be legal tender in every country under the British flag.

Gold, silver, and bronze coin struck and issued by the Ottawa Mint during the calendar years 1914 and 1915:—

	1914		1915
	Struck	Issued	Struck	Issued

CANADIAN PROVINCES.

ALBERTA.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution of Alberta is contained in the British North America Act of 1867, and its several amending Acts; also in the Alberta Act of 1905, passed by the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, creating the province. In the British North America Act, provision was made for the admission of the new provinces from time to time, including the then North-West Territories, of which the present province of Alberta formed a large portion. Upon the granting of autonomy to the North-West Territories, Alberta and Saskatchewan were erected into provinces, and all the provisions of the British North America Act, except those with respect to schools, lands, and the public domain, were made to apply to Alberta as they apply to the older provinces of Canada.

The executive is vested nominally in the Lieutenant Governor, who is appointed by the federal government, but actually in the Executive Council, or the Cabinet of the Legislature. Legislative power is vested in the Assembly in the name of the king. All bills passed by the Legislative Assembly are annually transmitted to Ottawa to receive the approval of the federal government.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are elected by the direct vote of the people. Woman suffrage has been established in the province.

There are 56 members in the Legislature, elected in 1913—37 Liberals, and 19 Conservatives.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour R. G. Brett, B.A., M.D., LL.D.

The members of the Ministry are as follows :—

Premier, President of the Council, and Minister of Railways and Telephones.—Hon. A. L. Sifton.

Attorney-General.—Hon. C. W. Cross.

Provincial-Treasurer.—Hon. C. R. Mitchell.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. Charles Stewart.

Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. Duncan Marshall.

Minister of Education.—Hon. J. R. Boyle.

Minister of Municipalities.—Hon. Wilfrid Gariepy.

Provincial Secretary.—Hon. A. J. McLean.

Agent-General in London.—John A. Reid, 1, Charing Cross, Trafalgar Square, London, W.C.

Local Government.—In 1912 the law respecting towns and rural municipalities was revised and brought up to date, in harmony with the conditions and development and growth prevailing in the province at the present time. Rural municipalities comprise an area of 18 miles square, and are laid out on a uniform plan conformable as far as possible to the Dominion Land Survey system. Each municipality is a body corporate and governed by a council of six elected by a general vote of the resident electors. The chief executive officer is called a Reeve. All towns are incorporated under the Towns' Act of 1912 except those incorporated by special acts. The town council consists of a Mayor and six councillors elected by those whose names appear on the last revised assessment roll. Persons qualified to vote are males or females of the full age of 21 years who are assessed for 50 dollars or upwards. The cities of Alberta carry on their municipal government by the authority of special charters granted by the Legislature.

Area and Population.—The area of the province is 255,285 square miles, 252,925 sq. miles being land area and 2,360 sq. miles water area. The population in 1911 was 374,633; in 1906, 184,412, and in 1901, 73,022. In 1911 the rural population numbered 232,726 (52,399 in 1901), and the urban 141,937 (20,623 in 1901). Estimated population in 1916, 539,000. Population of the principal cities, (1916) :—Calgary, 56,302; Edmonton, 53,794; Lethbridge, 9,437; Medicine Hat, 9,269; Red Deer, 2,203; Wetaskiwin, 2,048.

The vital statistics for 3 years are given as follows :—

—	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of births
1913 . . .	11,871	5,053	4,432	7,439
1914 . . .	13,685	4,623	4,147	9,538
1915 . . .	13,452	4,202	3,588	9,864

Instruction.—In the school system all grades, both primary and secondary, are included under the term of public school. The same board of trustees control the schools from the kindergarten to entrance to the university. All schools are supported by taxes levied by the local board, supplemented by Government grants. The grants are distributed to encourage the highest grade of teachers, regularity of attendance of pupils and general proficiency based on the report of Government inspectors. All

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Constitution and Government.—Previous to 1858 British Columbia, then known as New Caledonia, formed a portion of the Hudson's Bay Company's concession, but in that year it was constituted a Crown Colony, owing to the large immigration consequent on the discovery of gold. Vancouver Island was leased to the Hudson's Bay Company in 1843, and was made a Crown Colony in 1849. In 1866 the Colonies of British Columbia and Vancouver Island were united, and on July 20th, 1871, British Columbia entered the Canadian Confederation, and is represented by three members in the Senate, and seven in the House of Commons of Canada.

The Provincial Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly of 47 members on the system of executive administration known as a "responsible government." The Assembly is elected for four years, every male adult (British subjects) having resided six months in the Province, duly registered, being entitled to vote.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour Frank S. Barnard.

The members of the Ministry (appointed November 30, 1916) are as follows:—

Premier and President of the Council.—Hon. H. C. Brewster.

Minister of Finance.—Hon. W. Sloan.

Minister of Agriculture.—

Minister of Education and Provincial Secretary.—Hon. J. Oliver.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. J. D. Macleann.

Attorney-General.—Hon. M. A. MacDonald.

Minister of Lands.—Hon. T. D. Patullo.

Minister without Portfolio.—Hon. J. H. King.

---

Agent-General in London.—Sir R. McBride, K.C.M.G., British Columbia House, 1/3, Regent Street, S.W.

Area and Population.—British Columbia, Canada's Maritime Province on the Pacific Ocean, has an area, according to the census of 1911, of 355,855 square miles, of which 353,415 square miles are land area, and 2,439 square miles water area, but exclusive of territorial seas. It is a great irregular quadrangle about 700 miles from north to south, with an average width of about 400 miles, lying between latitudes 49 degrees and 60 degrees north. It is bounded on the south by the Straits of Juan de Fuca and the States of Washington, Idaho and Montana, on the west by the Pacific Ocean and Southern Alaska, on the north by Yukon and Mackenzie Territories, and on the east by the Province of Alberta. From the 49th degree north to the 54th degree the eastern boundary follows the axis of the Rocky Mountains, and thence north, the 120th meridian.

The subdivisions of the Province, with the number of square miles in each, are as follows: Kootenays, east and west, 23,500 square miles; Yale, 24,300; Lillooet, 16,100; Vancouver and Westminster, 7,600; Cariboo, 300,500; Comox (mainland), 7,100; and Vancouver Island, 16,400.

The last census (1911) places the population at 392,480; in 1901 the population was 178,657. In 1916 it was estimated at 383,380, over 36,000 men having gone to the front.

Some of the principal cities and towns are: Victoria (the capital), population, (1916), 60,000; Vancouver, 114,000; New Westminster, 17,000; Nanaimo, 8,000; Nelson, 7,000; Prince Rupert, 6,000.

The movement of the population for three years was as follows:—

	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of births
1914	10,418	4,296	3,974	6,444
1915	10,516	3,993	3,832	6,684
1916	9,811	3,169	3,887	5,954

Instruction. A complete system of free and non-sectarian education was established by Act in 1872. The central control is vested in the Council of Public Instruction, composed of the members of the Executive Council. The Minister of Education directs the general management of the schools through the Superintendent of Education.

There are at present 37 high schools in the Province, with 3,912 pupils. The number of schools in 1915-16 was 767, under 1,966 teachers, with an enrolment of 64,570 pupils up to June 30, 1916. The Legislature has set aside two million acres of land as an endowment for a Provincial university, a site for which has been chosen in Vancouver. Total expenditure on education in 1913-14, 4,634,877 dollars; 1914-15, 3,907,446 dollars.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for six years were as follows:—

	Revenue Dollars	Expenditure Dollars		Revenue Dollars	Expenditure Dollars
1911	10,492,892	8,414,825	1914	10,479,259	15,970,877
1912	10,745,708	11,368,767	1915 <sup>1</sup>	7,035,000	11,163,000

The balance sheet of the Province showed that on March 31, 1914, the liabilities totalled 25,845,029 dollars, and the assets 18,617,846 dollars, a balance of liabilities over assets of 7,227,183 dollars.

Production and Industry.—British Columbia produced in 1915 minerals to the value of 30,872,901 dollars; lumber to the value of 29,150,000 dollars; fish to the value of 11,575,086 dollars (salmon pack 1914-15, 1,133,381 cases; halibut catch, 27,540,000 lb.; herring, 24,575,000 lb.; whales, 229); agricultural produce valued at 29,447,508 dollars; and manufactures of the value of 70,000,000 dollars (estimated); making a total of 171,045,495 dollars. The acreage and production of certain crops in 1916 (provisional figures) were: wheat, 15,800 acres, 493,000 bushels; oats, 61,000 acres, 3,284,000 bushels; barley, 2,700 acres, 103,000 bushels; potatoes, 15,300 acres, 2,892,000 bushels. Number of live stock in 1915: milch cows, 81,000; sheep, 40,000; pigs, 36,500; horses, 62,000.

British Columbia's coal measures are estimated to contain 62,000 million tons, mainly bituminous, of which 23,000 millions are in the seams known and measured; it possesses the greatest compact area of merchantable timber in North America; the importance of the fisheries, apart from salmon fishing, is only beginning to be realised; there are widely-distributed deposits of magnetite and hematite iron, which are as yet undeveloped; the area of possible farmland has been estimated at 22,000,000 acres, but not much more than one tenth of this area has yet been occupied; the Province has millions of acres of pulpwood as yet unexploited; and much of the territory is unexplored and its potential value unknown.

More than half the standing timber in Canada is to be found in British Columbia, and the average rate of forest growth is double that in the remainder of the Dominion. Recent investigators place the area of British Columbia's timber land at over 100,000,000 acres, containing, roughly, 400,000 million feet of timber. It is estimated that there are about 50,000,000,000 feet board measure under the control of the Dominion in the railway belt.

British Columbia is the second Province of the Dominion in the value of its mineral production. The mineral output in 1915 and 1916 was as follows:—

Minerals	Quantity	1915	1916
		Value	Value
		Dollars	Dollars
Gold, placer . . . . .	38,500	770,000	5,390,000
Gold, lode . . . . . ounces	250,021	5,167,934
Silver . . . . . do.	3,366,506	1,588,991	2,100,000
Lead . . . . . pounds	46,503,590	1,930,200	3,186,000
Copper . . . . . do.	56,918,405	9,835,500	18,430,000
Zinc . . . . . do.	12,982,440	1,460,521	3,648,000
Coal . . . . . long ton	1,611,129	5,638,952	7,094,000
Coke . . . . . do.	245,871	1,475,226	1,623,000
Miscellaneous products . . . . .	—	1,571,181	1,500,000
Total of above . . . . .	—	29,447,508	42,971,000

Statistics of manufactures for 1915: Industrial establishments, 1,003; capital, 158,623,000 dols.; employees, 28,846; wages and salaries, 15,880,000 dols.; cost of materials, 42,279,000 dols.; value of products, 73,607,000 dols.

The potential water power of Vancouver Island and the Coastal belt has been estimated at over eight million h.p.

Commerce.—The trade of the Province is developing rapidly; in 1914-15, imports amounted to 36,223,080 dollars, and the exports to 33,627,009 dollars. Exports consist of minerals (chiefly gold, silver, copper and coal), sea products (chiefly salmon, halibut, herrings, whale products and oil), lumber, furs, skins, etc. A large inter-provincial trade is rapidly developing, the fruit grown in British Columbia being largely shipped to the Prairie Provinces, where it finds a good market.

Communications and Shipping.—The Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Pacific are at present the principal railways in the Province. The C.P.R. has three main lines, the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Crow's Nest Pass Railway, the Kettle Valley Railway, and several branches connecting with United States railway systems, also steamboat connections on the inland lakes, besides a large fleet of ocean-going and coasting steamers. The railway mileage of the Province is (1915) 3,419 miles, with an additional 439 miles in course of construction, and 619 miles of projected railway. Telephone mileage, 127,221 miles.

The Canadian Northern Pacific Railway has extended its railway from Tête Jaune Cache to the City of Vancouver, and has commenced building from Victoria north to the Alberni District on Vancouver Island.

Steps are being taken to establish direct shipping communication with Canadian Atlantic ports, via the Panama Canal.

In the fiscal year of 1914-15, 4,847 sea-going vessels entered inward with a tonnage of 4,615,846 tons; 4,820 sea-going vessels cleared outwards with a tonnage of 4,617,101 tons; and 50,130 coastwise vessels entered and cleared with a tonnage of 20,943,260 tons.

MANITOBA.

Constitution and Government.—Manitoba was known as the Red River Settlement before its entry into the Dominion in 1870. The Provincial Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 49 members elected for five years. Women have been enfranchised, and may be members of Parliament.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour Sir J. A. M. Aikins, K.C.M.G.

The Members of the Ministry are as follows:—

Premier, Commissioner of Railways and Commissioner of Provincial Lands.—Hon. T. C. Norris.

Provincial Secretary.—Hon. J. W. Armstrong, M.D.

Minister of Education.—Hon. R. S. Thornton, M.D.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. Thomas H. Johnson.

Attorney-General.—Hon. A. B. Hudson.

Provincial Treasurer.—Hon. Edward Brown.

Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. Valentine Winkler.

State of parties in Legislative Assembly (elected Aug., 1915): Conservatives, 5; Liberals, 42; Independents, 2.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 251,832 square miles, of which 231,926 sq. miles are land area and 19,906 sq. miles water. In 1912 its boundaries were extended to the shores of Hudson's Bay. (See map STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK, 1912.) The population in 1911 was 455,614 (250,056 males and 205,558 females), which is 6.18 per square mile. In 1901 the population was 255,211, thus showing an increase by 1911 of 78.52 per cent. The rural population in 1911 was 255,249 (184,738 in 1901). The number of houses in 1911 was 84,511 (49,784 in 1901); the number of families in 1911 was 89,861, (51,056 in 1901). Population of the principal cities (1916):—Winnipeg (capital) 163,000; Brandon, 15,225; Portage la Prairie, 5,892; St. Boniface, 11,022.

Instruction.—Education is locally controlled, as in all the provinces, and is supported by local taxation and Government grants. Winnipeg has an Agricultural College (opened 1906) with 368 full course students in 1914. The University of Manitoba, founded in 1877 in Winnipeg, has 500 students. There are (1915) 2,976 teachers and 100,963 pupils in the 2,727 public schools. Total expenditure on education in 1915, 7,116,898 dollars.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for five years :—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.
	Dollars.	Dollars.		Dollars.	Dollars.
1911	4,454,190	4,002,826	1914	5,512,163	5,493,387 <sup>2</sup>
1912	7,046,675 <sup>1</sup>	4,339,540	1915	5,524,911	5,698,059
1913	5,788,070	5,314,849

Production and Industry.—Manitoba is essentially fitted for agriculture, more particularly for grain production. The total area under field crops in 1916 was 6,911,340 acres. In 1916 3,664,281 acres produced 96,662,912 bushels of wheat; 2,121,845 acres produced 101,077,991 bushels of oats; 1,039,849 acres produced 35,423,495 bushels of barley; 64,836 acres produced 739,809 bushels of flax; 67,343 acres produced 7,736,368 bushels of potatoes; 16,699 acres produced 364,572 bushels of rye. There were 341,496 horses in the Province in 1916, 89,475 sheep, 261,774 pigs, and 665,686 cattle.

Total value of minerals, 1915, 2,500,000 dollars, largely coal. The Province is believed to contain rich gold deposits. Value of fisheries (1915-16) 742,925 dollars.

Total value of dairy produce (1914), 3,417,382 dollars (butter, 2,136,784 dollars; cheese, 65,990; milk, 978,500; sweet cream, 236,108).

According to the 1916 Census there were in 1915, 840 industrial establishments in Manitoba with a capital of 95,856,000 dollars; employing 19,876 wage-earners; wages and salaries, 13,663,000 dollars; cost of materials used, 38,513,000 dollars; and value of products, 61,594,000 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—Imports in 1914-15, 29,847,647 dollars. In the year ending June 30, 1914, the Province had 4,076 miles of railway as compared with 3,074 miles in 1907. In 1914 there were 166,001 miles of telephone wire.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Constitution and Government.—New Brunswick was settled as early as 1761. In 1784 it was separated from Nova Scotia. The Government is at present vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 48 members elected for five years. Last election February, 1917 :—Liberals 27 Conservatives 21.

Lieutenant-Governor.—

The members of the Ministry are as follows (April 1917) :—

Premier and President of Council.—Hon. W. E. Foster.

Attorney-General.—Hon. J. P. Byrne.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. P. J. Venoit.

Provincial Secretary.—Hon. Robert Murray.

Minister of Lands and Mines.—Hon. Dr. E. A. Smith.

Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. G. P. Tweeddale.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Hon. L. A. Dugal, Hon. Dr. W. F. Roberts, Hon. C. W. Robinson.

Agent-General in London.—F. W. Sumner.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 27,985 square miles, of which 27,911 square miles are land area, and 74 square miles water area. The population in 1911 numbered 351,889 (179,867 males and 172,022 females), which is 12.61 per square mile. In 1901 the population was 331,120, showing an increase by 1911 of 6.27 per cent. The rural population in 1911 was 252,342 (253,835 in 1901); the number of houses in 1911, 60,930 (58,226 in 1901); the number of families in 1911, 67,093 (62,693 in 1901). Population of the principal cities (1911):—St. John, 42,511; Moncton, 11,345; Fredericton (capital), 7,208.

Instruction.—Education is free and undenominational. The University of New Brunswick, at Fredericton, founded in 1800, has 200 students. There are (1914) 64,310 pupils and 2,032 teachers in the 1,922 public schools (grammar and normal schools excluded). Total expenditure on education in 1914, 986,683 dollars.

Finance.—The finance for two years is shown as follows:—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Surplus.
	Dollars.	Dollars.	Dollars.
1913	1,459,122	1,416,963	12,159
1914	1,505,229	1,492,774	11,455

Production and Industry.—New Brunswick is productive in mining, agriculture and manufacture alike. The total area under field crops in 1915 was 893,940 acres, and the value produced, 20,096,400 dollars. In 1916 the acreage of spring wheat was 14,000 and the yield 262,000 bushels; oats, 198,000 acres, 6,417,080 bushels; barley, 1,900 acres, 52,000 bushels; buck-wheat, 53,000 acres, 1,299,000 bushels; potatoes, 39,000 acres, 7,488,000 bushels. The number of milch cows in the Province (1915) was 247,212; of horses 65,103; of sheep, 136,193; of pigs, 88,338.

The capital invested in the fishing industry is estimated (1915-16) at 3,959,000 dollars; men employed on the fleets and inland waters, 16,700; employees in canneries, freezers, and fish houses, 6,700. The total value of fisheries in 1915-16 was 4,737,145 dollars.

The Government owns over 10,000 square miles of forests. The production of lumber in 1915 was 633,518,000 feet board measure. The total value was 9,902,000 dollars. Spruce is the principal wood.

The Province is particularly rich in minerals. Iron, gypsum, coal, building stone, copper, manganese, all abound. Total value of minerals (1914), 1,034,706 dollars.

In 1915 there were 712 industrial establishments, with a capital of 46,050,000 dollars, employing 17,548 wage-earners; salaries and wages, 8,794,000 dollars; cost of materials, 21,443,000 dollars; value of products, 37,656,000 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—The domestic and foreign exports of the Province in 1915-16 amounted to 131,241,957 dollars; the imports to 14,852,932 dollars.

The Province had 1,839 miles of railway in 1914, as compared with 1,503 miles in 1907. In 1914 there were 25,843 miles of telephone wire.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Constitution and Government.—The first settlement was made by the French at the end of the sixteenth century, and the province was called Acadia until finally ceded to the British by the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713. The Constitution of the Dominion of Canada and of each separate Province thereof is contained in the "British North America Act," commonly called the "Act of Confederation." This Act passed the Imperial Parliament in 1867 and came into force on July 1st of that year. Under this Act the Legislature of Nova Scotia, along with that of each of the other Provinces, may exclusively make laws in relation to local matters; and more especially in regard to direct taxation within the Province in order to raise a revenue for provincial purposes, and the administration of justice in the Province, including the constitution, maintenance and organisation of provincial courts both of civil and of criminal jurisdiction, and including procedure of civil matters in those courts.

The Legislature of Nova Scotia consists of a Lieutenant-Governor, appointed and paid by the Federal Government and holding office for five years; a Legislative Council appointed by the Crown, and holding office for life; and a House of Assembly, chosen by popular vote every five years. The Legislative Council consists of 21 members; the House of Assembly of 43. The members of both Houses receive a sessional indemnity of 700 dollars.

The franchise is granted to persons assessed on real property valued at 150 dollars or on personal or personal and real property together valued at 300 dollars; tenants yearly of similar property; sons of foregoing persons or of widows in possession of enough property to qualify as stated above and actually residing on such property; persons having an annual income of 250 dollars.

House of Assembly (1916), state of parties:—Liberals, 30; Conservatives, 13. The Liberal party has held office continuously for 35 years.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour J. McC. Grant.

The Members of the Ministry are as follows:—

Premier and Provincial Secretary.—Hon. G. H. Murray.

Attorney-General.—Hon. O. T. Daniels.

Commissioner of Works and Mines.—Hon. E. H. Armstrong.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Hons. Jason M. Mack, George E. Faulkner, R. M. MacGregor, and J. W. Comeau.

Agent-General in London.—John Howard, 57a, Pall-Mall, S. W.

Local Government.—In Nova Scotia there are two municipal divisions, viz., county and city or town. Five counties are divided into two municipalities.

The county or municipal councils consist of councillors elected triennially by the ratepayers, one for each polling division of a county electing a member to the House of Assembly. Town or City Councils are composed of a mayor and not less than six councillors elected by the ratepayers.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 21,428 square miles, of which 21,068 square miles are land area, and 360 square miles water area. The population in 1911 was 492,388; in 1901, 459,574, and in 1891, 450,896.

Population of the principal cities (1911):—Halifax, 46,619; Sydney, 17,723; Glace Bay, 16,562; Amherst, 8,973; Yarmouth, 6,600; New Glasgow, 6,888; Truro, 6,107.

The vital statistics for three years are as follows:—

—	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of births
1912-13	12,553	3,259	7,225	5,328
1913-14	12,771	3,643	7,527	5,244
1914-15	13,171	3,384	7,675	5,496

Of the births in 1914-15, 339 were illegitimate, as compared with 343 in 1913-14.

Religion.—The denominations according to the Census of 1911 were:—Roman Catholics, 144,991; Presbyterians, 109,560; Baptists, 83,854; Anglicans, 75,313; Methodists, 57,606; and Congregationalists, 2,690.

There are also various other sects with small numbers of adherents.

Instruction.—Education in Nova Scotia is free, compulsory, and undenominational. Besides the elementary schools, high schools and academies there are in Halifax a Maritime Provinces school for the blind and one for the deaf. A large Provincial Agricultural College is established at Truro; also a Normal School for the training of teachers. The Provincial Technical College grants degrees in civil, mining, chemical and electrical engineering. Besides this central institution there are working under it coal mining schools near all the collieries, and engineering and technical schools of various kinds in the industrial centres.

The total expenditure on education in 1915 was 1,642,114 dollars. The Province has (1916) 4 universities; 2,795 schools, with 2,945 teachers and 107,768 pupils; there are 3,079 pupils in the technical schools.

Pensions, &c.—A pension scheme is in operation whereby teachers under certain conditions receive an annuity. Miners receive pay in case of accident in pursuit of their calling, and in the event of death a grant is made to the widow and children. A fund is provided to meet the demands, the Government and the employers paying each half as much as the men.

Justice and Crime.—Justice in Nova Scotia is administered by the following courts: Courts for the collection of small debts; county courts; inferior courts in criminal cases; courts of superior jurisdiction; divorce court, probate courts. The supreme court of appeal is composed of a chief justice and six judges. There are also Courts for the revision of assessment rolls and voters lists, and a Court for juvenile delinquents.

In 1915, 2,503 persons were arrested for various crimes and misdemeanours. In 1915, 194 children were brought before the court for juvenile delinquents. Of these 80 were sent to institutions; 79 were paroled; 12 were dismissed.

Finance.—In Nova Scotia there is no direct Government taxation. The revenue is raised from the Dominion subsidy; royalty on coal and other minerals raised; succession duty; tax on banks and incorporated companies; tax on automobiles; marriage licenses and statutory fees.

Revenue and expenditure for 4 years :—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Debt
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
1912	1,870,055	1,832,075	10,894,652
1913	1,920,565	1,949,783	12,006,938
1914	1,885,457	2,098,893	12,615,686
1915	1,953,301	2,073,671	13,410,980

To counterbalance the public debt the Province had (1915) realisable assets to the value of 6,463,315 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Nova Scotia is largely an agricultural Province. Fruit-growing is specially profitable, and apples are the most important fruit grown ; an average of 1,000,000 barrels is raised yearly. The potatoes produced are higher in quality than any others raised in Canada. Nova Scotia is admirably adapted for dairying. The value of the livestock products in 1915 was more than 8,500,000 dollars. There were (1915) 145,460 dairy cows in the Province. Owing to the cool, moist climate fodder may be raised easily, and the pastures are excellent. There were 226,406 sheep. The annual clip is 1,000,000 lbs. Pigs numbered 60,119 and horses 70,395 in 1915.

The total area under field crops in 1916 was 99,300 acres, and the value produced, 18,514,300 dollars. The principal crops are hay, with an acreage (1916) of 55,300 acres, and a yield of 99,500 tons ; oats, 116,000 acres, producing 4,385,000 bushels ; wheat, 13,400 acres, producing 279,000 bushels ; barley, 4,700 acres, 129,000 bushels ; potatoes, 34,500 acres, 6,935,000 bushels.

The principal minerals found in Nova Scotia are coal, iron, gold, copper, gypsum, silica, fire clays, brick clays, building stone, limestone, antimony, lead, silver, manganese, tungsten, diatomaceous earths. The coal fields embrace 725 square miles. The gold fields cover about 3,000 square miles. Nova Scotia gold is the highest priced in the world, running close to 20 dollars an ounce.

The value of the principal mineral productions in 1916 was :—Coal, 2,275,000 dollars ; steel, iron and steel products, 16,600,000 dollars. The total value of shipping and manufactured products was 72,518,000 dollars.

The estimated forest area of Nova Scotia is nearly 8,000 square miles. The principal trees are spruce, fir, hemlock, pine, birch, oak and maple. The value of the forest products in 1916 reached the sum of 4,000,000 dollars.

The fisheries of the Province are the most extensive in Canada. About 7,569,000 dollars are invested in this industry, 29,364 persons were employed in 1915, and the number of vessels engaged was 14,147. Cod, lobsters, mackerel, herring, and haddock are the principal fish. Total market value of fish caught in 1914-15 was 7,730,000 dollars, and in 1915-16, 9,167,000 dollars.

The total number of industrial establishments was in 1915, 966, with a capital of 126,479,000 dollars, employing 33,740 wage-earners ; wages and salaries, 16,344,000 dollars ; cost of materials, 37,725,000 dollars ; value of products, 70,828,000 dollars.

The annual wealth of the Province in 1916 is estimated at nearly 30,000,000.

Commerce and Communications.—The imports for 1914-15 were 16,327,786 dollars ; the exports, 29,712,618 dollars. The imports entered for consumption, 16,257,305 dollars ; the duty collected, 2,930,005 dollars.

Transportation facilities in Nova Scotia are excellent. The country is covered with a network of railways, 1,600 miles in extent. There are 20,000 miles of highways. Besides this, subsidised boats ply round the shores making regular calls at all the important ports. The principal railways are the Intercolonial (Government owned); the Halifax and South Western and Inverness (owned by Canadian Northern); and the Dominion Atlantic (owned by the Canadian Pacific).

In 1915 there were 1,426 miles of steam railway, and 41,999 miles of telephone wire, 25,190 urban and 16,809 rural.

The state of the parties (elected June, 1914) in the Provincial House of Representatives:—Conservatives, 84; Liberals, 25; Labour, 1; Independent, 1.

Area and Population.—The greatest extent of the Province from east to west is 1,000 miles and from north to south 1,075 miles. The area of the Province is 407,262 square miles, of which 365,880 sq. miles are land area and 41,382 water area. The Province is more than three times the area of the United Kingdom and nearly double the size of France or Germany. It is roughly divided into two sections by a line running westwardly from Mattawa on the Ottawa River to Georgian Bay—southern (or old) Ontario, the older settled portion, with an area of about 77,000 square miles, and northern (or new) Ontario, with an area of about 330,000 square miles, of which 146,400 square miles, the district of Patricia, was added in 1912. The population in 1911 was 2,523,274 (1,299,200 males and 1,223,984 females), which is 9·67 to the square mile. In 1901 it was 2,182,947, making an increase by 1911 of 15·59 per cent. The rural population in 1911 was 1,194,785 (1,246,969 in 1901); the number of houses in 1911 was 528,303 (445,310 in 1901); the number of families 544,301 (455,261 in 1901). The Indian population of the Province in 1911 was 23,044. Population of the principal cities (1915):—Toronto (capital), 470,000; Ottawa, 102,000; Hamilton, 101,000; London, 56,000.

Education.—There is a complete State system of elementary and secondary schools, which is supported generously by State grants, and also by local taxation. There is one State University—the University of Toronto, founded in 1827. The other Universities are Queen's at Kingston, Western at London, and Ottawa in Ottawa, and are private foundations. There were in 1914 6,548 elementary schools and 292 secondary schools, attended by 536,373 pupils. There are 13,202 certificated teachers in the Province. The total expenditure on elementary schools in 1913 was 12,325,907 dollars.

Finance.—The revenues of the Province are derived from the sale of Crown lands, from timber, mining and liquor licences, succession duties and other fees, supplemented by a subsidy from the Dominion. The revenue and expenditure for four years were as follows:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1910-11	9,370,834	9,619,934	1912-13	11,188,302	10,868,026
1911-12	10,042,001	10,287,992	1913-14	11,121,382	11,819,311

Production and Industry.—The Province is rich in agricultural and mineral resources; it abounds in lakes and rivers, in extensive forests, great water powers, and valuable fisheries. The land under cultivation is about 13,500,000 acres, more than 1,000,000 additional acres are cleared, and 24,800,000 acres are assessed. Of the total land surface of the Province, which is 234,000,000 acres, the amount of arable land is much larger than the portion now under cultivation. Beyond the cultivated portion it is estimated that northern Ontario alone contains some 20,000,000 acres of alluvial soil, not including the vast stretches of agricultural land south and west of James Bay. There are also vast tracts of land that are unfit for cultivation or even for pasturage. The chief industry is agriculture. The area under field crops in 1916 was 9,548,876 acres, and value produced, 207,043,500 dollars. The crops and acreage of the agricultural produce of the Province in 1916 were as follows:—wheat, 849,172 acres, 17,156,011 bushels; barley, 527,886 acres, 12,888,969 bushels; oats, 2,689,762 acres, 71,295,728 bushels; rye, 148,738 acres, 2,354,410 bushels; peas, 95,542 acres, 1,243,979 bushels; beans, 53,999 acres, 583,105 bushels; buckwheat, 229,205 acres, 3,261,888 bushels ; mixed grains, 485,986 acres, 13,297,354 bushels ; sugar beet, 22,482 acres, 6,023,938 bushels ; potatoes, 139,523 acres, 7,408,429 bushels ; turnips, &c., 136,854 acres, 34,154,858 bushels ; hay and clover, 3,471,984 acres, 7,200,047 tons. The returns for 1916 give 2,734,767 cows, 908,066 sheep, 1,735,254 pigs, 775,732 horses, and over 14,000,000 poultry. The farm values for 1914 were :—Land, 790,538,706 dollars ; buildings, 347,348,643 dollars ; implements, 91,703,876 dollars ; and live stock, 250,870,078 dollars. Ontario produces about one-half of the milk, cheese, butter, and casein of Canada.

During the fiscal year 1912-13, 202,088 acres of land were sold for agricultural purposes and town sites, the amount realised being 151,840 dollars ; and for mining 34,375 acres for 89,161 dollars. For mining purposes 9,313 acres were leased for 9,313 dollars. Nearly 1,700 free grant locations were taken up by intending settlers, who purchased in addition about 262,000 acres of land. The total area of Crown lands disposed of by sale and lease during the year was 260,873 acres, valued at 259,956 dollars, a decrease of 84,363 dollars as compared with the year 1911-12.

There were in 1915 9,000 acres under tobacco ; and 322,544 acres of orchards, small fruits and vineyards.

The mineral production in 1916 included gold (497,830 ozs., valued at 10,339,259 dollars), silver (19,874,970 ozs., 12,622,849 dollars), nickel in matte (41,299 short tons, 20,649,279 dollars), copper in matte (22,430 short tons, 8,299,051 dollars), iron ore (exports 121,495 short tons, 342,700 dollars), pig iron (118,165 short tons, 1,646,010 dollars), Portland cement (2,143,949 barrels, 2,242,433 dollars), petroleum (6,890,681 imperial gallons, 387,846 dollars), natural gas (16,768 million cub. ft., 2,235,513 dollars), salt (128,495 short tons, 698,835 dollars).

Value of fisheries (1915-16) 3,341,182 dollars.

Total area of forests 102,000 square miles ; chief timber is spruce, pine and poplar.

In 1915 Ontario had 9,285 industrial establishments, with a capital of 955,788,000 dollars, employing 242,347 wage-earners ; wages and salaries, 145,483,000 dollars ; cost of materials, 405,655,000 dollars ; value of products, 715,922,000 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—In 1913-14 the exports amounted to 186,410,843 dollars and the imports to 290,647,435 dollars. In 1914 there were 9,255 miles of railway in Ontario, as compared with 7,368 in 1907. The construction is contemplated, beginning in 1916, at an estimated cost of 600,000 dollars, of a modern stone highway from Ottawa south 60 miles to the international St. Lawrence River boundary. There were (1914) 527,967 miles of telephone wires.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Constitution and Government.—Prince Edward Island was taken into the Confederation on July 1, 1873. From 1534 to 1798 it was known as Isle St. Jenn. The Provincial Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 30 members, who are elected for 4 years, half by real property holders and the remainder by manhood suffrage. Present state of Parties (elected September, 1915):—Conservatives, 17; Liberals, 13.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour Augustine C. Macdonald.

The members of the Ministry are as follows:—

Premier and Attorney-General.—Hon. John A. Mathieson.

Provincial Secretary, Treasurer and Commissioner for Agriculture.—Hon. Murdoch McKinnon.

Commissioner of Public Works.—Hon. James A. McNeill.

Ministers without Portfolio—Hon. John McLean; Hon. A. E. Arsenault; Hon. S. R. Jenkins; Hon. M. Kennedy; Hon. Charles Dalton.

Agent-General in London.—Harrison Watson, 73, Basinghall Street, E.C.

Area and Population.—The province, which is the smallest in the Dominion, lies at the mouth of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is separated from the mainland of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia by Northumberland Strait. The area of the island is 2,184 sq. miles. In 1911 the population was 93,728 (47,069 males and 46,659 females), or 42.91 to the sq. mile. In 1901 it was 103,259 showing a decrease by 1911 of 9.23 per cent. The rural population in 1911 was 78,758 (88,304 in 1901); the number of houses in 1911, 18,237 (18,530 in 1901); the number of families 18,425 (18,746 in 1901). Population of the principal cities (1911):—Charlottetown (capital) 11,203; Summerside, 2,678.

Religion and Instruction.—The population of the Province at the census of 1911 was divided among the different creeds as follows:—Roman Catholic, 41,994; Presbyterian, 27,509; Methodist, 12,209; Baptist, 5,372; Anglican, 4,939. There are (1914) 474 schools, about 18,100 pupils and about 590 teachers in the Province. There are two colleges, Prince of Wales College, head of the Provincial school system, and St. Dunstan's, a Roman Catholic institution, both in Charlottetown. Total expenditure on public education in 1914, 217,993 dollars.

Finance.—The revenue for 1914 was 525,555 dollars, and the expenditure 445,396 dollars. The total cash assets of the Province amount (1914) to 893,389 dollars and the total liabilities to 514,982 dollars.

Production and Industry.—The farm land occupied is 1,202,347 acres. Field crops in 1915 covered 481,985 acres, and value produced was 10,932,700 dollars. The land in natural forest covers 316,000 acres, and in pasture 285,000. The acreage and production of certain crops in 1916 (provisional figures) were: spring wheat, 34,500 acres, 578,000 bushels; barley, 3,600 acres, 105,000 bushels; oats, 199,000 acres, 7,413,000 bushels; potatoes, 31,000 acres, 6,386,000 bushels; hay and clover, 199,000 acres, 338,000 tons. The number of horses in 1915 was 36,898; cows, 47,043; sheep, 86,640; pigs, 40,792. Silver fox ranching is making great progress. In 1916 there were between 4,000 and 6,000 foxes in captivity in the Province, and over 300 ranches. The value of foxes and ranches has been reduced by the war, and the closure of the fur markets. A revival of prices is expected on the restoration of peace. A present estimate of the value of foxes and ranches is 12,500,000 dollars.

The total value of the fisheries in 1915-16 was 933,682 dollars; lobsters and oysters both abound the former near Charlottetown, the latter in Richmond Bay, where the oyster fields extend to 15 000 acres. In 1912 the Provincial Government acquired from the Dominion Government the possession and control of the oyster areas surrounding the Province. Some 20,000 acres have been surveyed and 5,000 acres leased for replanting and development. It is estimated that 100,000 acres in all will be available for this purpose.

In 1915 there were 291 industrial establishments, with a capital of 1,907,000 dollars, employing 2,356 wage-earners; salaries and wages, 558,000 dollars; cost of materials, 1,520,000 dollars; value of products, 2,646,000 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—In 1913-14 the exports amounted to 573,628 dollars; the imports to 1,014,270 dollars; the imports entered for consumption to 1,006,567 dollars, and the duty collected to 169,190 dollars. In 1914 the province had 279 miles of railway as compared with 267 in 1907. Terminal stations are at present under construction at Cape Traverse, Prince Edward Island, and Cape Tormentine, New Brunswick, and for a car ferry steamer of great power to connect the Government Railway in Prince Edward Island with the Intercolonial Railway on the mainland. With the completion of this work in 1916 the gauge of the Prince Edward Island Railway, which is now 3ft. 6in., will be widened to that of the Intercolonial, which is 4ft. 8½in. Daily steamship communication with the mainland was successfully maintained for the first time during the winter of 1915-16. In 1915 there were 3,764 miles of telephone wires, 2,564 urban and 1,200 rural.

NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR.

Newfoundland was discovered by John Cabot in 1497 ; it was formally acquired by Great Britain in 1583 ; exclusive sovereignty over the island was ceded by France in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, confirmed by treaties of 1763 and 1783.

The coast is rugged, especially on the south-west, where the coast range reaches an elevation of nearly 2,000 feet. The hills attain their summit within a few miles of the salt water, and then spread out into an undulating country, consisting largely of barrens and marshes, and intersected by numerous rivers and lakes. On the borders of the lakes and water courses good land is generally found, and in some cases, as about the Exploits, the Gander and the Humber, it is heavily timbered. Area, 42,734 square miles. Population, December 31, 1914, 247,710 (126,239 males and 121,471 females). Dependent on Newfoundland is Labrador, the most easterly part of the American continent, with an area of 120,000 square miles, and population (1914) of 4,016. Of the total Newfoundland population in 1911, 67,040 were engaged in the fisheries, 2,915 were farmers, 5,376 mechanics, 2,260 miners. Capital, St. John's, 32,292 inhabitants (1911); other towns being Harbour Grace, 4,279; Carbonear, 3,540; Twillingate, 3,348; Bonavista, 3,911. The birth rate in 1915 was 30·39, and the death rate 14·33 per 1,000. Immigrants (1915), 8,169; emigrants, 9,247.

The government is administered by a Governor, assisted by an Executive Council (not exceeding 9 members), a Legislative Council (not exceeding 24 members), and an elected House of Assembly consisting of 36 representatives (21 government [Conservative] party, 15 opposition, including 10 Fishermen's Union). Members of the Legislative Council receive 120 dollars per session; members of the Legislative Assembly receive 200 or 300 dollars per session, according as they are resident or not in St. John's.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Sir Walter Edward Davidson, K.C.M.G., appointed December, 1912; salary 10,000 dollars.

The Ministry at October 1, 1915, is as follows:—

Prime Minister, without Portfolio.—Rt. Hon. Sir Edward P. Morris, P.C., K.C.M.G., K.C., LL.D.

Colonial Secretary.—Hon. J. R. Bennett.

Minister of Justice.—Hon. Richard A. Squires, K.C.

Minister of Finance and Customs.—Hon. M. P. Cashin.

Minister of Agriculture and Mines.—Hon. S. D. Blandford.

Leader of the Legislative Council.—Hon. R. K. Bishop.

Without Portfolio.—Hon. C. H. Emerson, K.C., Hon. M. P. Gibbs, K.C., and Hon. J. C. Crosbie.

Not in the Cabinet are:

Minister of Public Works.—Mr. William Woodford.

Minister of Marine and Fisheries.—Mr. A. W. Piccott.

For electoral purposes the whole colony is divided into 18 districts or constituencies. Of the total population in 1911, 78,616 belonged to the Church of England, 81,177 were Roman Catholics, 68,042 Methodists, 1,876 Presbyterians, 10,141 Salvation Army, 2,767 other denominations. At the colleges of the Church of England, Roman Catholic, and Methodist bodies, in 1915 there were 383, 393 and 475 students respectively. The number of schools of all kinds (1915) was: Church of England, 400; Roman Catholic, 383; Methodist, 374, and other denominations, 58. The attendance at Board schools (1915) was: Church of England, 16,447; Roman Catholic, 17,966; Methodist, 15,640, and others, 2,450; total, 52,503; total expenditure, including Government grants, fees, &c., 400,000 dollars.

Revenue and expenditure in five years ended June 30 (1 dollar = 4s. 1½d.):—

—	1910-11	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14	1914-15
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . .	725,020	768,049	805,580	743,768	811,829

Of the Revenue for 1910-11, 595,826*l.*; for 1911-12, 645,956*l.*; for 1912-13, 674,901*l.*; for 1913-14, 633,793*l.*; and for 1914-15, 564,161*l.*, were from Customs. Public debt, (1915) 6,465,683*l.*

Production, &c.—The chief agricultural products in 1915 were: hay, potatoes, cabbage, turnips, and oats; the total value of all crops harvested being estimated at 3,000,000 dollars. In 1911 (census figures) there were in Newfoundland 13,288 horses, 40,427 cattle, 100,447 sheep, and 27,575 swine. Some fine pine forests exist to the north, and large saw mills have been established. The mineral resources of Newfoundland are considerable. Large beds of iron ore have been found on Bell Island in Conception Bay, on the east coast, and other rich deposits have been discovered on the west coast. The total deposits are estimated at about 3,600 million tons. Exports, 1914-15, 511,990 tons. Copper ore and pyrites are worked successfully. In 1915, about 7,389 tons of ore were mined, valued at 57,625 dollars. Coal is found near St. George's Bay on the west coast, and in the Grand Lake district. In the eastern part of the island gold-bearing quartz rock, and extensive deposits of silver and lead ore have been found. Extensive paper and pulp mills have been erected at Grand Falls and Bishop's Falls, and one at Deer Lake is about to be built.

Imports and exports, including bullion and specie, for five years:—

—	1910-11	1911-12	1912-13	1913-14	1914-15
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . .	3,028,551	3,291,430	3,038,745	3,121,998	2,538,772
Exports . .	2,852,044	3,016,094	3,026,909	3,109,837	2,700,359

The chief imports and exports in 1914-15 were:—

Imports (1914-15)	Dollars	Exports (1914-15)	Dollars
Textiles . . .	1,079,967	Dried cod . . .	7,332,287
Flour . . .	2,168,579	Pulp and paper . .	2,196,413
Coal . . .	849,189	Iron ore, &c. . .	620,814

Machinery . . .	623,718	Cod oil . . .	434,709
Tea . . .	205,731	Seal skins . . .	376,343
Molasses . . .	218,282	Lobsters (tinned) . .	92,228

Of the imports (1914-15) the value of 2,311,945 dollars came from the United Kingdom; 4,868,352 dollars from British Possessions (mainly Canada); 4,943,752 dollars from the United States. Of the exports the value of 3,196,363 dollars went to the United Kingdom; 1,943,054 dollars to British Possessions (mainly Canada); 1,537,385 dollars to United States; and 6,460,088 to other countries.

Shipping.—Total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared in 1914-15, 1,962,342 tons, of which 1,448,197 tons were British (1913-14, 2,731,278 and 1,730,840 tons respectively). Vessels registered December 31, 1915, 3,330 sailing vessels of 183,728 tons, and 98 steam vessels of 20,252 tons; total, 3,428 vessels of 153,980 tons.

Fishing is the principal occupation of the population, the value of the fishing products being about two millions sterling annually.

By the Anglo-French Convention of 1904, France renounced her exclusive fishing rights under the treaty of Utrecht, but retained the right to fish in territorial waters from St. John's Cape northwards to Cape Ray for all sorts of fish, including bait and crustacea. An agreement for the submission of the Newfoundland fisheries disputes to The Hague was concluded at Washington, January 27, 1909. The award was published in September, 1910, and was satisfactory to British claims. Among other things, it secured the right of Great Britain to make regulations without the consent of the United States, subject to any limitations imposed by treaty. It also confirmed Great Britain's contention that the whole extent of a bay from headland to headland is comprised within territorial waters.

There were engaged in the bank cod fishery during 1915, 1,806 men, and 102 Newfoundland sailing vessels, aggregating 7,526 net tons, a decrease on 1914 of 86 men and 3 vessels of 264 tons. The catch in 1915 totalled 170,389 quintals of dry fish, valued at 1,150,126 dollars, as compared with 124,067 quintals, valued at 775,418 dollars, for the previous year. The output of the shore cod fishery is estimated at 879,126 quintals of dry fish, valued at 5,890,554 dollars, as against 880,202 quintals, valued at 5,501,262 dollars for 1914. There were 15,263 small sailing vessels, boats (including motor boats), &c., utilised, and 46,372 men employed in this fishery. In 1915, the exports of codfish, including the Labrador fishery, amounted to 1,094,242 quintals. The catch of lobsters was 2,500,000 in 1914, and 1,300,000 in 1915.

The 3 vessels engaged in the whaling trade during 1915 caught 115 fin-back whales, 5 humpbacks, and 19 potheads, being 139 in all, the estimated value of which was 53,327 dollars. The whale factories turned out (in 1915) 111,367 gallons of oil, 347 tons of guano, and 248 tons of bone. During 1916, 241,302 seals were caught; 11 steam vessels and 2,028 men were engaged in the seal fishery. In 1915 the catch was only 47,004 seals.

Communications, &c.—Railways open 1915: 828 miles of Government line with a gauge of 3 ft. 6 in., and 47 miles of private line. By acts of the Newfoundland Legislature in 1910 an agreement was made by the Government for the construction and maintenance of five branch lines of railway running to Bonavista, Heart's Content, and Grate's Cove, Trepassey, Fortune Bay, and Bonne Bay. The Government agreed to pay the contractors 15,000 dollars a mile for construction and to give 4,000 acres of land per mile constructed for operation, to do which it raised by loan 3,893,200 dollars. The line to Bonavista was completed in 1911, the line to Trepassey in 1912, and the lines to Heart's Content and Grate's Cove in 1914. These lines open up various fertile sections of the island. Communication between various points on the coast and between the island and the continent is maintained by a fleet of 13 first-class steamers, each of which connects with some central point on the railway. There are (1915) 738 post offices. Letters and cards sent in 1915, 3,750,000; newspapers, books, &c., 3,425,000; parcels, 185,579. Post office revenue, 27,360*l*.; expenditure, 122,006*l*. Telegraph line open (1915), 4,524 miles; 926 miles of telephone wire.

In December, 1915, the Newfoundland Savings Banks held 2,411,946 dollars standing to the credit of 6,373 depositors; this is in addition to the amounts held by the Savings Departments of the four banks doing business in St. John's.

The legal coin of the colony is the gold dollar, equivalent to 4s. 1½d. of British money.

LEEWARD ISLANDS

Comprise Antigua (with Barbuda and Redonda), St. Kitts-Nevis (with Anguilla), Dominica, Montserrat, and the Virgin Islands, and lie to the north of the Windward group, and south-east of Porto Rico.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Sir E. M. Merewether, K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O. (2,600*l*., and 250*l*. travelling allowance). Colonial Secretary.—T. A. V. Best, C.M.G. (650*l*.).

The group is divided into 5 Presidencies, viz., Antigua (with Barbuda and Redonda), St. Kitts (with Nevis and Anguilla), Dominica, Montserrat, and the Virgin Islands (with Sombbrero). There is one Federal Executive Council nominated by the Crown, and one Federal Legislative Council, 8 nominated and 8 elected members. Of the latter, 3 are chosen by the unofficial members of the Local Legislative Council of Antigua, 2 by those of Dominica, and 3 by the non-official members of the Local Legislative Council of St. Kitts-Nevis. In Antigua and Dominica the representative element in the Legislature was suppressed in 1898. The Federal Legislative Council meets, as a rule, once a year. The duration of the Council is three years.

The following table shows the area and population of the Leeward Islands:—

—	Area: Square miles	Population 1901	Population according to Census taken on 2nd April, 1911
			Males	Females	Total
Antigua . . . . .	108 }	35,073	13,989	18,280	32,269

Total . . . . .	715	127,536	55,130	72,063	127,193

The principal religious bodies are Anglican, Roman Catholic, Wesleyan, and Moravian. Education is denominational, except in Dominica, where, with four exceptions, the schools are under Government control, and in Antigua, where the schools were placed entirely under Government control in April 1914, and were reduced to 17 in number; the schools in the Presidency of St. Kitts-Nevis were also placed under entire Government control in April, 1915, and were reduced to 33. In 1915, 98 schools, with average attendance of 11,000 in round numbers; Government grant, 8,472*l.*; 8 secondary schools, average attendance of 306; Government grant, 1,563*l.*; an agricultural school, and an industrial school.

In 1915 there were 7,296 summary convictions, and 78 convictions at the Circuit Court.

Sugar and molasses are the staple products in most of the islands. The production of lime-juice and the manufacture of citrate of lime is carried on in Dominica and Montserrat. The cultivation of cocoa and of onions is successful, and tobacco and cotton, except in Dominica, are being successfully grown.

Total shipping, entered and cleared (1915); 3,679 vessels, 2,584,130 tons, of which 1,939,113 were British (in 1914, 3,778,346 and 2,711,604 tons respectively).

Of the total area 1,263,697 acres (Trinidad, 1,190,484 acres, and Tobago, 73,213 acres), about 642,266 acres have been alienated; about 483,000 acres are under cultivation (1915). Under sugar-cane (1915), 50,700 acres; cocoa, 355,000 (output, 54,081,452 lb.); coffee, 4,120; ground provisions, 23,530; coconuts, 34,500; rice, 21,800; rubber, 2,700. There is a large asphalt lake in the island. The Colony derived a revenue from asphalt during 1915 of 45,543*l.* Oil is being exploited in the south and south-east of the island with satisfactory results. Output of oil 1914-15, 36,753,931 gallons; April to September, 1915, 23,489,362 gallons. Railway 108 miles of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge; 167 miles of telegraph and 3,500 miles (wire) telephone (1915). A wireless telegraph system was established in 1906, to bring Tobago into telegraphic communication with Trinidad, which gives very satisfactory results, and wireless communication with ships has been considerably extended, as also with Curaçao, British Guiana, &c. Number of post offices, 98; of telegraph offices, 33. (No statistics compiled for 1915.) There are two branches of the Colonial Bank with note circulation of about 208,333*l.*, and also two branches of the Royal Bank of Canada, which has an authorised note circulation in the Colony of 312,500*l.* There is no Colonial coinage, but an ordinance (No. 16—1903) for the issue of Government 1 and 2 dollar notes (4*s.* 2*d.* and 8*s.* 4*d.*) was passed on December 23, 1903, and on June 12, 1914, the first issue of 1,000 dollar notes (208*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*) was made. The total value of such notes in circulation at the end of 1915 was 143,708*l.*, of which 42,084*l.* consists of 1,000-dollar notes. Government savings-banks are established throughout the Colony. The amount of deposits in these banks at the end of 1915 was 379,596*l.*, and the total number of depositors, 26,527.

In TOBAGO the culture of rubber, cotton and tobacco has been introduced. The cacao industry is receiving increasing attention, and very considerable areas are being planted in coconuts. The island is much frequented by visitors from England and the United States.

Virgin Islands. See LEEWARD ISLANDS.

WINDWARD ISLANDS

Consist of Grenada St. Vincent, the Grenadines (half under St. Vincent, half under Grenada), and St. Lucia, and form the eastern barrier to the Caribbean Sea between Martinique and Trinidad.

Governor & Commander-in-Chief.—Sir G. B. Haddon-Smith, K.C.M.G., (2,500*l.*—resident at St. George's, Grenada). Each island has its own institutions; there is no common legislature, laws, revenue, or tariff; but there is a Common Court of Appeal, and the colonies unite for certain other common purposes. Legal currency, British sterling, and United States gold coins. The Colonial Bank and the Royal Bank of Canada issue 5-dollar notes.

GRENADA.—Colonial Secretary.—H. Ferguson. There is a Legislative Council consisting of the Governor, with 6 other official and 7 unofficial members nominated by the Crown. Each district has a semi-elective Board for local affairs. Area 133 square miles; population, census 1911, 66,750. Births, 1915, 2,415; deaths, 1,744. Estimated population, December 31, 1915, 71,567. There were (1915-16) 11 Government and 46 Government-aided elementary schools, with 12,281 pupils and average attendance 5,988; Government grant (1915-16) 7,229*l.*; and 2 secondary schools for boys and girls with 68 and 28 pupils respectively in 1916. In 1915 there were 2,221 summary convictions, and 24 in superior courts. Police force, about 80; and in addition 150 rural constables.

In 1915-16 the revenue was 96,420*l.*; the expenditure, 103,992*l.* Public debt, 123,670*l.* Total value of imports, 1915, 260,495*l.*; of exports, 466,318*l.* (mainly cocoa, 402,394*l.*; nutmegs, 25,319*l.*; other spices, 17,122*l.*; cotton, 8,490*l.*; cotton seed, 1,979*l.*). Value of imports from United Kingdom, 90,436*l.*; United States, 86,632*l.*; of exports to United Kingdom, 300,923*l.*; to United States, 153,835*l.* Total shipping entered and cleared, 425,188 tons.

There were (1914) about 30,200 acres under cultivation. The chief products are cocoa and spices, while minor products are cotton, limes, and coconuts. Sugar manufacture is decreasing; rum is produced locally, 60,639 proof gallons in 1915. In 1915, 1,517 depositors in savings banks; balance (Dec. 31) 20,423*l.* There are 600 miles of telephone line in the island. There is no inland telegraph service. Post Office revenue 1915, 1,576*l.*; expenditure, 3,150*l.*; letters, newspapers, parcels, etc., dealt with, 787,815.

The largest of the Grenadines attached to Grenada is Carriacou; area, 6,913 acres; population, census 1911, 6,886. Under a land settlement scheme, begun by the Government in 1903, operations up to December 31, 1914, comprised the purchase of estates costing (directly and indirectly) 9,704*l.*, and the disposal of allotments for which 9,137*l.* had been received.

ST. VINCENT. Administrator and Colonial Secretary.—R. Popham Lobb, C.M.G. The Legislative Council consists of the Administrator, 3 official and 4 nominated unofficial members. Area, 150·3 square miles; population, census 1911, 41,877; estimated on March 31, 1916, 48,251. Capital, Kingstown, population, 4,300 (1911 census). Births (1915–16), 1,724; deaths, 885; marriages, 111. Education (1915–16): 27 primary schools; 4,050 pupils on rolls; 1,956 average attendance; Government grant, 1,363*l*. There is also a secondary school for boys (45 pupils), and one for girls (22 pupils). Eight convictions in the Supreme Court, and 1,269 in the Inferior Court, in 1914–15.

AUSTRALASIA AND OCEANIA.

The British Territories in Australasia comprise the self-governing States which now form the Commonwealth of Australia; the Australian Dependencies of Papua and Northern Territory, the self-governing Dominion of New Zealand and adjacent islands, and the Crown Colony of Fiji. The British possessions in Oceania include the Tonga Islands and many other groups of islands and islets scattered over the Pacific.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

The Commonwealth of Australia, consisting of the six colonies (now denominated Original States) of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia, and Tasmania, was proclaimed at Sydney January 1, 1901. After five of these colonies had, by legislative enactments, approved by the direct vote of the electors, declared their desire for a Federal Union, the British Parliament, on July 9, 1900, passed the Act to constitute the Commonwealth. This Act provided for the inclusion of Western Australia in the Federation if that colony so desired, and in the following month the colonial legislation necessary for this end was passed.

Legislative power is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the King represented by a Governor-General, a Senate, and a House of Representatives. The Senate consists of Senators (six for each of the Original States voting as one electorate) chosen for six years. In general, the Senate will be renewed to the extent of one-half every three years, but, in case of prolonged disagreement with the House of Representatives, it may be dissolved, and an entirely new Senate elected. The House of Representatives consists, as nearly as may be, of twice as many members as there are Senators, the numbers chosen in the several States being in proportion to the respective numbers of their people as shown by the latest statistics of the Commonwealth, but not less than five for any original State. As a result of the Census enumeration of 1911, New South Wales has 27 members, Victoria 21, Queensland 10, South Australia 7, Western Australia 5, and Tasmania 5. Every House of Representatives continues for three years from the date of its first meeting, unless sooner dissolved. Electoral qualifications for both Chambers of the first Federal Parliament were those for the more numerous House of the Parliament of the State in which the elector was competent to vote. Every Senator or Member of the House of Representatives must be a natural-born subject of the King, or have been for five years a naturalised subject under a law of the United Kingdom or of a State of the Commonwealth. He must be of full age, and must possess electoral qualification. Since the first Parliament of the Commonwealth was instituted, an Electoral Act has unified the franchise for both Chambers, on the basis of universal adult (male and female) suffrage.

Last election May, 1917 : Liberals, 35 ; Labour, 25 ; Hughes Party, 15.

The legislative powers of the Federal Parliament are extensive, embracing commerce, shipping, &c. ; finance ; defence ; postal, telegraph, and like services ; census and statistics ; conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes extending beyond the limits of any one State. Authority is given for the Commonwealth to assume jurisdiction in regard to railways, light-houses, &c. ; marriage and divorce ; emigration and immigration ; currency and banking ; weights and measures. The several State Parliaments retain legislative authority in all matters which are not transferred to the Federal Parliament, which is thus a government of limited and enumerated powers, the several State Parliaments retaining the residuary power of government over their respective territories. With respect to money bills, the House of Representatives has special powers, and provision is made for cases of disagreement between the two Houses.

The Executive power, vested in the King, is exercised by the Governor-General, who is assisted by an Executive Council of responsible Ministers of State. These Ministers are, or must become within three months, members of the Federal Parliament ; they are paid salaries not exceeding, in all, 13,650*l.* a year. The Executive Government of the Commonwealth is constituted as follows :—

Governor-General.—Right Hon. Sir R. C. Munro-Ferguson, P.C., G.C.M.G., Commander-in-Chief of the Commonwealth of Australia and its Dependencies (salary, £10,000).

A Coalition Ministry (containing 5 Liberals and 6 Labour Members), known as the 'Commonwealth War Government,' was formed on February 15, 1917, as follows :—

Prime Minister and Attorney-General.—Right Hon. W. M. Hughes.

Public Works and Railways.—Senator The Hon. W. A. Watt.

Home Affairs and Territories.—Hon. P. McM. Glynn.

Postmaster-General.—Hon. W. Webster.

Minister of Defence.—Senator the Hon. G. F. Pearce.

Minister of Customs.—Hon. J. A. Jensen.

Minister for the Navy.—Rt. Hon. J. Cook.

Treasurer.—Rt. Hon. Sir J. Forrest, G.C.M.G.

Assistant Attorney-General.—Hon. L. E. Groom.

Vice-President of the Executive Council.—Senator the Hon. E. D. Millen.

Honorary Minister.—Senator the Hon. E. J. Russell.

High Commissioner for Australia in London.—The Right Hon. Andrew Fisher, P.C. (appointed October 26, 1915), 72, Victoria Street, Westminster, S. W.

The Constitution provides for a Federal Judicature, for an inter-State Commission on Trade and Commerce, for the transfer of State officials, State property, and State debts to the Commonwealth, for the collection and expenditure of duties during the transition period, and for alteration of the Constitution. A High Court (consisting of 7 judges) has been established, with original as well as appellate jurisdiction. The Interstate Commission has also been constituted. The selection of the Yass-Canberra site for the Federal Capital was voted in the Senate and House of Representatives, and in 1910, the Commonwealth acquired from the State of New South Wales an area of approximately 900 square miles. An area of 2 square miles at Jervis Bay was also acquired for purposes of a Naval College, and the right to construct a railway from the Capital thereto. At present the Federal Government has its seat at Melbourne.

The number of occupied dwellings in the Commonwealth in 1911, according to a return issued by the Commonwealth statistician, was 924,259. The figures for the various States are as follows: New South Wales, 330,976; Victoria, 272,683; Queensland, 125,836; South Australia, 84,179; Western Australia, 68,870; Tasmania, 40,025; Northern Territory, 1,248; Federal Capital Territory, 442. Of these houses 499,653 were built of wood, 235,460 of brick, 75,565 of stone, and 38,797 of iron. No less than 49,375 buildings are described as being built of hessian or canvas, and 3,372 were of bark.

The Northern Territory, with an area of 523,620 square miles, was under the jurisdiction of South Australia from 1863 to 1910. On the 1st January, 1911, it was transferred to the Commonwealth (see Northern Territory).

In 1905 the administration of Papua was transferred to the Commonwealth (see Papua).

Actual revenue and expenditure for 1912-13 to 1915-16 are given in the following table. The payments to States represent the balances of revenue collected in the several States after the necessary expenditure on Commonwealth services. Under the "Surplus Revenue Act, 1910," the amount payable by the Commonwealth to each State from July 1, 1910, is a sum equivalent to 25 shillings per head of the population as estimated by the Commonwealth Statistician at 31st December in each year. (In 1910-11 this amount was subject to certain deductions.) Western Australia is to receive in addition for a period of ten years an annual sum commencing with 250,000*l.* in 1910-11, and diminishing by 10,000*l.* per year thereafter. Tasmania is also receiving the total sum of 900,000*l.* in ten annual instalments starting from 1912-13.

The total public debt of the Australian States on June 30, 1915, was 342,925,669*l.* (excluding temporary Treasury bills, &c.). The sinking funds amounted to 8,392,182*l.*, giving a net debt of 334,533,487*l.*

The following summarises the position in respect to gross indebtedness of the several States :—

Year (30th June)	Population.	London Debts.	Local Debts.	Total Debts.
1913 . . .	4,802,174	204,395,129	90,077,357	294,472,486

1915 . . .	4,951,077	229,212,541	113,713,123	342,925,669

The Commonwealth public debt on June 30th, 1915, was 37,428,830*l.*, including 14,842,105*l.* war loan from the British Government; 3,359,891*l.* on account of Northern Territory, and 1,920,439*l.* on account of Port Augusta-Oodnadatta Railway.

Invalid and Old Age Pensions.

The Invalid and Old Age Pension Acts provide for the payment of invalid and old age pensions at such rates as the Commissioner deciding the question deems sufficient, but so that the amount shall not exceed 32*l.* 10*s.* a year, nor the pensioner's whole income (including the pension) exceed 58*l.* 10*s.* a year (prior to 1916, the amounts were 26*l.* and 52*l.* respectively). Old age pensions are granted upon application to persons who are at least 65 years of age and have lived in Australia or Australian territory at least 20 years. Invalid pensions are granted to persons who have lived at least 5 years in Australia, have there become incapacitated, and have no other sufficient means of support. On October 9, 1912, a Maternity Bill was passed providing for the payment of a bonus up to a maximum amount of 5*l.* in respect of every child born in Australia, of white parentage. The disbursements for old age and invalid pensions (including payments to Asylums) were 2,288,388*l.* in 1912-13; 2,579,265*l.* in 1913-14; 2,731,940*l.* in 1914-15; and 2,859,766*l.* in 1915-16. The maternity allowance for 1912-13 was 412,375*l.*, for 1913-14, 674,990*l.*, for 1914-15, 694,675*l.*, and for 1915-16, 659,715*l.* The numbers of pensioners in the Commonwealth on September 30, 1916, were :—Old age, 91,674; invalid, 23,863; total, 115,537.

Defence.

ARMY.

The principal ports of the States are protected by fortifications. The Commonwealth is divided for military purposes into districts, whose boundaries are nearly identical with those of the States.

The military forces of the various Districts on June 30, 1915 were<sup>1</sup> :—

The year 1911 saw the commencement of the new defence scheme adopted by the Australian Government on the basis of Lord Kitchener's recommendations. The Defence Act of 1903, amended by the Acts of 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912, and 1913, imposes a system of compulsory training, beginning with cadets of 12 to 18 years of age (junior and senior), followed by 1 year in the Citizen Forces as recruits, after which the men remain as soldiers for 7 years. Liability ceases with the completion of the 26th year, but the men are expected to join the existing rifle clubs and keep up their shooting. The actual period of training is very short, that imposed on the young citizen soldiers of 18 to 26 being only 16 days or their equivalent in each year; 8 of these days must be in camps of continuous training. The whole country is divided up into 92 recruiting districts of approximately equal population, each providing one battalion, besides other troops. It is intended that there should be 7 divisions: Queensland finds the 1st, New South Wales the 2nd and 3rd, Victoria the 4th and 5th, with a spare brigade to help South Australia to form the 6th. Western Australia finds 1½ brigades and Tasmania 1 brigade.

It is estimated that the total number of men under training, when the system is in full operation, will be 150,000 cadets and 120,000 citizen soldiers. Before the war in 1914 the Militia consisted of about 50,000 of all ranks, and there were about 90,000 undergoing compulsory training as Senior Cadets. About 50,000 were registered in the Rifle Clubs. A Military College for the training of officers has been established at the Federal capital.

The former militia and volunteer units are being gradually merged into the new citizen army. This is to consist, when complete, of 23 infantry brigades (of 4 battalions), 28 regiments of light horse, 49 field and 7 heavy batteries (all of 4 guns), 14 field companies of engineers, and the necessary departmental troops. In the event of war, about half of the whole would be required to garrison the defended ports, &c., while the remainder would form a mobile striking force.

The annual cost of the scheme when in full working order, that is in 7 or 8 years, will exceed 3,000,000*l*.

Australia, up to March 31, 1916, had sent more than 169,000 men to the European war, and had further troops, numbering 64,600, in training. A total of 300,000 is aimed at.

The expenditure on Defence for 1915-16 was 46,107,439*l*.

NAVY.

Sydney is a first-class naval station, and the headquarters of the British fleet in Australasia. The Naval Agreement Act of 1903 (for 10 years) provided that the Naval Force on the Australian Station should consist of not less than one armoured cruiser, first-class, two second-class cruisers, four third-class cruisers, four sloops, and of a Royal Naval Reserve of 25 officers and 700 seamen and stokers. The base of this force should be the ports of Australia and New Zealand, and their sphere of operations the waters of the Australia, China, and East India Stations. One ship should be kept in reserve and three others partly manned should be used as drill ships for training the Royal Naval Reserve; the remainder should be kept in commission fully manned. The drill ships and one other vessel were to be manned by Australians and New Zealanders paid at special rates. They were officered by officers of the Royal Navy and Royal Naval Reserve. Eight nominations for naval cadetships were to be given annually to the Commonwealth and two to New Zealand. An annual charge of 200,000*l*. was to be paid to the Imperial Government by the Commonwealth and 40,000*l*. by New Zealand.

On April 30, 1915,<sup>1</sup> the naval forces of the Commonwealth were as follows:—Permanent naval forces (sea-going), 3,730; administrative and instructional staff, 148; reserves—adults, 2,038; reserves—senior cadets, 3,332; R. N. Reserve (sea-going), 175; Total, 9,423.

The policy of the Commonwealth is to make Australia self-defending. Having accepted the position that a fuller Imperial partnership is necessary for the future security of the Empire, and that a definite place in the Pacific has been allotted to Australia, the Government agreed in 1911 to furnish an Australian Fleet Unit, upon which King George conferred the title of "Royal Australian Navy." The main obligations of the Commonwealth were to provide a battle cruiser of the Indefatigable class; three unarmoured cruisers of the Bristol class; six destroyers of the improved "River" class; and two submarines of 'E' class; also the necessary auxiliaries such as docks and depot ships. This fleet to be one of the three divisions of the Eastern fleet working in close association with the China and East Indies squadrons of the Royal Navy—all being under one control in war; but the Australian Unit being controlled by the Commonwealth Government in peace. The personnel to be subject to the King's regulations, and under naval discipline. The vessels to be manned as far as possible by Australians, supplemented by Imperial officers and men. The old British light cruisers Encounter and Pioneer were handed over for training purposes, and the Melbourne, Sydney, and Brisbane (Bristol class) were built.

During the war the Australian squadron has been actively employed, the battle cruiser Australia in operations against German bases, the light cruiser Sydney against German commerce raiders, in which capacity she sank the Emden. The two submarines have been lost: one by accident, the other in action.

Production.

Up to the year 1914, 865,295,548 acres, representing 45·45 per cent. of the total area of the Australian Commonwealth, were either unoccupied or occupied by the Crown; only 5·50 per cent. had been actually alienated (194,612,364 acres); 2·88 per cent. (54,842,786 acres) was in course of alienation; and 46·17 per cent. (878,981,142 acres) was held under the various forms of leases and licenses.

Commerce.

Throughout the Commonwealth there are uniform customs duties, and trade between the States is free. For 1915-16, the net revenue collected from customs duties amounted to 13,621,471*l.*

The following table shows for 5 years the value of the imports and exports (merchandise, bullion, and specie) into or from the Australian Commonwealth from or into countries outside the Commonwealth.

<sup>2</sup> In 1914 the trade year was changed from the calendar to the financial year ending June 30.

The value of goods imported represents the amount on which duty is payable or would be payable if the duty were ad valorem. The value of goods subject to duty is taken to be the fair market value in the principal markets of the country whence the same were exported, with an addition of 10 per cent. to such market value.

The Customs Tariff Act of 1914 provides for preference to goods produced in and shipped from the United Kingdom to Australia as against the goods of other countries, and also affords a larger measure of protection to Australian industries than previous tariffs.

The value of goods exported is the value in the principal markets of the Commonwealth in the usual and ordinary commercial acceptance of the term.

In 1912 the building of the trans-Australian railway from Port Augusta in South Australia to Kalgoorlie in Western Australia, which is to have a length of 1,653 miles, was commenced. Construction is proceeding at both ends, and by the autumn of 1916, 917 miles had been laid. A trans-continental railway from north to south, also over 1,000 miles in length, is under consideration.

In Victoria a scheme for the electrification of the railways is being carried out. Electric railways are also to be constructed in Sydney.

The railway gauge is:—In N.S. Wales, 4ft. 8½ in. (40 miles, 3ft. 6 in.); in Victoria, 5ft. 3 in. (123 miles, 2ft. 6 in.); in Queensland, 3ft. 6 in. (29 miles, 2ft. 0 in.); in South Australia, 5ft. 3 in. for 970 miles, the rest, 3ft. 6 in.; in W. Australia, 3ft. 6 in.; and in Tasmania, 3ft. 6 in. (24 miles, 2ft. 0 in.).

Private railways in Commonwealth, open for general traffic, 1915, 1,143½ miles; not open for general traffic, 1,058 miles.

Postal and telegraph business, 1914: number of Post and Receiving Offices, 8,516: letters and cards received and despatched, 524,482,965; newspapers, books and circulars, 136,669,530; parcels, 4,435,713; packets, 62,634,320; telegrams and cablegrams, 17,975,849. Receipts, 1914: Post Office, 2,691,812½; telegraphs and telephones, 1,831,556½. Expenses: Post Office, telegraphs and telephones, 6,699,104½. (including interest on transferred properties).

Wireless telegraphy stations are in operation in all the state capitals, and in certain other places.

Money and Credit.

On January 20, 1913, the Commonwealth Bank was opened at Sydney. Branches have been opened at the other State capitals, also at Townsville, Canberra, London, and several country centres.

There are, besides, 24 private banks trading in the Commonwealth. Their paid-up capital on June 30, 1916, was 33,932,151½, and the amount of reserved profits, 20,024,718½.

The following table shows the total deposits in Commonwealth Banks, in the quarter ended June 30, for 3 years:—

The total number of depositors in the Savings Banks in the Commonwealth on December 31, 1915, was 2,273,740, and the amount on deposit, 91,577,667l.

There are 3 mints in the Commonwealth, at Sydney (opened 1855), Melbourne (1872), and Perth (1899). Besides issuing gold coin in the shape of sovereigns and half-sovereigns they also issue gold bullion, partly for the use of local manufacturers (jewellers and dentists), and partly for export, India taking annually a considerable quantity of gold cast into 10-oz. bars. The issues during 1914 are shown in the following table:—

Mint	Coin			Bullion	Total
	Sovereigns	Half-Sovereigns	Total
	£	£	£	£	£
Sydney . . . . .	1,774,000	161,000	1,935,000	32,606	1,967,606
Melbourne . . . . .	2,012,029	—	2,012,029	27,458	2,039,487
Perth . . . . .	4,815,996	—	4,815,996	235,802	5,051,798
Total . . . . .	8,602,025	161,000	8,763,025	296,066	9,059,091

Australian notes, authorised by the Australian Notes Act, began to appear in circulation in December of 1910, and for the first half of the year 1911 were circulated side by side with ordinary bank notes. By the end of 1911 the bank notes were withdrawn.

On August 2, 1916, by an Order in Council, the Commonwealth Treasurer was authorised to increase the Commonwealth note issue up to the value of 40,000,000l.

On September 27, 1916, notes issued by the Commonwealth and unredeemed amounted to 45,693,782l. Of this total 1,000l. notes accounted for 23,183,000l., 1l. notes, 16,442,978l., and 5l. notes, 5,663,330l. The amount of gold held in reserve on that date was 15,057,582l., representing 32·95 per cent. of the liability.

NORFOLK ISLAND, 29° S. latitude, 168° E. longitude, area 10 square miles, population (1911) 985 (568 males and 417 females). The island was formerly part of the Colony of New South Wales and then of Van Diemen's Land. It has been a distinct settlement since 1856, and under an Order-in-Council of 1900 was governed by the Governor of New South Wales; but from July 1, 1914, the affairs of the island have been administered by the Commonwealth Government. In 1914-15 the imports (mostly from the Commonwealth and New Zealand) were valued at 12,119l., and the exports thereto 4,901l.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

Constitution and Government.

New South Wales became a British Possession in 1788; in 1843 a partially elective Legislative Council was established, and in 1855 responsible government was granted. The constitution is embodied in the consolidating Act No. 32, 1902. The legislative power is vested in a Parliament of two Houses, the first called the Legislative Council, and the second the Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council consists of not less than twenty-one members (52 in October, 1916), appointed by the Crown for life, and the Assembly has 90 members. During 1904 the State was divided into 90 electorates, each with only one member. Every man or woman being a natural born or naturalised subject above 21 years of age, having resided six months in the Commonwealth, three months in the State, and one month in the electorate, is qualified as an elector and is entitled to one vote only. A second ballot is necessary in cases where a candidate does not receive an absolute majority of votes polled. The duration of a Parliament is not more than three years. Members of the Legislative Assembly are paid 500*l.* per annum, in addition to which they are allowed to travel free on Government railways and tramways in the State, and are provided with official stamped envelopes for the free transmission of correspondence through the post. The leader of the Opposition is allowed 250*l.* per annum in addition. The Speaker of the Legislative Assembly receives a salary of 1,000*l.* per annum, and the Chairman of Committees 740*l.* per annum. Members of the Legislative Council receive no allowances but may travel free over all Government railways and tramways. At the State general election of 1913, 688,227 electors out of 1,002,816 enrolled in contested districts, or 68.63 per cent. of the electors on the roll, voted. Included in the foregoing figures are 392,389 female electors who voted out of 468,437 enrolled in contested districts. At the Senate election of 1914, 407,464 males (or 70.7 per cent.) out of 576,309 enrolled, and 294,939 females (or 58.2 per cent.) out of 506,820 enrolled, voted. The executive is in the hands of a Governor, appointed by the Imperial Government.

State of Parties (October, 1916):—Labour, 48; Liberal, 38; Independent, 4.

Governor.—Sir Gerald Strickland, Count della Catena, G.C.M.G., November, 1912. (Salary, 5,000*l.*)

Lieut. Governor.—His Honour Sir William Portus Cullen, K.C.M.G., LL.D., Chief Justice.

In the exercise of the executive the Governor is assisted by a Cabinet consisting of the following members (appointed January 29, 1914):—

Premier and Colonial Treasurer.—Hon. William Arthur Holman.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. John Henry Cann.

Attorney-General and Minister of Justice.—Hon. David Robert Hall.

Minister of Education with charge of Local Government.—Hon. Arthur Hill Griffith.

Secretary for Lands.—Hon. William George Ashford.

Vice-President of the Executive Council and Representative of the Government in the Legislative Council.—Hon. John Daniel Fitzgerald.

Minister for Agriculture.—Hon. William Calman Grahame.

Secretary for Mines and Minister for Labour and Industry.—Hon. John Estell.

Member of the Executive Council (without portfolio).—Hon. Henry Clement Hoyle.

Colonial Secretary and Minister of Public Health.—Hon. George Black.

The Attorney-General and Minister of Justice has a salary of 1,520*l.*, and the other ministers, except the Vice-President of the Executive Council, of 1,370*l.* The Premier has an additional salary of 500*l.* The salary of the Vice-President of the Executive Council is 800*l.*

Agent-General in London.—Vacant October, 1916. Sir T. A. Coghlan, acting.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Under the Local Government Act of 1906, the system of Local Government was extended to the whole of the State, with the exception of the Western Land Division. Of the 190 boroughs and municipal districts which existed under previous Acts, 184 still remain under the title of municipalities, and in addition thereto, 136 new corporate bodies have been established, which are called shires.

Under the earlier Acts, the State grants an endowment to every municipality for a period of 15 years after its incorporation as follows: for each of the first 5 years a sum equal to the local revenue raised during the past year, in each of the next 5 years one moiety, and in each of the next 5 years a fourth of the amount raised by general rates. Under the 1906 Act, however, municipalities which are not entitled to a subsidy under the original Act may receive endowments up to 3*s.* 4*d.* in the £ on the general rate. Shires receive endowments when the receipts from general rates are insufficient to meet requirements. All persons who are owners, occupiers, or lessees, whether male or female, in any municipality or shire, and paying rates, are entitled to vote for the election of aldermen or councillors.

Area and Population.

The area of the State is 310,367 square miles. The State is divided into various districts for departmental purposes, the most important division being that into 141 counties.

The population (including aborigines) at five consecutive censuses was:—

Year	Males	Females	Total	Pop. per square mile	Average increase percent. per annum.
1871	275,551	228,430	503,981	1·62	3·7
1881	411,149	340,319	751,468	2·42	4·1
1891	612,562	519,672	1,132,234	3·65	4·2
1901	712,456	646,677	1,359,133	4·38	1·8
1911	858,850	789,896	1,648,746	5·32	2·0

The estimated population on June 30, 1916, was 1,856,098.

According to the race or origin, percentages were as follows at the census of 1911 (exclusive of aborigines):—New South Wales, 74·51; other Commonwealth States, 9·67; New Zealand, 0·85; English, 7·49; Irish, 2·85; Scotch, 1·91; Welsh, 0·27; other British subjects, 0·45; total British subjects, 98·00. Chinese, 0·47; German, 0·45; other foreigners, 0·99; total foreigners, 1·91. Born at sea, 0·09. Aborigines:—Males, 1,152; females, 860; total, 2,012.

According to occupation the number of actual workers (not including aborigines) was distributed thus at the census of 1911 :—

Professional . . . . .	56,140
Domestic (receiving remuneration) . . . . .	73,381
Commerce and Trade . . . . .	106,320
Transport and Communication . . . . .	61,964
Industries . . . . .	208,014
Primary Producers (Agricultural, 79,235 ; Pastoral, 72,990 ; Dairying, Mining, &c., 39,574) . . . . .	204,098
Indefinite . . . . .	8,908
Total . . . . .	718,820

The number of persons classed as 'dependents' was 916,211, and 'unspecified,' 11,703.

The census population of Sydney (1911), including suburbs and shipping, was 636,353. Estimated population, end of 1915, 763,300. At the end of 1915 the chief towns, with their populations, were as follow :— Newcastle and suburbs, 58,750 ; Broken Hill, 28,350 ; Parramatta, 12,600 ; Maitland, 11,850 ; Goulburn, 10,100 ; Granville, 10,900 ; Lithgow, 9,500 ; Bathurst, 8,650 ; Auburn, 10,700 ; Lismore, 8,000 ; Lidcombe, 7,900 ; Tamworth, 7,750 ; Orange, 7,200 ; Grafton, 6,700 ; Wagga Wagga, 7,000 ; Albury, 6,500 ; Katoomba, 6,500.

The following table shows the births, deaths, and marriages for five years :

Year	Marriages	Total Births	Illegitimate	Total Deaths	Excess of Births
1911	15,267	47,677	2,949	17,179	30,498
1912	16,664	51,993	2,934	18,866	33,107
1913	16,311	52,134	2,802	19,732	32,402
1914	17,353	53,615	2,778	18,777	34,838
1915	18,129	52,885	2,681	19,610	33,275

The increase in population between the census of 1901 and that of 1911 was 291,337. Towards this the excess of births over deaths contributed 247,871.

The following are the statistics of the arrivals and departures by sea for five years, making allowance for departures which were unrecorded :—

	1911	1912	1913	1914	1915
Immigrants by sea . . . . .	141,667	163,788	146,749	143,143	110,098
Emigrants „ . . . . .	111,295	125,010	125,184	145,937	141,194
Excess of immigrants by sea	30,372	38,778	21,565	2,794 <sup>1</sup>	31,096 <sup>1</sup>

In December, 1905, New South Wales revived the policy of assisted immigration, and assisted passages are now granted enabling female domestic servants, agriculturists, and other workers to emigrate from the United Kingdom at fares ranging from 3*l.* to 6*l.*, 6*l.* to 9*l.*, and 8*l.* to 11*l.* respectively. Assistance is also given to immigrants from other countries. Five hundred and ninety assisted persons arrived in 1906, 9,922 in 1911, 14,956 in 1912, 9,863 in 1913, 5,624 in 1914, and 1,695 in 1915.

Religion.

An Act abolishing State aid to religion was passed in 1862. Only one clergyman who received State aid when the Act was passed now survives, and he still receives that aid.

The Church of England in the State is under the guidance of a Metropolitan who is Archbishop of Sydney, Metropolitan of New South Wales, and Primate of Australia and Tasmania. He is nominated by the Bishops in Australia and consecrated by the Archbishop of Canterbury. There were in 1915 six dioceses. The affairs of the Roman Catholic Church are administered by the Bishops of seven dioceses under the Archbishop of Sydney. The following table shows the statistics of churches:—

Denomination	Clergy <sup>1</sup> 1911	Adherents Census 1911	Denomination	Clergy <sup>1</sup> 1911	Adherents Census 1911
Church of England	491	734,000	Unitarians	1	844
Roman Catholic	366	412,913	Hebrew	6	7,660
Presbyterian	215	182,911	Salvation Army	18	7,413
Methodists	243	151,274	Others	65	100,198
Congregational	71	22,655
Baptist	57	20,679
Lutherans	8	7,087	Total	1,541	1,646,734 <sup>2</sup>

Instruction.

Education is under State control, and instruction is compulsory between the ages of 6 and 14 years; in State Primary and Superior public schools education is free.

There were during 1915, 3,480 Government schools, divided into 3,703 departments, and classified as follows:—High schools 17; public primary schools 1,992; half-time schools 219; provisional schools 520; house-to-house schools 2; travelling schools 3; evening primary schools 1; evening continuation schools 49; subsidised schools 675; industrial and reformatory schools 2; total 3,480 schools. During 1915 there were 265,446 children enrolled, and an average attendance of 194,244, with 7,890 teachers. In 1915 the expenditure on Public Instruction was 1,686,882*l*.

Of private schools at the end of 1915 there were 718, with 78,619 pupils and 3,682 teachers, of which 418 were Roman Catholic Denominational Schools, having 2,219 teachers and 61,595 pupils.

The University of Sydney, founded in 1850, receives from Government a yearly subsidy, amounting, with special aid, to 44,325*l*. in 1915. The total revenue for 1915 was 94,481*l*. There were 1,798 students with 23 professors, 8 assistant professors, 121 lecturers and demonstrators, and 10 honorary lecturers. There are 3 denominational colleges, Anglican, Roman Catholic, and Presbyterian, and a college for women (unsectarian), affiliated to the University. The Technical College, with branch schools, comprising trade classes and classes in agriculture, physics, applied mechanics, &c., had a total enrolment of 13,000 in 1915,

Old Age, Invalidity and Accident Pensions.

In Australia the old age pension law grants (subject to conditions as to birth, residence, and character) a pension of 10s. per week to every person over 65 years of age, or over 60 if incapacitated by infirmity or injury from earning a living. This amount was increased to 12s. 6d. per week as from October 1, 1916. The amount of the pension is diminished by one pound for every pound of income which the pensioner receives from other sources above 26l., and by one pound for every 10l. over 50l. of property the pensioner possesses. Since July 1, 1909, old age pensions have been paid throughout the Commonwealth by the Federal Government, and on September 30, 1916, 33,126 pensions were current in New South Wales.

Invalidity and Accident Pensions are paid to persons over the age of 16 years who are permanently incapacitated and who are not receiving an old age pension. From Dec. 15, 1910, the payment of these pensions was undertaken by the Federal Government, and 9,378 persons were in receipt of the benefits on September 30, 1916.

Justice and Crime.

There are Courts of Magistrates, of Quarter Sessions, and the Supreme Court, with a chief justice and seven puisne judges. Prisoners charged with offences bearing sentences of more than six months' imprisonment are tried by a jury of twelve persons, either at Quarter Sessions, or before the Supreme Court. Prisoners charged with capital crimes must be tried before the Supreme Court. There is a special Court to deal with children.

In the Sydney metropolitan, Newcastle, and Broken Hill districts stipendiary magistrates preside in the police courts; in other districts, police magistrates and honorary justices of the peace adjudicate. The licensing of houses for the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors is transacted by magistrates specially appointed for that purpose.

In 1914 there were 81,217 convictions before magistrates; and 810 distinct persons were convicted at Quarter Sessions and at Central Criminal and Circuit Courts. There are in all 30 gaols. On December 31, 1914, there were 1,643 prisoners in confinement.

Finance.

The following are statistics of net revenue for years ended June 30 :—

Under the heading 'Business Undertakings' is included revenue from railways, tramways, water supply and sewerage, and Sydney Harbour Trust.

The control of the customs and excise having passed to the Commonwealth Government on January 1, 1901, the taxation is obtained from stamp and probate duties, land tax, income tax, motor tax, betting taxes, and licences. A payment of 25s. per head per annum is made to the State by the Commonwealth Government, the bulk of whose revenue comes from customs and excise duties.

The following table shows the net expenditure exclusive of expenditure from loans:—

The amount of the Public Debt on June 30, 1916, was 130,514,018*l.*, with mean rate of interest 3·71 per cent. Of this amount about 80 per cent. has been spent on the construction of railways, tramways, water supply, sewerage and Harbour Trust, controlled by Boards. The net return from these services for the year 1915-16 was equal to 3·55 per cent. of the cost of construction; or 2·85 per cent. of the existing Public Debt.

The expenditure from loans, exclusive of redemptions, up to June 30, 1916, has been: Railways and tramways, 82,041,937*l.*; telegraphs and telephones, including offices, 1,761,845*l.*; water supply and sewerage, 22,340,197*l.*, other works and services, 26,368,484*l.*; total, 132,512,463*l.*

The financial statistics of the incorporated boroughs and municipal districts are as follows for the municipal year 1914:—

The financial statistics of the 136 shires (area, 180,655 square miles) during 1914, were as follows:—

For Defence see under Commonwealth of Australia. A naval establishment, the main works of which are at Garden Island, Sydney, has been completed. Sydney is the headquarters of the squadron in Australian waters, and has a dockyard, naval coaling station, and victualling and other stores. The cost of the defence of the State is borne by the Commonwealth Government.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

In 1914-15 there were 4,808,627 acres under crops. About one-fourth of the total area of the State is under forest. The cultivated land is principally to be found in small holdings of less than 500 acres. The State is divided into three divisions—the Eastern, Central and Western. The Districts in the Eastern and Central Divisions are, for the purpose of local administration, grouped into 12 Land Board Districts, which are sub-divided into 88 Land Districts. The Western Division is under the control of the Western Land Board—consisting of three Commissioners—and the head offices of the Lands Department and Western Land Board offices are in Sydney. In the Eastern and Central Divisions there are a number of tenures under which land may be acquired, those of most interest to intending settlers being Conditional Purchase (with which is associated Conditional Lease), Homestead Selection, Settlement Lease, Conditional Purchase Lease, and Settlement Purchase. Conditional Purchase and Conditional Lease:—The Statutory price of Crown lands available for residential Conditional Purchase is 1*l*. per acre, but Crown Lands may be specially classified at prices either above or below that amount. A deposit of 10 per cent. is required, and the balance is payable in regular instalments after the third year, and may extend over a period exceeding 30 years, interest being charged at the rate of 2½ per cent. on the outstanding balance only. The selector must reside on his holding for the first 10 years, and certain improvements must be carried out. Homestead Selection:—This tenure is practically a perpetual lease, and offers special advantages to the man with small means, as the land may be held for the first six years at the low rental of 1¼ per cent. of its capital value. After issue of the Crown grant, or after expiration of first six years if the grant be not previously issued, the annual rental is 2½ per cent. of the capital value of the land. Settlement Lease:—This has a term of 40 years and the lessee must reside on the land during its currency. After the first five years a Homestead Grant of 1,280 acres may be obtained of that part of the lease on which the dwelling-house is situated. Conditional Purchase Lease:—This tenure is especially attractive to the land seeker with small capital. The lease has a term of 40 years—rental 2½ per cent. of the capital value—but may be converted at any time into a Conditional Purchase and thus be put on a freehold basis. Settlement Purchase:—This form of holding arises when large private estates are resumed by the Crown and made available in blocks, each one of which is intended to support a family in comfort. A ten years' residence condition is attached and instalments extend over a period of 38 years, after which the purchase becomes freehold. Homestead selections and settlement leases may be converted into conditional purchases or conditional purchase leases.

In the Western Division the land is leased by the State to pastoral tenants, mainly for grazing, but small areas in or near townships are leased for special purposes.

The following are the chief features of the Act of 1901, which governs the administration of the western lands:—

(1) Tenure of Western leaseholds extended to June 30, 1948, subject to resumption of one-eighth of the total area; and all new leases are made to expire on the same date. (2) Occupation Licenses are held as Annual Tenures—out of which Western Lands Leases may be granted. (3) Improvements on the land at date of granting of the Leases become the property of the Crown on the expiration of the Leases, but the Lessees have tenant right in all authorised improvements. (4) Rent—minimum 2s. 6d. per square mile; maximum 7d. per sheep on the carrying capacity of the land.

The total land alienated or in process of alienation on June 30, 1915, was 58,779,449 acres. The total land occupied under leases of various kinds was 121,012,668 acres. The following table gives the statistics of alienated holdings of 1 acre and upwards for years ended December 31, 1905—1913, and at June 30, 1915:—

The principal fruit-culture of the State is that of the orange. There were in June, 1915, 21,912 acres under citrus fruit, with an estimated production of 848,670 bushels of oranges, 209,013 bushels of lemons, 386,096 bushels of mandarins, and 1,845 bushels of other citrus fruit.

At June 30, 1916, the State had (estimated) 32,583,000 sheep, 2,405,000 cattle, 720,000 horses, and 280,000 pigs. The production of wool as in the grease was in 1910, 415,338,000 lbs., in 1911, 371,546,000 lbs., in 1912, 326,804,000 lbs., in 1913, 357,985,000 lbs., from January to June, 1914, 131,810,000 lbs., and during the year ended June 30, 1915, 318,935,000 lbs.

There were 146,295 persons engaged in agricultural and pastoral pursuits during the year ended June 30, 1915.

There is a Forest Conservation Department. The timber reserves, in which State forests are included, cover an area of about 7,250,000 acres. The revenue from royalties, licences, &c., amounted in 1912 to 96,965*l.*; in 1913 to 97,613*l.*; in 1914 to 94,996*l.*; and in 1915 to 73,710*l.* During the six months ended June, 1916, the receipts were 32,912*l.*

II. MINES AND MINERALS.

Gold is found in all parts of New South Wales. The following table shows the quantity and value of the gold won in New South Wales since its discovery in 1851:—

Periods	Weight	Value
	Oz.	£
1851-1900	13,118,856	48,422,001
1901-1905	1,353,526	4,813,285
1906-1910	1,316,144	4,756,907
1911	215,274	769,353
1912	200,243	702,129

1915	162,008	562,819
Total	16,698,258	61,190,370

Most of the gold won in the State is received at the Mint for coinage. The value of silver and silver-lead and ore obtained to the end of 1915 was 67,902,039*l*. In 1915, 3,237,432 ounces of silver were raised, valued at 322,244*l*., and 282,776 tons of silver-lead ore and metal, altogether valued at 2,309,418*l*. 6,793 tons of copper were produced in 1915, valued at 234,437*l*. The estimated value of copper raised from its discovery in 1858 until the end of 1915 is 12,891,943*l*. The total value of the output of tin since the mines were opened in 1872 has been 10,282,811*l*., the value in 1915 being 266,780*l*. for 2,188 tons. In 1915 there were 112 coal mines, employing 17,959 men; the quantity of coal raised in 1915 was 9,949,008 tons, valued at 3,424,630*l*. The estimated value of coal raised to the close of 1915 amounted to 80,020,454*l*. During 1915, 7 shale mines were in operation, 262 miners raising 15,474 tons of oil shale valued at 12,890*l*., making the total value of production to end of 1915, 2,370,432*l*. In 1915, 417,753 tons of coke were manufactured, valued at 313,241*l*. In 1915 there were 26 smelting furnaces and ore-dressing establishments giving employment to 2,909 hands, principally for the smelting of silver, tin, and copper ores. The output of zinc (spelter and concentrates) in 1915 was 190,916 tons, valued at 1,111,569*l*.; and of lead, 30,305 tons, valued at 689,439*l*. Other minerals, &c., produced in 1915 were: iron, 76,318 tons, valued at 267,000*l*.; lime, 33,010 tons, 42,756*l*.; wolfram, 50 tons, 5,031*l*.; Portland cement, 418,583*l*. Between 1901 and 1915 the value of the minerals produced in N.S.W. increased from 5,820,737*l*. to 10,064,569*l*. The aggregate value of the mineral products of N.S.W. to the end of 1915 is 262,178,342*l*. The value produced in 1916 was 10,975,742*l*.

III. MANUFACTURES.

The following classification of manufactories, number of hands employed, and value of lands and buildings, machinery, implements and other plant invested, is compiled from the returns of 1914-15.

Commerce and Communications.

The external commerce of New South Wales, exclusive of inter-State trade, is included in the Statement of the Commerce of the Commonwealth.

The total commerce of the State for 5 years is given in the following table:—

Year. <sup>1</sup>	Total Imports	Home Produce Exported	Other Produce Exported	Total Exports
1912	32,363,630	30,661,028 <sup>2</sup>	2,297,501	32,958,529

1915-1916	33,379,697	—	—	40,958,316

The chief exports are gold, silver, copper, lead, tin, coal, wool, butter, wheat, flour, fruit, timber, meat (frozen and preserved), hides and skins, tallow, leather, cocoa nut oil.

Nearly all tramways are the property of the Government. There were, on June 30, 1916, 220½ miles open for traffic, the capital cost being 8,166,423*l*. The gross earnings for 1915-16 were 1,991,628*l*.; the working expenses, 1,602,650*l*.; and the percentage of working expenses to revenue 80·47. There were, besides, 4 miles of privately-owned tramways. On June 30, 1916, 4,188 miles of railway were open; the revenue for 1915-16 was 8,006,078*l*.; the expenditure, 5,661,168*l*.; the number of passengers carried, 92,850,838.

For Shipping, Posts and Telegraphs, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Money and Credit.

The value of gold coin issued at the Royal Branch Mint, Sydney, during five years, was:—

Year	Gold	Year	Gold
1911	2,728,310	1914	1,967,806
1912	2,404,136	1915	1,864,036
1913	2,274,740

In addition to the above, Australian silver coin to the value of 735,950*l*., and Bronze coin valued at 40,220*l*., were issued to December 31, 1915.

The average assets of the banks (18 in 1916) trading in New South Wales, according to returns relating to operations within the State for the last quarter of recent years, were —

The Savings Bank of New South Wales was established in 1832, the Governor being president, and the management vested in trustees. The bank was amalgamated with the Government Savings Bank of New South Wales in May, 1914.

The Government Savings Bank, established in 1871, was reorganised by an Act passed in 1906, by which it was placed under three commissioners. Its business is carried on in two separate departments—the Savings Bank Department and the Advance Department, the former of which receives and invests deposits, and pays interest on amounts not exceeding 500*l.*, while to the latter has been handed over the administration of the State system of loans to agriculturists, formerly vested in an Advance to Settlers Board.

Statistics are given below; the figures for 1913 and later include the returns of the Savings Department of the Commonwealth Bank:—

VICTORIA

Constitution and Government.

Victoria, formerly a portion of New South Wales,* was, in 1851, proclaimed a separate colony, with a partially elective Legislative Council, and in 1855 responsible self-government was conferred. The legislative authority is vested in a Parliament of two Chambers. By an Act of 1906, separate representation of State public servants was abolished, and the Upper House now consists of 34 members, elected for six years, and the Lower of 65, elected for three years (unless sooner dissolved). Members of the Council must be in possession of an estate of the net annual value of 50*l.* for one year prior to their election; and electors must be in the possession or occupancy of property of the rateable value of 10*l.* per annum if derived from freehold, or of 15*l.* if derived from leasehold or the occupation of rented property. No electoral property qualification is required for graduates of British or Colonial universities, matriculated students of the Melbourne University, ministers of religion of any denomination, certificated teachers, lawyers, medical practitioners, and officers of the army and navy active and retired. One-half of the members of the Legislative Council retire every three years. The members of the Legislative Assembly require no property qualification, and are elected by universal male and (since 1908) female suffrage, and no person may vote in more than one district, nor twice in the same district. Clergymen of any religious denomination are not allowed to hold seats in either the Legislative Council or the Legislative Assembly.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are entitled to reimbursement for expenses at the rate of 300*l.* per annum, and members of both Houses have free passes over all the railways.

Governor.—Hon. Sir Arthur Lyulph Stanley, K.C.M.G. (Salary 5,000*l.* Appointed January, 1914.

Lieutenant Governor.—Hon. Sir John Madden, G.C.M.G., LL.D.

In the exercise of the executive the Governor is assisted by a Cabinet of responsible ministers.

The Ministry, formed in October, 1916, is as follows:—

Premier, Treasurer, and Minister of Labour.—Hon. Sir A. J. Peacock, K.C.M.G., M.L.A.

Chief Secretary and Minister of Public Health.—Hon. D. McLeod, M.L.A.

Minister of Railways and Water Supply.—Hon. H. McKenzie, M.L.A.

Minister of Lands.—Hon. W. Hutchinson, M.L.A.

Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. F. W. Hagellthorn, M.L.C.

Attorney-General and Minister of Public Instruction.—Hon. H. S. W. Lawson, M.L.A.

Minister of Mines and Forests.—Hon. T. Livingston, M.L.A.

Commissioner of Public Works.—Hon. W. A. Adamson, M.L.C.

Ministers without Office.—Hons. J. G. Membrey, M.L.A., R. G. McCutcheon, M.L.A., A. Robinson, M.L.C., and W. L. Baillicu, M.L.C.

The Premier receives 1,400*l.* and the other ministers 1,000*l.* each per annum. At least four of the ministers must be members of either the Legislative Council or the Assembly, but not more than two shall be members of the Council, nor more than six be members of the Assembly.

State of the parties in the Legislative Assembly (Oct. 1916): Ministerialists, 43; Labour Opposition, 22.

Agent-General for Victoria in Great Britain.—Hon. Sir Peter McBride, Offices, Melbourne Place, The Strand, W.C.

Secretary.—H. G. W. Neale, J.P.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local administration the State is divided into urban and rural municipalities. The former, called cities, towns, and boroughs, ought not to be of a greater area than nine square miles, and in being constituted must contain at least 500 householders, and rateable property capable of yielding 300*l.* upon a rate of one shilling in the £. The latter, called shires, are portions of country, of undefined extent, containing rateable property capable of yielding a revenue of 1,500*l.* on a rate of one shilling in the £. In 1915 there were 52 urban and 141 rural municipalities, only 650 square miles in the State not being included within their limits. Every ratepayer has one or more votes, according to the amount of his rates.

Area and Population.

The State has an area of 87,884 square miles, or 56,245,760 acres, about  $\frac{1}{4}$  part of the whole area of Australia. The State is divided into 37 counties, varying in area from 920 to 5,933 square miles.

The growth of the population, as shown by census returns, is exhibited in the following table:—

Date of Enumeration	Males	Females	Total	Annual rate of Increase per cent.
March 29, 1857	264,334	146,432	410,766	—
April 7, 1861	328,651	211,671	540,322	7·88
April 2, 1871	401,050	330,478	731,528	3·07
April 3, 1881	452,083	410,263	862,346	1·65
April 5, 1891	598,414	541,991	1,140,405	2·83
March 31, 1901	603,883	597,458	1,201,341	0·48
April 2, 1911	655,591	659,960	1,315,551	0·91

The average density of the population is 15 persons to the square mile, or one person to every 43 acres.

The population in 1891 included 9,377 Chinese and 565 aborigines; in 1901, 7,349 Chinese and 652 aborigines; and in 1911, 5,601 Chinese and 643 aborigines.

At the date of the census of 1911, 98 per cent. of the population were British subjects by birth; native Victorians numbered 1,010,219, or 77 per cent. of the population; natives of the other Australian States, 98,726; of New Zealand, 10,067; of England and Wales, 89,382; of Ireland, 41,477; of Scotland, 26,577; of Germany, 6,142; of Austria 355; of other countries, 20,285; 1,303 were born at sea and the birthplaces of 11,018 were unspecified.

Of the total population in 1911, there were 577,053 bread-winners and 721,187 dependants, while 17,861 were not accounted for. Of the bread-winners there were—professional, 43,819; domestic, 62,175; commercial, 91,611; industrial, 187,773; engaged in transport, 39,238; primary producers, 144,384 (including agricultural, 86,152; pastoral, 29,340; fisheries, 873; mining, 20,239; forestry, 5,151; water conservation, 1,627; capture of wild animals and their produce, 1,002); indefinite, 8,053.

Over three-fifths of the total population of Victoria live in towns. At the end of 1915 it was estimated that the town population numbered 897,060, out of a total population of 1,417,801.

Inclusive of the suburbs the estimated population on December 31, 1915, of Melbourne was 684,000, or nearly half of that of the State; Ballarat, 42,252; Bendigo, 37,660; Geelong, 35,285; Warrnambool, 7,300; Castlemaine, 7,387; Maryborough, 5,100; Hamilton, 5,000; Mildura, 4,800; and Stawell, 4,500.

The following are the births, deaths, and marriages in the State for five years :—

Year	Total Births	Illegitimate	Deaths	Marriages	Surplus of Births
1911	33,044	1,964	15,217	11,088	17,827
1912	35,817	2,049	16,595	11,738	19,222
1913	35,970	2,171	15,474	11,324	20,496
1914	36,224	2,016	16,503	11,830	19,721
1915	35,009	2,012	15,823	12,832	19,186

The recorded immigration into and emigration from the State of Victoria by sea were as follow in each of the six years :—

Year	Immigration (by sea)	Emigration (by sea)	Year	Immigration (by sea)	Emigration (by sea)
1910	82,591	77,951	1913	114,586	101,718

Of the immigrants in 1915, 34,961 were females, and of the emigrants 33,792 were females.

Religion.

There is no State Church in Victoria, and no State assistance has been given to religion since 1875. At the date of the census of 1911 76½ per cent. of the population were Protestants, 22½ per cent. were Roman Catholics, and a half per cent. were Jews. The following were the enumerated numbers of each of the principal religions in 1911:—Episcopalians 475,208 (including 'Protestant,' so stated, 24,116); Presbyterians, 234,553; Methodists, 176,662; other Protestants, 93,729; Roman Catholics, 286,483; Jews, 6,270; Buddhists, Confucians, &c., 2,572; others (including unspecified), 40,129.

Instruction.

Educational establishments in Victoria are of four kinds, viz., the University, established under a special Act and opened in 1855, with its three affiliated colleges, State schools (primary), technical schools or colleges, and private schools. Out of the general revenue the University received in 1914-15, by way of endowment, 9,000*l.*, and for buildings, apparatus, &c., 20,302*l.* It is both an examining and a teaching body, and grants degrees in all Faculties except Divinity.

Affiliated to the University are three colleges—Trinity, Ormond, and Queen's—in connection with the Church of England, Presbyterian, and Wesleyan Churches respectively; also the School of Mines at Ballarat. From the opening of the University to the end of 1915, 7,929 students matriculated, and 5,557 direct degrees were conferred. In 1915 the students who matriculated numbered 316, the direct graduates numbered 347, and there were 1,351 students attending lectures.

Public instruction is strictly secular; it is compulsory for children between the ages of 6 and 14, and free for the subjects comprised in the ordinary course of instruction. In 1915 there were 2,227 State schools with 6,085 teachers, a total enrolment of 250,264 scholars, and an average attendance of 160,835 or 64 per cent. of the numbers on the roll. Amongst persons aged 15 years and upwards at the census of 1911, 98 per cent. were able to read and write. In 1914-15 the total cost of public instruction, exclusive of expenditure on buildings, was 1,054,854*l.*—all paid by the State. Secondary education is for the most part under the control either of private persons or proprietary bodies, usually connected with some religious denomination. There were, in 1915, 509 registered schools in Victoria, with 1,879 teachers, and a net enrolment of 52,638 scholars. Nearly one-fourth of these schools, about one-third of the teachers, and over half of the scholars were estimated to be in connection with the Roman Catholic denomination, the members of which do not as a rule avail themselves of the free education afforded by the State.

Under the auspices of the Education Department are 21 technical schools, a college of domestic economy, a working men's college, two agricultural colleges, and a horticultural college. In 1915 there were 320 teachers attached to the technical schools, irrespective of agricultural and horticultural colleges, the gross enrolment of pupils being 6,842.

Old Age Pensions, &c., Justice and Crime.

On July 1, 1909, the Federal Old Age Pensions Act came into operation, and the State pensioners were taken over by the Federal authorities. The number in Victoria on September 30, 1916, was 28,390. Pensions are also granted to invalids, 7,075 being on the register on September 30, 1916.

An Act was passed by the Federal Parliament in October 1912, providing for the payment, on application, of 5*l.* to the mother of every child born in the Commonwealth, no additional sum to be paid for twins. From the date of commencement (October 10, 1912) to September 30, 1916, the allowance was granted to 138,495 mothers in the State of Victoria.

There is a Supreme Court with a Chief Justice and four puisne judges. There are courts of general and petty sessions, county courts, courts of insolvency, courts of mines, and courts of licensing. The following are the criminal statistics for five years:—

	1911	1912	1913	1914	1915
Arrested . . . . .	19,398	19,814	21,554	21,084	20,276
Summarily convicted . . . . .	11,543	11,795	12,349	12,011	11,742
Committed for trial . . . . .	522	518	568	518	561
Sentenced after commitment . . . . .	334	352	352	342	391

The number of individuals arrested during 1915 was 14,716.

There are 8 gaols and 3 reformatory prisons in Victoria, besides 6 police gaols. At the end of 1915 there were confined in these prisons and police gaols 763 males and 98 females.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure of the State in the years shown were :—

Year ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure	Year ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1912	10,181,840	10,171,336	1915	10,529,017	11,706,968
1913	10,508,945	10,479,741	1916	11,169,900	11,402,715
1914	10,958,637	10,944,718

The following table shows the actual amounts of State revenue and expenditure under the principal heads during 1914-15 :—

Heads of Revenue	Amount	Heads of Expenditure	Amount

		Other expenditure . . . . .	466,998
Total . . . . .	10,529,017	Total . . . . .	11,706,968

The amount raised by taxation (exclusive of taxes collected by Commonwealth) as shown in the above table, viz. 1,762,041*l.*, was equivalent to a proportion of 1*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* per head of population.

Victoria has a debt, incurred in the construction of public works, which amounted, on June 30, 1915, to 72,183,927*l.* (inclusive of temporary Treasury bills). Of this debt 52,425,826*l.* was borrowed for the construction of railways, 9,782,466*l.* for waterworks, 1,559,303*l.* for State school buildings, &c., and 8,436,332*l.* for other public works and purposes. The nominal rate of interest on the public debt varies from 3 to 4½ per cent., and averages 3·62 per cent.

The net local ordinary revenue and expenditure (Municipalities, Harbour Trusts, Metropolitan Board of Works, and Fire Brigade Boards) for 1915 were respectively 3,116,083*l.* and 2,922,978*l.* The net local debt (exclusive of amounts borrowed first by Government) amounted to about 19,004,244*l.* on June 30, 1915.

The estimated total value of the rateable property of the State in 1915 amounted to about 318,960,116*l.*, and the annual value was 16,942,062*l.*

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Of the total area of Victoria about 31,816,049 acres at the end of 1915 were either alienated or in process of alienation. Of the remainder about 5,545,235 acres are at present suitable for agriculture; 8,512,959 acres for pastoral purposes; 252,947 acres are held under perpetual lease; State forests, timber, water, and other reserves, 4,991,322 acres; auriferous land, 692,387 acres; roads, 1,732,720 acres; and unsold land in towns, &c., 2,702,141 acres.

The total number of holdings in 1915-16 was 73,004.

The following table shows the areas under the principal crops and the produce of each for five years:—

Years ended March 31	Total Area Cultivated	Wheat		Oats		Barley		Potatoes		Hay
	1,000 Acres	1,000 Acres	1,000 Bushels	1,000 Acres	1,000 Bushels	1,000 Acres	1,000 Bushels	1,000 Acres	1,000 Tons	1,000 Acres	1,000 Tons

1916	7,079	3,680	58,532	354	9,329	61	1,734	57	174	1,330	2,342

The produce per acre of the principal crops was:—

Year ended March 31	Wheat	Oats	Barley		Potatoes	Hay
			Malting	Other
	Bushels	Bushels	Bushels	Bushels	Tons	Tons
1912	9·65	15·17	19·75	17·79	2·50	1·20
1913	12·58	18·95	24·27	24·58	4·02	1·31
1914	12·84	20·11	21·79	21·71	2·37	1·38
1915	1·38	3·70	11·79	7·43	2·89	0·64
1916	15·90	26·36	29·48	27·11	3·05	1·76

In two years the area and yield of vines and of tobacco were:—

	1914-15		1915-16
	Acres	Yield	Acres	Yield
Vines	21,801	605,636 gall.	22,853	1,880,367 gall.
Tobacco	196	1,192 cwt.	160	Not available.

In addition to these, green forage covered 60,426 acres, and gardens (both market and private) and orchards occupied an extent of 91,499 acres in 1915-16.

At the end of March, 1916, there were in the State 493,779 horses, 1,043,604 head of cattle, 10,545,632 sheep, and 192,002 pigs. The wool produced in the season 1912-13 amounted to 88,762,612 lbs., valued at 3,751,083*l.*; in 1913-14 to 106,833,690 lbs., valued at 4,032,954*l.*; in 1914-15 to 95,406,867 lbs., valued at 3,410,913*l.*; and in 1915-16 to 82,330,198 lbs., valued at 4,066,003*l.* The quantity of butter produced in 1915 was 42,345,113 lbs.

At the end of 1915 the area of State Forests in Victoria was 4,160,342 acres. The amount of timber sawn in 1915 in Victoria Saw Mills from Victorian logs was 62,588,760 super. feet valued at the mill at 234,710*l.*

The estimated value of Victorian production in 1915 was as follows:—

Agricultural Production	19,765,128	Miscellaneous	1,990,003
Pastoral and Dairying	10,501,954
Mining	1,946,697	Total Primary Products	35,085,142

The total quantity of gold raised from 1851 to 1915 is estimated at 74,810,887 oz., of an aggregate value of 296,703,957*l.* The estimated number of miners at work on the gold-fields in 1915 was 8,755. About 1,300 persons were employed in coal mining. Total mineral production, 1915, 1,955,447*l.*, compared with 2,279,009*l.* in 1914.

III. MANUFACTURES.

The total number of manufactories, works, &c., in 1915, was 5,413, of which 1,785 used steam or gas engines; the aggregate horse-power used was 117,815; the number of hands employed was 113,834; and the lands, buildings, machinery, and plant were valued at 22,529,072*l*. The value of materials used was 30,728,743*l*., and of articles produced or work done, 51,468,093*l*. The wages paid (excluding working proprietors) amounted to 11,036,345*l*. The manufactures are almost entirely for home consumption.

Commerce and Communications.

The commerce of Victoria, exclusive of inter-State trade, is included in the statement of the commerce of the Commonwealth of Australia.

The total value of the imports and exports of Victoria, excluding inter-State trade, in six years, was:—

Years	Total Imports (Oversea)	Total Exports (Oversea)	Years	Total Imports (Oversea)	Total Exports (Oversea)
	£	£		£	£
1910	20,002,606	18,183,236	1913	24,387,073	17,835,395
1911	21,850,963	18,915,716	1914-15	20,997,294	12,335,779
1912	25,081,074	19,113,121	1915-16	26,782,893	14,744,135

The customs duties collected in 1915-16 amounted to 4,202,352*l*., equal to 16 per cent. of the total value of oversea imports.

The chief exports are gold, wool, live-stock, cereals, butter, hides and skins, tallow, and meat frozen or preserved.

All the railways are the property of the State and are under the management of three commissioners appointed by the Government. The following are some railway statistics (for the years ending June 30):—

		1912	1913	1914	1915	1916
Length of double lines	(miles)	321	326	326	326	324
" single "	"	3,354	3,374	3,562	3,602	3,825

Goods carried	(1,000 tons)	5,297	5,152	5,160	5,410	5,830

On June 30th, 1916, the total mileage of railways open for traffic was 4,105 miles. There were at that date 138½ miles of new lines under construction.

Credit.

A branch of the Royal Mint was opened at Melbourne on June 12, 1872. Up to Dec. 31, 1915, 36,638,224 oz. of gold, valued at 144,179,433*l*., was received at the mint, and gold coin and bullion issued of the value of 144,182,910*l*. No silver or bronze coin is struck at the Melbourne Mint.

On June 30, 1916, the Savings Bank of Victoria (with which have been amalgamated the Post Office Savings Banks) had 123 banks and branches with 322 agencies at post offices in the State. There were (including the Common wealth Savings Bank) 746,597 depositors, with a total balance of 26,389,993*l*. There is a special branch of the Savings Bank, called the "Advances Department," which makes advances to farmers and others at a low rate (5 per cent.) of interest, repayable by instalments extending over a term not exceeding 31½ years. The requisite funds are raised by the issue of bonds, taken up either by the Commissioners of Savings Banks or by the general public, and repayable by half-yearly drawings. The amount advanced during 1914-15 was 691,255*l*.; and the total balance of loans at June 30, 1915, was 3,724,759*l*.

During the December quarter of 1915 there were in Victoria 16 banks, possessing 691 branches and agencies, with notes in circulation, 103,568*l*., deposits 54,040,102*l*., the total liabilities being 55,813,235*l*.; gold and silver, coined and in bars, and Australian notes, 14,622,568*l*.; landed property, 1,506,553*l*.; advances, &c., 43,320,286*l*.; total assets, 59,449,407*l*. Total paid-up capital, 25,112,160*l*.

QUEENSLAND

Constitution and Government.

Queensland, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was formed into a separate colony in 1859, and responsible government was conferred. The power of making laws and imposing taxes is vested in a Parliament of two Houses—the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. The former consists of 38 members, nominated by the Crown for life; but no limit is put to the number. The Legislative Assembly comprises 72 members, returned from 72 electoral districts for three years, elected by ballot. Members of the Assembly are entitled to payment of 300*l*. per annum, with travelling expenses, and an allowance for stationery and postage. At the General Election of May, 1915, there were 184,627 males and 160,568 females registered as qualified to vote under the 'Electors Act Amendment Act of 1914.' This provides for male and female adult franchise, a twelve months' continuous residence in the State being the only proviso. State of parties (May, 1915), Labour, 46; Liberal Opposition, 26.

Governor of Queensland.—Major Sir Hamilton John Gould-Adams, G.C.M.G., C.B. (1914). (Salary, 3,000*l.*)

Lieutenant-Governor.—Hon. Sir Arthur Morgan.

The Executive Council of ministers appointed June, 1915, consists of the following members:—

Premier and Chief Secretary, Attorney-General, and Vice-President of the Executive Council.—Hon. T. J. Ryan.

Home Secretary.—Hon. J. Huxham.

Treasurer and Secretary for Public Works.—Hon. E. G. Theodore.

Secretary for Public Lands.—Hon. J. McE. Hunter.

Secretary for Mines.—Hon. Mr. Jines.

Secretary for Railways.—Hon. J. H. Coyne.

Secretary for Public Instruction.—Hon. H. F. Hardacre.

Secretary for Agriculture and Stock.—Hon. W. Lennon.

Assistant Minister.—Hon. J. A. Fihelly.

Each minister has a salary of 1,000*l.*; the Vice-President of the Executive Council receives 300*l.* in addition.

Agent-General for Queensland in Great Britain.—Major Sir T. B. Robinson, K.C.M.G. Office.—409, Strand.

Secretary.—Mr. P. J. Dillon.

Provision is made for Local Government by the subdivision of the State into areas denominated respectively cities, towns and shires. These are under the management of aldermen and councillors, who are elected by the ratepayers and are charged with the control of all matters of a parochial nature, more especially the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges within their allotted areas. Shires for the most part consist of purely rural districts.

The number and area of these subdivisions, together with the receipts and expenditure for the year 1915, were:—

	No.	Area in square miles	Receipts	Expenditure
Cities . . . . .	10	81	£ 369,680	£ 446,791
Towns . . . . .	27	318	183,144	192,920
Shires . . . . .	147	669,495	513,736	533,852

Area and Population.

Queensland comprises the whole north-eastern portion of the Australian continent, including the adjacent islands in the Pacific Ocean and in the Gulf of Carpentaria. Estimated area 670,500 English square miles, with a seaboard of 2,260 miles. In 1825 a branch penal settlement was made at Moreton Bay; in 1842 free settlers were admitted to the country, and during the next twenty years great progress was apparent.

The increase in the population at different periods since 1846 has been as follows :—

Years	Population	Equivalent increase per cent. per annum	Years	Population	Equivalent increase per cent. per annum	Years	Population	Equivalent increase per cent. per annum
1846	2,257	—	1868	99,901	15.63	1886	322,853	10.24
1856	18,544	72.16	1871	120,104	6.74	1891	393,718	4.39
1861	30,059	17.06	1876	173,283	8.85	1901	418,129	2.78
1864	61,467	34.83	1881	213,525	4.64	1911	605,813	2.16

Estimated population, exclusive of aborigines, June 30, 1916, 687,471.

At the census of 1911 the population consisted of 329,506 males, and 276,307 females. The total included 6,138 male and 576 female Chinese; 1,865 male and 400 female "Polynesians"; 1,428 male and 75 female Japanese; 4,573 persons of other Asiatic, &c., races. In addition there were 5,145 male and 3,542 female full-blooded Aborigines living in a civilised manner. The total number of aborigines has been estimated at 20,000.

As to occupation the population in 1911 was classified as follows :—Professional class, 17,653; domestics, 26,570; commercial, 34,564; industrial, 68,262; transport and communication, 23,142; agricultural, pastoral, mining, &c., 101,904; indefinite, 4,800; independent, 2,758; dependent class (wives, children, scholars, students, dependent relatives, &c.), 326,070.

Of the total population, 1911, 382,216 persons (exclusive of aborigines) were born in the State; 65,266 in England; 31,599 in Ireland; 20,530 in Scotland; 2,620 in Wales; 38,921 in N. S. Wales; 15,943 in Victoria; 3,348 in S. Australia; 482 in W. Australia; 1,798 in Tasmania; 3,987 other Australians, including 'Australia' undefined; 2,576 in New Zealand; 11,979 in Germany; 2,641 in Denmark; 1,054 in Sweden; 685 in Norway.

The following table shows the births, deaths, and marriages for five years :—

Years	Total Births	Illegitimate	Deaths	Marriages	Excess of Births
1911	16,991	1,088	6,544	5,169	10,447
1912	18,758	1,152	6,921	5,628	11,837
1913	19,747	1,215	6,783	5,662	12,964
1914	19,883	1,165	6,731	5,895	13,152
1915	20,165	1,090	7,560	6,141	12,605

The immigration and emigration, including arrivals and departures by sea and by rail across the border, have been as follows :—Immigration, 1911, 109,720; 1912, 102,486; 1913, 109,810; 1914, 120,544; 1915, 181,008. Emigration, 1911, 97,560; 1912, 100,594; 1913, 99,063; 1914, 117,555; and 1915, 140,447 (including Expeditionary Forces).

Brisbane, the capital, had in 1915 an estimated population, within a ten-mile radius, of 161,938. At the census, 1911, other towns including their suburbs contained: Rockhampton, 20,915; Townsville, 13,835; Maryborough, 11,626; Gympie, 12,419; Ipswich, 25,000; Toowoomba, 24,200; Charters Towers, 17,298.

Religion.

There is no State Church. Previous to 1861 valuable grants of land had been made to the principal religious denominations, which they still retain. The following were the numbers in 1911 :—Church of England, 212,702 ; Church of Rome, 137,086 ; Presbyterian, 75,560 ; Methodist, 59,920 ; Lutheran, 24,235 ; Baptist, 13,715 ; other Christian sects, 90,556 ; Jews, 672 ; other Non Christians, 5,518 ; no religion, 1,906 ; unspecified, &c., 21,893.

Instruction.

Primary secular education is free and by the State compulsory. Of the census population in 1911, 498,939 could read and write ; 3,338 could read only ; 93,193 could not read (including 73,704 children under 5 years of age) ; 10,343 not specified. According to the marriage statistics, 99.04 per cent. of persons married during 1914 were able to read and write. The Public Expenditure on account of education for the year 1915 was 730,164*l*. At the end of 1915 there were 1,447 public elementary schools, excluding 6 high schools, in operation, with 3,682 teachers, and an average daily attendance of 84,477 pupils. Secondary education is provided for by 10 grammar schools, 6 for boys and 4 for girls, with, in 1915, 104 teachers and an average attendance of 1,432 pupils ; 6 'High Schools' with 42 teachers and 631 scholars. There were besides 147 private schools, with 748 teachers, and an average daily attendance of 14,404 pupils. The Government grants annually a considerable number of scholarships, tenable for three years, to the various grammar schools. There were 15 technical schools in 1915 with 7,522 distinct students. The receipts amounted to 36,000*l*., and the expenditure to 37,072*l*. The Queensland University (established in 1911) in Brisbane had, at the end of 1915, 4 professors and 26 lecturers, &c., with 204 students on the roll.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered by Supreme Courts, District Courts, and Courts of Petty Sessions. In these last Justices of the Peace sit, presided over in the more important centres by stipendiary magistrates. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief Justice and four puisne judges. The total number of persons convicted of serious offences by the Superior Courts in 1915 was 351, and the summary convictions at petty sessions numbered 21,601 (excluding 6,024 cases of bail estreated). Including penal establishments, there were, at the end of 1915, 12 prisons, with 416 male and 34 female prisoners. The total police force, including native troopers, averages about 1,200 men.

Pauperism, Old Age Pensions.

Charitable institutions are maintained by public subscription, supplemented by State endowment ; hospitals, benevolent asylums, an institution for the blind, deaf, and dumb, refuges and homes helped. Persons suffering from want were relieved at an expenditure of 5,259*l*., and 3,469*l*. as indigent allowance in lieu of rations, in 1915, at the cost of the State. 5,594 orphans and other homeless and unprotected children were provided for chiefly by the Government at a cost of 81,305*l*. Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are now payable by the Commonwealth. The number of Old Age Pensioners in the State at September 30, 1916, was 12,083, and of Invalid Pensioners, 3,046.

Finance.

The following table shows the net revenue and expenditure of Queensland during five years ending June 30 :—

—	1912-13	1913-14	1914-15	1915-16	1916-17 Estimated
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . . . .	6,378,213	6,973,259	7,202,658	7,706,365	7,876,548
Expenditure . . . . .	6,372,097	6,962,516	7,199,399	7,671,573	8,034,624

The gross income from or expenditure on account of Departments under the control of the Commonwealth is not included.

The chief items of expenditure during 1915-16 were as under :—Interest on public debt, 2,197,169*l.* ; public instruction, 592,178*l.* ; treasurer's department, 243,120*l.* ; public lands department, 183,375*l.* ; department of agriculture, 125,430*l.* ; cost of working railways, 2,750,221*l.* The total expenditure from loans, mostly on public works, was 3,061,839*l.*, of which the principal item was railways, 2,034,614*l.*

The estimated value of landed property in 1915 for assessment for Local Government purposes was 61,919,200*l.* This includes lands leased from the Crown for pastoral purposes, the lessees' interest in which has been capitalised for assessment purposes at 7,350,123*l.*, but is exclusive of unoccupied Crown lands, the property of local bodies, reserves for public purposes, and lands upon which are erected buildings for public worship.

The gross public debt of the State amounted, on June 30, 1916, to 58,261,136*l.*

Defence.

For defence, see under Commonwealth of Australia. The Government gun-vessels are the Gayundah and Paluma (360 tons), sister vessels, launched in 1884, both of which have been appropriated by the Commonwealth Authorities and stationed away from Queensland ; the Otter and Stingaree, 290 and 450 tons, are twin screw tenders.

Production and Industry.

Of the total area of the State, 16,447,382 acres (1915) have been alienated : in process of alienation, under deferred payment system, are 10,776,793, leaving 401,895,825 acres still the property of the Crown, or about 93·66 per cent. of the total area. The receipts from the sale of land up to the end of 1915 amounted to 9,637,595*l.* Provision is made for both conditional and unconditional selection ; under the latter land can be purchased at prices from 13*s.* 4*d.* per acre, payable by twenty annual instalments. Conditional selection is the more general ; homestead farms, agricultural farms, grazing farms, and grazing homesteads can be selected. Homestead farms up to 160 acres, if occupied by selector personally for five years, may be secured in freehold at 2*s.* 6*d.* per acre, payable in ten annual instalments ; but, if conditions have been performed, the purchase may be completed and a title obtained at the end of five years. Agricultural farms can be acquired by a 20 years' lease with right of purchase ; maximum area, 1,280 acres; annual rent one-fortieth of the purchase price, which becomes part of the purchase money. Grazing farms can be secured on a 7, 14, 21, or 28 years' lease; maximum area, 20,000 acres; annual rental varying according to quality; minimum  $\frac{1}{4}$ d. per acre, subject to re-assessment at end of first 7 years and each subsequent 7 years. Grazing homesteads may be leased on similar conditions. In the letting of agricultural and grazing farms and homesteads conditions as to residence are imposed.

A large proportion of the area is leased in squatting runs for pastoral purposes, amounting to 223,896,160 acres in 1915, besides 62,568,511 acres in grazing farms and homesteads, and 45,609,280 acres under occupation licence. The live stock in 1915 numbered 6·6,871 horses, 4,780,898 cattle, 15,950,154 sheep, and 117,787 pigs. The total area under cultivation in 1915 was 1,059,401 acres, and of this 729,588 acres were under crops, besides which 305,186 acres are laid down with permanent artificial pasture. The wool production expressed as greasy, in 1911, 142,382,269 lbs.; in 1912, 136,878,270 lbs.; in 1913, 154,183,114 lbs.; in 1914, 155,478,740 lbs.; and in 1915, 130,783,277 lbs.

A considerable area consists of natural forest, eucalypti, pine and cedar being the timbers mostly in demand, although a considerable quantity of more ornamental woods are utilised by cabinet makers. The amount of wood cut in the various saw mills is shown in the following table (in superficial feet):—

Soft woods . . . . .	98,620,299	101,112,427	89,726,215
Cedar . . . . .	882,092	668,997	433,586
Hardwood . . . . .	57,131,224	66,674,215	54,790,162
Railway sleepers . . . . .	27,531,800	18,476,700	829,548

The quantity actually cut for all purposes is nearly double these quantities. The crops, &c., in two years were as follows:—

	Acres		Yield
	1914	1915	1914	1915
Maize . . . . .	176,372	146,174	4,260,673	2,603,463 bushels

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

Constitution and Government.

South Australia was formed into a British Province by Letters Patent of February, 1836, and a partially elective Legislative Council was established in 1851. The present Constitution bears date October 24, 1856. It vests the legislative power in a Parliament elected by the people. The Parliament consists of a Legislative Council and a House of Assembly. The former is composed of twenty members. Every three years nine members retire, and their places are supplied by new members elected from each of the five districts into which the State is divided for this purpose. The executive has no power to dissolve this body. The qualifications of an elector to the Legislative Council are, to be twenty-one years of age, a natural born or naturalised subject of His Majesty, and have been on the electoral roll six months, besides having a freehold of 50*l.* value, or a leasehold of 20*l.* annual value, or occupying a dwelling-house the rent of which is not less than 17*l.* per annum, or a registered proprietor of a Crown lease with improvements to the value of at least 50*l.*, the property of the elector; head teacher of a college or school residing on premises; postmaster or postmistress residing in the building; railway stationmaster resident in premises; member of police force in charge of a station; officiating minister of religion. By the Constitution Amendment Act, 1899, the franchise was extended to women. There were 88,249 registered electors in 1914. The qualification for a member of Council is merely that he be thirty years of age, a natural born or naturalised subject, and a resident in the State for three years. Each member of the Council and also of the House of Assembly, receives 200*l.* per annum and a free pass over Government railways.

The House of Assembly consist of 46 members elected for 3 years, representing 19 electoral districts. The qualifications for an elector are that of having been on the electoral roll for 6 months, and of having arrived at 21 years of age; and the qualifications for a member are the same. There were 237,545 registered electors in 1914. Judges and ministers of religion are ineligible for election as members. The election of members of both houses takes place by ballot.

State of parties (September, 1915):—Labour, 27; Liberals, 19.

The executive is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown and an Executive Council, consisting of 6 responsible ministers and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Governor of South Australia.—Lieutenant Colonel Sir Henry Lionel Gubbay, K.C.M.G., D.S.O. (February, 1914).

The Chief Justice, being also Lieutenant-Governor, acts pending a new appointment, or during the absence of the Governor.

The Governor has a salary of 4,000*l.* per annum. The departments of the Public Service are controlled by the following ministers:—

Premier, Treasurer and Minister of Education.—Hon. Crawford Vaughan, M.P.

Chief Secretary.—Hon. A. W. Styles, M.L.C.

Attorney-General.—Hon. J. H. Vaughan, M.L.C.

Commissioner of Crown Lands and Immigration and Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. Clarence Goode, M.P.

Commissioner of Public Works.—Hon. Harry Jackson, M.P.

Minister of Industry, Mines, and Marine.—Hon. R. P. Blundell, M.P.

The Ministers have a salary of 1,000*l.* per annum each. They are jointly and individually responsible to the Legislature for all their official acts, as in the United Kingdom.

Agent-General for South Australia in London.—F. W. Young, LL.B.

Secretary and Registrar of Stock.—J. B. Whiting.

The settled part of the State is divided into counties, hundreds, municipalities, and district councils, the last being the most general, as they cover most of the settled districts. The ratepayers have the power of levying rates, &c., and applying the funds for road-making purposes. There are 48 counties, blocks of country thrown open for agricultural purposes. There are 3 extensive pastoral districts—the western, northern, and north-eastern. There are 33 municipalities and 149 district councils.

Area and Population.

The original boundaries of the State, according to the statute of 4 & 5 Will IV. cap. 95, were fixed between 132° and 141° E. long. for the eastern and western boundaries, the 26° of S. lat. for the northern limit, and for the South the Southern Ocean. The boundaries were subsequently extended, under the statute of 24 and 25 Victoria, cap. 44. By Royal Letters Patent, dated July 6, 1863, all the territory lying northward of 26° S. latitude and between the 129th and 138th degrees of East longitude, and now known as the Northern Territory (see below), was added. On January 1, 1911, this Territory was transferred to the Commonwealth. Total area of South Australia proper is 380,070 square miles, i.e., excluding the Northern Territory. (523,620 square miles).

Population (exclusive of aborigines):—

Religion and Instruction. .

The aggregate number of churches and chapels in the State in 1913 was 1,656. At the census of 1911 the numbers belonging to the leading denominations were as follows:—Church of England, 113,781; Roman Catholic, 50,964; Methodists, 100,402; Lutherans, 26,681; Baptists, 21,863; Presbyterians, 22,567; Congregationalists, 13,357; Church of Christ, 9,324; Salvation Army, 3,835; other Christians, 23,769; Jews, 765; Mohammedans, 440; Confucians, &c., 226; other non-Christian, 2,143; not stated, 18,441. No aid from the State is given for religious purposes.

Public instruction is under the charge of the Educational Department. Teachers are paid from the general revenue, public lands being set apart for educational purposes. Education is secular, free, and compulsory. The Government grants exhibitions and scholarships, carrying the holders to higher schools and universities. In 1914 there were 839 schools, 27 being high schools; the number of children under instruction during 1914 was 60,729. There is a training college for teachers. The University of Adelaide, incorporated in 1874, is authorised to grant degrees in arts, law, music, medicine, and science. Its endowment amounts to 290,666*l*. There are several denominational secondary schools. There were 168 private schools, with 11,012 pupils, in 1913.

Justice, Crime, Old Age Pensions.

There is one supreme court, a court of vice-admiralty, 5 courts of insolvency, 104 local courts and police magistrates' courts. There are circuit courts held at several places. There were 94 convictions for felonies and misdemeanours in the Higher Courts and 9,280 in the Magistrates' Courts in 1914. The total number of persons in gaols at the end of 1914 was 341.

Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are now paid by the Commonwealth Government. The number of pensioners in South Australia at September 30, 1916, was: Old Age, 9,222; Invalid, 1,685.

The value of all crops grown in 1914 was estimated at 4,000,000*l.*

The grain estimate for 1915-16 is given as follows:—Wheat, 34,134,500 bushels; barley, 1,697,700 bushels; and oats, 2,134,400 bushels.

Fruit culture is extensively carried on, both fresh and dried fruit being exported. The chief fruit crops, besides grapes, are currants, apples, apricots, peaches, almonds, oranges, lemons, olives, cherries, pears, plums. The live stock in December, 1915, consisted of 253,333 horses, 226,565 cattle, 3,674,547 sheep, and 66,237 pigs. In 1914, the area of over 150,000 square miles was held under pastoral leases.

The mineral wealth as yet discovered consists chiefly of copper, silver and gold. The value of copper produced in 1915 was 561,247*l.*; gold, 25,830*l.*; silver and lead, 902*l.*; other minerals (1914): iron-stone flux, 37,137*l.*; limestone flux, 16,892*l.*; phosphate rock, 6,691*l.*; crude salt, 48,750*l.*; kaolin, 16,38*l.*; radium and radio-active material, 5,215*l.* Value of total mineral production in 1915, 1,000,862*l.*

In 1914 there were 1,323 factories in the State, employing 26,874 hands. Wages and salaries amounted to 2,946,296*l.* Gross value of output, 3,215,970*l.*; machinery, land and buildings, &c., valued at 6,323,370*l.*

A new government department, known as the Department of Chemistry, has been established for the purpose of fostering new industries by the utilisation of products at hand.

Commerce and Shipping.

The Commerce of South Australia, exclusive of inter-State trade, is comprised in the statement of the Commerce of Australia given under the heading of the Commonwealth.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Constitution and Government.

In 1791 Vancouver, in the Discovery, took formal possession of the country about King George Sound. In 1826 the Government of New South Wales sent 20 convicts and a detachment of soldiers to King George Sound and formed a settlement then called Fredericks Town. In 1827 Captain James (afterwards Sir James) Stirling surveyed the coast from King George Sound to the Swan River, and in May, 1829, Captain Fremantle (afterwards Sir Charles Fremantle, G.C.B.) took possession of the territory. In June, 1829, Captain Stirling founded the Swan River Settlement, now the Commonwealth State of Western Australia, and the towns of Perth and Fremantle, and was appointed Lieutenant-Governor. Western Australia thus became a British settlement in 1829.

Large grants of land were made to the early settlers, and agricultural and pastoral occupations were pursued by a small population with varying success, until, in 1850, the State was in a languishing condition, and the inhabitants' petition that it might be made a penal settlement was acceded to. Between 1850 and 1868, when transportation ceased, 9,718 convicts were sent out. The Imperial convict establishment was transferred to the Colonial Government on March 31, 1886.

In 1870 partially representative government was instituted, and in 1890 the administration was vested in the Governor, a Legislative Council, and a Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council was, in the first instance, nominated by the Governor, but it was provided that in the event of the population of the Colony reaching 60,000, it should be elective. In 1893 this limit of population being reached, as set forth in a proclamation dated July 18, of that year, the Colonial Parliament passed an Act (57 Vict. No. 14) amending the constitution.

By the Constitution Acts Amendment Act, 1899, further amended by the Constitution Acts Amendment Act, 1911, it is provided that the Legislative Council shall consist of 30 members representing 10 electoral provinces and holding their seats for six years. Members must be 30 years of age, resident in the State for two years, and either be natural-born British subjects or naturalized for 5 years and resident in the State for 5 years. Every elector must have resided in the State for 6 months, and must possess within the province freehold estate of the clear value of £50, or be a householder occupying a dwelling-house of the clear annual value of £17, or holder of a lease of the value of £17 per annum, or the holder of a lease or license from the Crown of the annual rental of £10, or have his name on the electoral list of a Municipality or Roads Board in respect of property in the province of the annual rateable value of £17. The Legislative Assembly consists of 50 members, each representing one electorate, and elected for 3 years. Members must be 21 years of age, have resided in Western Australia for twelve months, and be either natural-born subjects of the Crown or naturalized for 5 years. Electors must be 21 years of age, natural-born or naturalized subjects of the Crown, and must have resided in the State for 6 months and be on the roll, and must be resident in the district for at least one month when making their claims. Electors for both Houses may be of either sex. No person can be registered as a voter in more than one district or more than once in each Province for which he holds a sufficient qualification. Members of the Legislature are paid 300*l.* a year, and travel free on all Government railways. The entire management and control of the waste lands of the Crown in Western Australia is vested in the Legislature of the State.

State of political parties (1916):—Legislative Council, Labour, 7, Liberal, 18, Country, 4, Independent, 1; Legislative Assembly, Labour, 23, Liberal, 17, Country, 8, Independent, 1, and 1 seat vacant.

Governor.—Rt. Hon. Sir W. Ellison Macartney, K.C.M.G. (1917).

Lieutenant-Governor.—Sir E. A. Stone, K.C.M.G.

The salary provided for the Governor is 4,000*l.* per annum. He is assisted in his functions by a cabinet of responsible ministers, as follows:—

Premier and Colonial Treasurer.—Hon. Frank Wilson, C.M.G., M.L.A.

Minister for Lands and Agriculture.—Hon. Henry Bruce Lefroy, C.M.G., M.L.A.

Minister for Railways and Water Supply, Sewerage and Drainage, and Industries.—Hon. James Mitchell, M.L.A.

Colonial Secretary and Minister for Education.—Hon. Hal Pateshall Colebatch, M.L.C.

Minister for Works and Trading Concerns.—Hon. William James George, M.L.A.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Hon. James Daniel Connolly, M.L.A., and Hon. Dr. Athelstan John Henton Saw, M.A., M.D., M.L.C.

Acting Agent-General in London.—M. L. Moss, K.C.

Offices.—Savoy House, Strand.

Area and Population.

As defined by Royal Commission, Western Australia includes all that portion of the continent situated to the westward of 129° E. longitude, together with the adjacent islands. The greatest length of this territory from Cape Londonderry in the north to Peak Head (south of King George Sound) in the south is 1,480 miles, and its breadth from Steep Point near Dirk Hartogs Island, on the west to the 129th meridian, on the east, about 1,000 miles. According to the latest computations, the total estimated area of the State is 975,920 English square miles, or, 624,588,800 acres. It is divided into 37 magisterial districts.

Western Australia was first settled in 1829, and for many years the population was small.

The enumerated population in the various census years was as follows:—

Years	Males	Females	Total
1848	2,818	1,804	4,622
1854	7,779	3,964	11,743
1859	9,522	5,315	14,837
1870	15,375	9,410	24,785
1881	17,062	12,646	29,708
1891	29,807	19,975	49,782
1901	112,875	71,249	184,124
1911	161,565	120,549	282,114

There were enumerated in 1911, 6,369 pure and 1,475 half-caste aborigines (the former not included in the table) in the settled districts and virtually in the employment of the settlers. The number of wild natives is not known, but the total number of aborigines has been roughly estimated at about 30,000. Of the total population in 1911, 104,203 were returned as born in Western Australia. The number of married persons was 96,482 (50,702 males and 45,780 females); widowers, 4,180; widows, 5,785; divorced, 187 males and 103 females; unmarried, 106,060 males and 68,807 females. The number of males under 21 was 58,838, and of females 56,203. Of the males over 21, 47,323 had never been married, and of the females over 21, 13,609. The estimated population at December 31, 1916 (excluding full-blooded aboriginals) was : males, 160,334; females, 148,854; Total, 309,188.

Perth, the capital, at the time of the 1911 census, had a population, within the 10 mile radius area of the Metropolitan district, of 106,792. This, however, as in the Eastern States, includes the chief port of the State, Fremantle, with its suburbs, the population of which was 20,847. The other principal municipalities, with census population of 1911, are :—

Towns	1911	Towns	1911
Kalgoorlie . . .	8,781	Bunbury . . .	3,763
Boulder . . .	10,824	Geraldton . .	3,478
Albany . . .	3,586	Northam . . .	3,361

The movement of population in 5 years is given as follows :—

Years	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Immigrants	Emigrants
1912	2,524	8,689	3,335	38,326	31,732
1913	2,572	9,218	2,934	37,637	29,366
1914	2,660	9,204	3,043	27,270	31,097
1915	2,581	9,017	2,992	20,734	31,761
1916	2,375	8,599	3,106	20,965	35,286

In 1911 there were 363, in 1912, 382, in 1913, 412, in 1914, 387, and in 1915, 382 illegitimate births.

Religion.

The religious division of the population was as follows at the census of 1911 :—Church of England, 109,435; Methodists, 34,348; Presbyterians, 26,678; Congregationalists, 6,203; Baptists, 4,801; other Protestants, 18,189; Roman Catholics, 56,616; Catholics (Greek and undefined), 5,754; other Christians, 1,736; Jews, 1,790; Mahometans, 1,517; Buddhists, 1,795; other non-Christians, 748; indefinite, 1,555; no religion, 1,260; not stated, 9,689.

Instruction.

Of the total white population of 15 years and upwards in 1911, 1·70 per cent. were stated to be unable to read. Education is compulsory.

The following table shows the average cost per head and attendance in Government schools and in private schools in three years :—

—	No. of Schools	No. of Scholars	Av. Attendance	Cost per Head of av. Attendance
Government Schools				£	s.	d.
1913	583	42,081	36,254	6	0	6
1914	602	44,467	38,518	6	3	7
1915	622	45,956	39,970	6	0	5
Private Schools
1913	119	10,335	9,101	—
1914	123	10,709	9,454	—
1915	124	10,942	9,532	—

The grants to private schools ceased from 1895, but compensation was made to the schools that had so far received subsidy, the sum of 15,000*l.* being divided amongst them in proportion to the grants received by them during 1895.

Education is free throughout from the kindergarten to the University, and comprises ample provision also for secondary education, technical schools, continuation classes, scholarships, etc. During the financial year ended June 30, 1916, the total sum spent on education and schools, including a grant of 13,500*l.* to the University of Perth, was 360,604*l.*

Justice and Crime.

The following table gives the number of offences, apprehensions, and convictions for four years :—

TASMANIA.

Constitution and Government.

Abel Jones Tasman discovered Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania) on November 24, 1642. The island became a British settlement in 1803 as a dependency of New South Wales; in 1825 its connection with New South Wales was terminated; in 1851 a partially elective Legislative Council was established and in 1856 responsible government came into operation. There are a Legislative Council and a House of Assembly called the Parliament of Tasmania. The Legislative Council is composed of eighteen members elected by all natural-born or naturalised subjects of the Crown who possess either a freehold worth 10*l.* a year, or a leasehold of 30*l.*, or are barristers or solicitors on roll of Supreme Court, medical practitioners duly qualified, and all subjects holding a commission, or possessing a degree. Each member is elected for six years. Members of the Legislative Council, and also of the House of Assembly, are paid 150*l.* per annum, and have the right to free railway passes. The House of Assembly consists of thirty members, elected by all natural-born or naturalised subjects who have continuously resided in Tasmania for over 12 months. The Assembly is elected for three years. The number of electors for the Legislative Council in 1912 was 25,413 (19,872 males, 5,541 females), or 13·35 per cent. (estimated on mean population of 191,684), and for the House of Assembly, April 30th, 1913, 103,513 (52,853 males, 50,660 females), or 54·38 per cent. (estimated on mean population of 191,684). The legislative authority vests in both Houses, while the executive is vested in a Governor or Administrator appointed by the Crown.

State of parties, April, 1916: Liberals, 15; Labour 14; Independent, 1.

Governor.—Rt. Hon. F. A. N. Newdegate (1917). (Salary, 2,750*l.*)

Chief Justice.—Hon. H. Nicholls, C.M.G.

The Governor is aided in the exercise of the executive by a Cabinet of responsible ministers, as follows (came into office in April, 1916):—

Premier, Chief Secretary and Minister for Education.—Hon. W. H. Lee, M.H.A.

Attorney General and Minister for Railways.—Hon. W. B. Propsting, M.L.C.

Minister for Lands, Works and Agriculture.—Hon. J. B. Hayes, M.H.A.

Treasurer and Minister for Mines.—Hon. Sir Neil E. Lewis, K.C.M.G., M.H.A.

Other Ministers.—Hon. H. Hays and Hon. T. Shields.

Each of the ministers has a salary of 750*l.* per annum. The Premier has 200*l.* a year. The ministers must have a seat in one of the two Houses.

Agent-General in London.—Hon. Sir John McCull, M.D., LL.D.

Secretary.—Herbert W. Ely.

Offices.—5, Victoria Street, Westminster.

Area and Population.

Area, with Macquarie (170 square miles), 26,215 square miles or about 16,778,000 acres, of which 15,571,500 acres form the area of Tasmania Proper, the rest constituting that of a number of small islands, in two main groups, the north-east and north-west. The colony is divided into eighteen counties.

The population has increased as follows (census returns) :—

Year.	Population.	Increase per Ct. per Annum.	Year.	Population.	Increase per Ct. per Annum.
1861	89,977	2·44	1891	146,667	2·36
1871	99,328	1·13	1901	172,475	1·64
1881	115,705	1·38	1911	191,211	1·04

In 1911 there were 97,591 males and 93,620 females. The average density is 7·38 persons to a square mile. Of the total population in 1911, 79·2 per cent. were natives of Tasmania, 11·5 per cent. natives of the United Kingdom, and 7·3 per cent. natives of other Australasian colonies. In 1911 the population contained 31,470 males and 31,573 females married. The aborigines of Tasmania are entirely extinct.

Estimated population, March 31, 1916, 198,997. The highest population is in December of each year, and the finances are computed on the basis of population at that date. The population on December 31, 1915, was 201,025.

Of the population in 1911, 4,859 were returned as professional ; 7,633 domestic ; 8,115 commercial ; transport and communication, 4,646 ; 16,840 industrial ; 30,755 primary producers (20,013 agricultural, 2,608 pastoral, 5,541 mineral, 2,583 others) ; 2,610 unspecified ; 115,753 dependants.

The births, deaths, and marriages for five years were as follows :—

—	Births.	Marriages.	Deaths.	Excess of Births.
1911	5,444	1,477	1,931	3,513
1912	5,853	1,506	2,057	3,796
1913	5,886	1,620	2,131	3,755
1914	6,017	1,543	1,918	4,099
1915	5,845	1,600	2,015	3,830

Of the total births in 1914, 346, or 5·75 per cent., were illegitimate.

Immigrants and emigrants :—

—	1911	1912	1913	1914	1915
Immigrants . . .	41,503	46,669	45,883	42,647	39,767
Emigrants . . .	45,664	46,740	45,502	47,327	44,488

The direct movement of population is mainly between the Australian States (chiefly Victoria) and Tasmania.

Population of the capital, Hobart and Suburbs (census 3rd April, 1911), 38,391, of Launceston and Suburbs, 23,726. On December 31, 1915, estimated population respectively was 39,838 and 24,661.

Religion.

In 1911, belonging to the Church of England 88,158 ; Roman Catholics, 28,581 ; Catholics (undefined), 4,080 ; Methodists, 24,975 ; Presbyterians, 15,785 ; Independents, 6,000 ; Baptists, 4,757.

Instruction.

Education is compulsory. Elementary education is under the control of a government director. There were in 1915, 16 superior schools or colleges in the State, with an average attendance of about 1,514; 76 other than State schools with 4,430 children on rolls; 455 public elementary schools with 35,355 scholars on roll. There are also 2 high schools with average attendance of 382. There are two technical schools, exclusive of three Schools of Mines (270 scholars), with about 685 pupils, at Hobart and Launceston. The higher education is under a university which holds examinations and grants degrees; in 1915 it had 107 students (92 matriculated and 15 non-matriculated); 143 attending Extension Lectures. There are several valuable scholarships from the lower to the higher schools; also State scholarships tenable at secondary schools. At the census of 1911 the number of persons returned as unable to read was 34,479, or 18·03 per cent. of the population.

The total cost to Government of education in 1915 was 126,456*l.*, distributed as follows: State schools, 113,531*l.*; technical schools, 3,950*l.*; the university, 6,300*l.* There was also an expenditure of 2,675*l.* on libraries and museums.

Justice and Crime.

There is a Supreme Court, courts of petty, general, and quarter sessions, the latter presided over by a stipendiary magistrate, assisted by justices of the peace. According to the Police Report, during the year 1915-16, 4,871 male and 370 females were summarily convicted, and 67 males and 7 females were committed for trial. Before the Supreme Courts and sessions courts 22 persons were convicted in 1915. The total police force on June 30, 1916, was 232. There were 2 gaols, with 61 male and 2 female inmates, at the end of June, 1916, and in training school 32 inmates.

Pauperism, Old Age Pensions.

Besides hospitals and benevolent institutions, there are two establishments for paupers, with 108 male and 97 female inmates on June 30, 1916, the daily average number of persons maintained during the year being about 104 males and 93 females. The total net expenditure during the year 1915-16 was 7,261*l.*

Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are paid by the Commonwealth Government. The number of pensioners in Tasmania at September 30, 1916, was: Old age, 4,564; Invalid, 1,000.

Revenue and Expenditure.

The revenue is derived chiefly from duties, licences, railways, and other public services, and from the rental and sale of Crown lands. The customs, postal and telegraph, and defence services are now in the hands of the Commonwealth, and an amount equal to 25*s.* per head of population is returned to the State.

The public debt of Tasmania amounted June 30, 1916, to 13,908,913*l.*; the debt consists principally of 3½ and 4 per cent. debentures, redeemable from 1920 to 1952, and the whole was raised for the construction of public works.

The total Local Government revenue for 1914-15 was 425,593*l.* (municipalities, 370,195*l.*, marine boards, 55,398*l.*, including to municipalities, 14,416*l.* from Government), and the expenditure, 379,323*l.* (municipal, 349,186*l.*, marine boards, 30,137*l.*). Local debt, 1914, about 1,577,345*l.* (municipal, 1,272,584*l.*, marine boards, 304,761*l.*).

Defence.

For defence, see under Commonwealth of Australia. There are four batteries on the river Derwent, and one on the Tamar.

Production and Industry.

The total area of the colony is 16,778,000 acres, including 1,206,500 acres islands and lakes. Unalienated land, principally heavily timbered or mineral-bearing, about 8,486,974 acres. The quantity of timber cut in saw mills 1915 was about 47,889,991 feet, value 297,588*l.*, including value of box timber. In 1915 10,069 (exclusive of 3,089 dairy) persons were directly engaged in agriculture, 2,639 in pastoral pursuits, and 2,910 in fruit growing principally. In 1915 there were 333,334 acres under crop, and 675,335 acres under permanent artificially sown grasses. Of the total area, 6,351,121 acres were sold or granted to settlers by the Crown up to the end of 1915; while 1,656,698 acres were leased as grazing runs, and 53,060 acres for mining purposes. In 1915-16 the total area under fallow was 34,975 acres; 40,066 acres were devoted to horticulture. Acreage and produce of the chief crops:—

Fruit culture is of great importance: fruit to the value of about 522,781*l.* was produced, and jam pulp and canned fruit valued at 438,555*l.* were manufactured in 1915.

There were in the State 41,422 horses, 169,575 head of cattle, 1,624,450 sheep and lambs, and 37,778 pigs, on March 1, 1916. The wool produced in 1914 was estimated at 8,154,824 lbs., and 8,304,941 lbs. in 1915.

The soil of Tasmania is rich in iron ore, tin, copper, and galena, and there are large beds of coal; it contains the richest tin mine in the world. Gold, 18,547 ozs., to the value of 78,784*l.*, was produced in 1915, silver-lead ore, to the value of 91,689*l.*, and copper ore, &c., 709,534*l.* The total output of gold from the beginning of gold-mining to the end of 1915 was 1,796,850 fine ounces ; value 7,246,267*l.* Owing to cessation of alluvial working, the total number of persons employed in gold-mining has decreased from 2,060 in 1879 to about 100 in 1915. The total number of men employed in silver and copper mining in 1915 was about 2,429, output (10,383 tons silver and 7,967 tons copper) 18,350 tons, valued at 801,223*l.* Tin production in 1915 : 2,599 tons ; value, 292,306*l.* ; men employed, about 1,220. The total value of tin produced up to the end of 1915 was 11,968,511*l.* The total number of men employed in coal-mining in 1915 was 158, output 64,536 tons, valued at 30,418*l.*

Commerce, Shipping, &c.

The commerce of Tasmania, exclusive of inter-State trade, is comprised in the statement of the commerce of Australia, given under the heading of the Commonwealth. Imports and exports :—

—	1911	1912	1913	1914-15	1915-16
	£	£	£	£	£
Total imports . . . . .	816,806	1,009,198	1,025,081	811,255	982,849
Total exports . . . . .	625,031	507,414	522,865	420,007	612,119

The Commonwealth alone collects statistics relating to imports and exports, which are restricted to trade external to Australia. No information is available as to inter-State or to indirect foreign trade.

The exports are chiefly wool, gold, silver, tin, timber, fruit and jam, hops, grain, hides and skins, bark.

The registered shipping in 1915-16 consisted of 113 sailing vessels of 4,364 tons, and 102 steamers of 6,985 tons ; total, 208 vessels of 11,349 tons. For shipping, railways, posts and telegraphs, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Savings Banks.

The number of depositors in the Commonwealth Savings Bank at the end of June, 1916, was : 39,963, and the amount on deposit 1,098,086*l.* In Joint Stock Companies' Savings Banks in February, 1916, there were 45,639 depositors, and the amount on deposit 1,436,180*l.*

THE NORTHERN TERRITORY OF AUSTRALIA.

Government.

The Northern Territory, after forming part of New South Wales, was annexed by Royal Letters Patent dated July 6, 1863, to South Australia. On the establishment of Federation in 1901, the Territory entered the Commonwealth as a corporate part of the State of South Australia. The Commonwealth Constitution Act of 1900 made provision for the surrender to the Commonwealth of any territory by any State, and under this provision an agreement was entered into on December 7, 1907, by the Commonwealth and South Australia for the transfer of the Northern Territory to the former. After the necessary legislation approving this agreement had been passed by the two parliaments concerned, the Territory formally passed under the control of the Commonwealth Government on January 1, 1911. The Commonwealth at the same time assumed responsibility for the State loans contracted by South Australia on behalf of the territory; it took over by purchase the railway from Port Augusta to Oodnadatta; and it undertook to construct a transcontinental railway from Pine Creek southwards to the boundary of South Australia, and to connect these two railways. The cost of these obligations to the Federal Government is stated as follows:—Public Debt of Northern Territory at June 30, 1909, 2,719,000*l.*; deficit, 780,000*l.*; cost of Port Augusta railway, 2,242,000*l.*; estimated cost of transcontinental railway, 4,500,000*l.*; total, 10,241,000*l.* On June 30, 1915, the public debt was 3,359,891*l.*

The South Australian laws remain in force until the Federal Government decrees otherwise by Ordinance. Several Ordinances were passed in 1911 and subsequent years.

Administrator.—Dr. J. A. Gilruth, D.V.Sc., M.R.C.V.S., F.R.S.E.

Area and Population.

The Northern Territory is bounded by the 26th parallel of south latitude, and the 129th and 138th degrees of east longitude. Its area is 523,620 square miles. The area alienated at the end of 1915 amounted to 474,470 acres absolutely; 104,459,233 acres were held under leases and licences; and the remainder, 230,183,097 acres, was unoccupied. The coast line is about 1,040 miles in length. The Territory possesses many fine rivers and several good harbours, the principal harbour being Port Darwin, where Darwin is situated. The greater part of the interior consists of a tableland rising gradually from the coast to a height of about 1,700 feet. On this tableland there are large areas of excellent pasturage. The southern part of the territory is generally sandy with a small rainfall, but it can be watered by means of artesian bores. The climate is tropical, but varies considerably over the whole Territory. The proximity of the sea in the north keeps it fairly equable in the coastal region, but further south the climate is of a continental type, showing a great variation between the hottest and coldest months.

Population.—The population, excluding aborigines, has varied as follows:—

Year.	Europeans.	Others.	Totals.
1881	670	2,731	3,451
1891	1,144	3,754	4,898
1901	1,055	3,756	4,811
1911 (Census)	1,418	1,892	3,310
1914 (31st Dec.)	2,452	1,288	3,720
1916 (30th Sept.)	—	—	4,956

404 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—NORTHERN TERRITORY

Of the 1911 Census total 576 were females. Of the total at the end of 1914, 1,033 were Chinese, 77 Japanese, 86 Malays and Filipinos, and 72 of other races, including half castes.

The aborigines are estimated to number about 20,000, but it is possible this is an under-estimate.

The tribes inhabiting the Northern Territory are Larakaya and Worgait at Port Darwin, Melville Island Tribe, Port Essington Tribe, Djanan Tribe at Katherine Creek, Yangman Tribe round Elsey Creek, Mungarai Tribe along the upper part of the Roper River, Nullakun Tribe middle part of the Roper River, and the Mara Tribe south of the Roper River.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for 4 years were as follows:—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.
	£	£		£	£

The chief sources of revenue for the year ending 30th June, 1915, were the Customs and Excise, 13,466*l.*; Railways, 21,082*l.*; and Postal revenue, 8,922*l.* The chief items of expenditure were as follows:—Postal Department, 20,226*l.*; goldfields and mining, 20,360*l.*; railways, 28,705*l.*; and Administrator's office, 79,191*l.* The Commonwealth is also liable for interest on loans and redemption, in respect of Northern Territory and the Port Augusta Railway, which for 1914-15 totalled 241,119*l.* The deficiency for the year was 391,862*l.*

Production and Industry.

The soils of the Territory differ greatly, but it is stated that most products known to the tropical and temperate zones can be grown successfully. At present, however, agriculture is insignificant. In most parts the natural grasses are extremely rich in nutriment, and provide food for cattle, horses, sheep, and other stock. The numbers of stock at the end of 1915 were:—Cattle, 483,961; horses, 19,957; sheep, 57,827; pigs, 500; goats (at Dec. 31, 1913), 8,866.

The Territory is rich in mineral resources, though these are very little developed. The total value of the production of metals and minerals up to the end of December, 1913, and for 18 months to June 30, 1915, is given as follows:—

—	Total to 1913	1915 (June 30) <sup>1</sup>	—	Total to 1913	1915 (June 30) <sup>1</sup>

TERRITORIES OF THE AUSTRALIAN COMMONWEALTH TERRITORY OF PAPUA (BRITISH NEW GUINEA).

This possession is the south-eastern part of the island of New Guinea, with the islands of the D'Entrecasteaux and Louisiade groups and all islands between 8° and 12° S. latitude, and 141° and 155° E. longitude. It is bounded on the west by the Dutch and on the north by the German possessions. Area 90,540 square miles, of which about 87,786 are on the mainland of New Guinea, and 2,754 on the islands above mentioned. On June 30, 1-16, the population was as follows :—European, 992; coloured, (other than Papuan), 341; Papuans (estimated), from 200,000 to 380,000.

The government of British New Guinea is founded on the British New Guinea Act of November, 1887, and on Letters Patent issued June 8, 1888. The cost of the administration to the extent of 15,000L a year was formerly contributed in equal proportions by New South Wales, Victoria, and Queensland. The Federal Government took over the control in 1901; the political transfer was completed by the Papua Act of the Federal Parliament in November, 1905, and on September 1, 1906, a proclamation was issued by the Governor-General of Australia declaring that British New Guinea was to be known henceforth as the Territory of Papua. There is an executive council composed of 6 official members, and a legislative council composed of the executive councillors and three non-official members nominated by the Governor-General of Australia.

Lieut. Governor and Chief Judicial Officer—J. H. P. Murray, C.M.G.

Government Secretary.—Herbert William Champion.

Tribes have in large areas settled down to peaceful habits. Four missionary bodies are at work; many thousands of natives are being taught by these bodies. 228,013 acres of land have been leased, principally by planters, the principal cultures being coconuts (34,016 acres at June 30, 1916), rubber (7,671 acres), sisal hemp (4,812 acres); tobacco is also being cultivated. On June 30, 1916, there were 47,506 acres of plantations.

By the Papua Act, 1905, freehold alienation is prohibited, but leases may be obtained at low rentals for long terms. Indigenous sago is plentiful in the western portion of the Territory, and there are considerable numbers of native-owned coconut trees. The forests contain valuable timbers, in most cases easily accessible by river. A regulation, which is strictly enforced, requires that each native shall plant a certain number of coconut trees if his land is suitable.

There are four ports of entry—Port Moresby, Samarai, Daru, and Bonagai (Woodlark Island).

There are 10 magisterial districts, each in charge of a resident magistrate. There are also 2 relieving and 12 assistant resident magistrates, and 17 patrol officers. There is a Central Court at Port Moresby, but it holds sittings wherever and whenever necessary. For native government some simple regulations have been passed. There were (1916) 730 village policemen; armed constabulary, 316 (exclusive of Europeans who are officers of armed constabulary).

There are two Government schools at Port Moresby and Woodlark Island, respectively, for European children only. Throughout the Territory there are numerous schools belonging to the various Christian missions; the attendance of native children at these schools is compulsory if English is taught.

Years ended 30 June	Local Revenue	Expenditure	Imports	Exports	Tonnage entered and cleared
	£	£	£	£	Tons
1912	51,035	81,172	235,369	99,990	275,803
1913	48,346	85,170	218,323	128,016	306,478
1914	54,703	81,095	212,134	123,140	358,506
1915	51,961	82,535	202,055	84,714	328,007
1916	49,311	77,913	223,040	125,428	247,887

Revenue is mainly from customs duties. An annual subsidy is given by the Australian Government (30,000*l.* in 1915-16). In addition, in 1914-15 there was a loan of 5,000*l.* for the establishment of Government plantations; 25,000*l.* will be lent for this purpose, spread over 5 years, to be repaid from profits on the plantations. On June 30, 1914, the Government plantations covered 1,515 acres. Commonwealth grants are also made for various purposes. It is hoped that Papua will soon be self-supporting.

There are 8 proclaimed mineral fields in the Territory, seven of which are gold fields, and 1 copper. Gold mining is one of the most important industries, and claims the attention of about 108 adult Europeans. Gold is obtained in the Louisiade Islands, on the mainland, and on Woodlark Island. A large area near Port Moresby with promising copper deposits has been proclaimed a mineral field, but owing to the difficulty of raising capital little work is now being done. Copper ore exports in 1910-11, 1,439*l.*; 1911-12, 12,386*l.*; 1912-13, 18,997*l.*; 1913-14, 19,733*l.*; 1914-15, 5,606*l.*; in 1915-16, 864 tons, valued at 9,971*l.*, were exported. In 1910 the gold output was valued at 59,247*l.*; 1911, 62,112*l.*; 1912, 64,115*l.*; 1913-14, 41,422*l.*; 1914-15, 50,839*l.*; in 1915-16, 43,249. Indications of petroleum have been found over an area of 1,000 sq. miles. The trade is principally with Queensland and New South Wales. The chief imports are food stuffs, tobacco, drapery and hardware; exports, copra, sisal hemp, pearl shell, gold, pearls, sandal-wood, copper ore, timber, rubber. Number of horses (1916), 406; cattle, 1,162; mules, 128.

Large steamers trade monthly between Sydney and Port Moresby, and small coastal steamers run at frequent regular intervals between the various inter-territorial ports. Oil launches and numerous cutters are also employed on the local trade. Ocean-going shipping entered and cleared 1915-16, 247,887 tons, of which 96,753 tons were British and 151,134 foreign. There are wireless telegraph stations at Port Moresby and Woodlark Island.

There is a branch of the Bank of New South Wales. Commonwealth Government notes are legal tender. The currency and its legal tender are the same as in the United Kingdom and Australia.

NEW ZEALAND.

Government and Constitution.

By Order in Council of September 9, 1907, and by Proclamation, the designation of the Colony of New Zealand was changed to the Dominion of New Zealand (officially established as a Colony in 1840), on and from September 26, 1907. The present form of government was established by Statute 15 & 16 Vict., cap. 72, passed in 1852. The Colony was divided into six provinces, afterwards increased to ten, but later reduced to nine. By a subsequent Act of the Colonial Legislature, 39 Vict., No. xxi., passed in 1875, the provincial system of government was abolished, and the powers previously exercised by superintendents and provincial officers were ordered to be exercised by the Governor or by local boards. The legislative power is vested in the Governor and a 'General Assembly' consisting of two Chambers—a Legislative Council and a House of Representatives. The Governor has the power of assenting to or withholding consent from bills, or he may reserve them for His Majesty's pleasure. He summons, prorogues, and dissolves the Parliament. He can send drafts of bills to either House for consideration, but in case of appropriations of public money must first recommend the House of Representatives to make provision accordingly before any appropriations can become law. He can return bills for amendment to either House.

The Legislative Council consists (August, 1916) of thirty-four members, who are paid at the rate of 200*l.* per annum. Those appointed before September 17, 1891, are life members, but those appointed after that date hold their seats for seven years only. Provision has been made (1915) for an elective Legislative Council, the first election to be held three years after the next general election of members of the House of Representatives, which in the ordinary course of events should take place at the end of 1917. Twenty-four members are to be elected at the first election and 40 at subsequent elections. Three Maori members may be appointed by the Governor. Present sitting members hold office till the end of the term of their appointment.

The House of Representatives consists of eighty members, including four Maoris, elected by the people for three years. They are paid at the rate of 300*l.* per annum. Every man registered as an elector is eligible as a member of the House of Representatives. Women cannot be members of either branch of the Legislature. For European representation every adult person (of either sex), if resident one year in the Dominion and one month in an electoral district, can be registered an elector for such Electoral District. No person may be registered on more than one electoral roll. Every adult Maori resident in any of the four Maori electoral districts can vote, provided he (or she) be not registered on any European roll. Registration is not required in Native districts.

At the general election in 1914 there were 616,043 (335,697 men and 280,346 women) electors on the rolls, who returned 76 European members to the House of Representatives; for the four Maori members 18,621 votes of Natives were recorded. In 1914 there was one European member in the House of Representatives to every 14,421 persons, and one Maori member to about 12,461 Natives. The proportion of European electors to population in the year 1914 was one to every 1·8 persons.

Governor.—His Excellency Rt. Hon. the Earl of Liverpool, G.C.M.G., M.V.O. Salary of 5,000*l.*, and 2,000*l.* allowances additional. The Governor is Commander-in-Chief of the Forces.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local government New Zealand is divided into counties and boroughs. The counties are subdivided into ridings. County councils are empowered to constitute road districts on petition being made. Besides the road districts, which are very numerous, there are town, drainage, and water supply districts and river, tramway, and harbour boards.

The ratepayers in the road districts of a county are qualified as electors for the purposes of the county council, and the members of each road board are elected by the ratepayers of the district.

Area and Population.

There are two principal islands, the North and South Islands, besides Stewart Island, and small outlying islands, including (since 1901), the Cook and some other islands in the Pacific Ocean. The group is 1,000 miles long, and 180 miles across at the broadest part; coast line 3,000 miles. New Zealand is about 1,200 miles east of Australia. Area, excluding islands annexed in 1901, 103,581 square miles. North Island, 44,130 square miles, South Island 58,120, Stewart Island 662 square miles. Acreage 66,292,232 acres, exclusive of the Cook and other islands (179,200 acres), and up to March, 1916, 29,425,933 acres had been alienated, including lands reserved and set apart by the State for special purposes (12,040,311 acres). Population, census of October 15, 1916, 1,099,295, exclusive of Maoris, 49,844 in 1911, and Cook Islanders, 12,598 in 1911. Census population, exclusive of aborigines :—

Religion.

No State aid is given to any form of religion. For the Church of England the Dominion is divided into six dioceses. The Roman Catholic Church is under an Archbishop residing at Wellington, assisted by a coadjutor Archbishop and three bishops.

Denomination	Number of clergy June, 1916	Number of churches and chapels, &c. Census 1911	Denomination	Number of clergy June, 1916	Number of churches and chapels, &c. Census 1911

In 1911, 41·14 per cent. of the population (exclusive of Maoris) belonged to the Church of England, 23·32 were Presbyterians, 9·43 per cent. Methodists, other Protestant sects being Baptists, Independents, Lutherans, Friends, and Unitarians. The total Protestants numbered 808,801, and Roman Catholics and Catholics undefined, 140,523 or 13·97 per cent. of the population. There were 2,128 Jews, 1,501 Pagans, and 35,905 who objected to state their religion.

Instruction.

The University of New Zealand is solely an examining body, with an annual grant of 3,000*l*. The number of graduates admitted after examination was, in 1915, 2,002. There are four affiliated colleges—the Otago University at Dunedin, with 49 professors and lecturers; the Canterbury College at Christchurch, with 23 professors and lecturers; the Auckland University College, with 24 professors and lecturers, and the Victoria University College at Wellington, with 23 professors and lecturers. They are all endowed with lands. The Canterbury Agricultural College is a recognised school of agriculture.

At the end of 1915 there were 37 incorporated or endowed secondary schools, with 300 teachers and 6,488 pupils (excluding 417 in lower departments). Of the total income more than half is from endowments and Government payments. There are also 61 District High Schools with 94 teachers and 2,218 scholars. Children receiving secondary instruction at Technical High Schools numbered 1,955 at the end of 1915.

For primary schools there is an Education Department. There were (1915) 9 Education Local Boards, with about 1,300 School Committees. At the end of 1915 there were 2,338 public primary schools, 5,690 teachers (including 396 probationers), 183,214 scholars on the rolls; average attendance (1915), 163,092. Education is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14. The instruction given at the public schools is secular only, and for the ordinary standard course entirely free. Where there are no schools classes may be formed in the public school for extra subjects, for which secondary special subsidies are given.

There were also 310 private schools, with 1,092 teachers and 22,339 pupils; 7 schools of mines; 4 normal schools; 5 central schools of art; 12 industrial schools, with 3,166 children or young persons; a school for the deaf, with 99 pupils; an institute for the blind (at Auckland); and a special school for mentally backward boys in Otago.

There were 117 Native village schools, with 244 teachers and 5,191 scholars; and 10 boarding schools providing secondary education for native children, at which 92 Government scholars are under instruction, and 2 mission schools. The total scholars attending these 13 schools at the end of 1915 numbered 562. Total net expenditure by the State on Native schools in 1915-16 was 40,033*l*. Total expenditure in 1915-16 upon education of all kinds 1,631,172*l*.

Justice and Crime.

There are eight supreme court judges, and thirty-one stipendiary magistrates. There are numerous magistrates' courts and justices of the peace.

At the end of 1915 the gaols contained 998 prisoners.

Pauperism.

The Dominion is divided into districts, with elective boards for the administration of the public hospitals and charitable relief. The Government subsidises bequests at the rate of 10s. in the pound; voluntary contributions, 24s. in the pound; and contributions by local authorities, according to a sliding scale, ranging from 12s. 3d. in the pound to 24s. 3d. in the pound, according to the value of rateable property within the district. The total expenditure on Charitable Aid during the year ended March 31, 1916, was 124,618*l*. During 1915 the benevolent and orphan asylums accommodated 4,224 inmates, of whom 2,561 were remaining on December 31. 3,166 children (1,885 boys and 1,281 girls) were wholly or partly maintained by the State in industrial schools and other institutions.

Old Age and Widows' Pensions.

In 1898 an Act, amended in 1905 and consolidated and amended in 1913, provided for old-age pensions. Every person, not an alien or an Asiatic, who fulfils certain conditions is entitled to a pension of 26*l*. a year. The joint annual income of a married couple in receipt of pensions must not exceed 100*l*. (including pensions). Total pensions on March 31, 1916, 19,804, representing a yearly payment of 486,000*l*., the average pension being 24*l*. 10s. 10*d*.

A system of widows' pensions is also in force. At March 31, 1916, the number of widows' pensions was 1,890, representing an annual liability of 37,300*l*.

Defence.

New Zealand passed a Defence Act in 1909, amended 1910, which provides for the gradual military training of every male New-Zealander from the age of 12 to the age of 25, after which he will serve in the Reserve up to the age of 30. There are no distinctions and no exceptions except for the physically unfit. From 12 to 14 the boy is a junior cadet, from 14 to 18 a senior cadet; from 18 to 25 he becomes a soldier in the Territorial Force; from 25 to 30 he belongs to the Reserve. Senior cadets do 50 drills and a musketry course each year. The soldier in the Territorial Force does 7 clear days' annual training and a musketry course, besides 30 drills and 6 whole-day parades, but there are modifications to meet the requirements of local conditions in certain directions.

The Territorial Force is about 30,000 strong, and is organised in field and coast-defence units with practically the same establishment for peace as for war. In each of the four military districts into which the Dominion is divided there is a brigade of infantry, a brigade of mounted rifles and a brigade of field artillery; there are also 9 companies of garrison artillery for coast defence and a field company of engineers, besides medical units and other departmental troops. An infantry brigade will include four battalions and a signal company; a mounted brigade, three regiments of mounted rifles and a signal company; and a brigade of artillery, two four-gun batteries. The force is being fully armed and equipped according to the most modern standard. It is estimated that the annual cost of the scheme when carried out completely will be 400,000*l*. It will take several years before the scheme is in complete working order.

The Naval Defence Act, 1913, provides for the establishment of a New Zealand Naval Force, to be raised and maintained by voluntary enlistment only, enlistment being for a prescribed period not less than two years. In time of war the Naval Force (including vessels acquired for defence purposes) is at the disposal of the British Government. The establishment of a New Zealand Royal Naval Reserve is also provided for under the Act. The third-class cruiser Philomel has been lent by the British Admiralty to the New Zealand Government to serve as a training-ship for the forming of a nucleus of the Naval Force.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Two-thirds of the surface of New Zealand are suitable for agriculture and grazing. About 17,000,000 acres are still under forest. The total area under crop (including 14,734,989 acres in sown grasses and 84,649 in fallow) in 1916 was 16,841,575 acres. The area of Crown lands surveyed and open for selection on March 31, 1916, was 824,907 acres.

The largest freehold estates are held in the South Island. The extent of occupied holdings of or over one acre in 1916 (exclusive of holdings within borough boundaries) was as follows:—

Sizes of Holdings	Number of Holdings	Acres	Sizes of Holdings	Number of Holdings	Acres
1 to 10 acres	15,454	69,390	5,001 to 10,000 acres	517	3,593,266

1,001 „ 5,000 „	5,284	10,366,504	Total . . .	77,229	41,262,193

Deducting Crown lands under pastoral leases, the area of occupied land in 1916 was 29,404,291 acres; in 1911, 29,236,793 acres; in 1901, 26,982,486 acres; in 1891, 19,951,925 acres.

In 1916 there were 127,137 persons (98,070 males and 29,067 females) engaged in agricultural, pastoral, and dairying pursuits.

The acreage and produce for each of the principal crops are given as follows:

<sup>1</sup> Except in the case of coal, figures refer to exports. The export of gold and silver was prohibited during the latter part of 1914, and production for that year would be considerably in excess of the totals shown.

Commerce.

In 1915 the imports duty-free (including 1,070,114*l.* specie) amounted to 12,889,683*l.*; subject to duty, 8,839,151*l.*; total 21,728,834*l.*

1915	21,728,834	31,042,862	706,050	31,748,912

The quantities and values of imports are obtained from Customs entries verified by invoices and, where necessary, as with goods subject to an ad valorem duty, by examination. For exports the 'free-on-board in New Zealand' value is given; but, as regards the main items, the Collector of Customs examines carefully the amounts stated, and compares them with current price lists, to prevent any over-estimate. Beginning with 1914 the country of origin of imports is obtained, as well as country of shipment. The country of shipment is obtained in cases of exports, but this may or may not be the country of ultimate destination. Very little cargo in transitu passes through New Zealand.

The principal imports and exports in 1915 are given as follows:—

Shipping and Communications.

In 1915 the registered vessels were 196 sailing vessels of 21,762 tons (net), and 335 steamers of 71,695 tons; total 531 vessels of 93,457 tons (net).

Many of the principal vessels on the New Zealand Register were transferred to the London Register after the outbreak of war, to take advantage of the Imperial War Insurance rates. Shipping inwards and outwards for five years:—

Attached to New Zealand are the following islands :

Auckland Islands, 50° 31' S., 166° 19' E., 200 miles S. of Stewart Island. Area of largest about 330 square miles. Uninhabited. The New Zealand Government maintains a depôt of provisions and clothing for the use of shipwrecked mariners on the largest island of the group.

Chatham Islands, 43° 50' S., 177° W., 536 miles E. of New Zealand. Area 375 square miles; population (April, 1911) 453 (234 Europeans and 219 Maoris and Morioris).

The Cook and other South Pacific Islands were annexed to New Zealand in June, 1901. They lie between 8° and 23° S. lat., 157° and 170° W. long. The Cook Islands and the other islands with their population (1911) are as follows:—

Cook Islands -	Population	Other Islands—	Population
Rarotonga . . . .	2,759	Niue (Savage Is.) . .	3,943

Hervey Islands . .	29
Total . . . . .	6,964	Total . . . . .	5,634

Total area of the Cook and other islands about 280 square miles.

Rarotonga is 20 miles in circumference; Vatiu, or Atiu, 20 miles; Aitutaki, 21 miles; Niue (or Savage Island), 40 miles. Laws for the Cook Islands have been made since 1890 by a general Legislature, and are administered by an Executive Council of which the Arikis, or native Kings and Queens, are members. At Rarotonga there is a British Resident, whose approval is required for all enactments. The customs tariff of New Zealand is enforced. In 1915 the numbers of births, marriages, and deaths (excluding Niue) were respectively 300, 94, and 225. Chief products—copra (output 1915, 773 tons), coffee, pearl-shell (this trade has been dead since the outbreak of war), fruit (exports 1915: 61,870 cases of bananas; 98,447 cases of oranges; 13,119 boxes of tomatoes), hats and caps, and lime-juice. The trade for 1915 was:—Imports 75,268£., including 60,554£. from New Zealand; exports 71,187£., including 61,981£. to New Zealand. It is intended to secure communication with New Zealand by means of a wireless station at Rarotonga.

Kermadec Islands, 36° S., 178° 30' W., 600 miles N.N.E. of New Zealand. Area 15 square miles. Now uninhabited. The largest of the group is Raoul or Sunday Island, 20 miles in circuit; Macaulay Island is 3 miles in circuit.

Small uninhabited islands are: The Campbell Islands, the three King's Islands, the Antipodes Islands, and the Bounty Islands.

FIJI.

Constitution and Government.

FIJI was ceded by the chiefs and people of Fiji on October 10, 1874. The government is administered by a Governor appointed by the Crown, assisted by an Executive Council consisting of the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, other official members appointed by the Governor, and two nominated members selected by the Governor from the elected members of the Legislative Council. Laws are passed by the Legislative Council, of which the Governor is president. It comprises eleven official members, seven elected members, and two native members.

Governor of Fiji and High Commissioner for the Western Pacific.—Sir Ernest Bickham Sweet-Escott, K.C.M.G. Salary 3,000*l.* as Governor of Fiji, and 1,000*l.* as High Commissioner for the Western Pacific,

Colonial Secretary.—Hon. Eyre Hutson, C.M.G.

The Governor is High Commissioner and Consul-General for the Western Pacific.

There is a constabulary consisting of Fijians and Indians, and a Defence Force (Europeans and Fijians).

For the purposes of native government the colony is divided into 17 provinces, in 7 of which a superior native chief exercises, under the title of Roko Tui, a form of rule which recognises to a large degree the principles of native administration by which the people formerly governed themselves. In seven of the provinces there are European commissioners. About 180 native chiefs of inferior degree are employed in subordinate administrative capacities. There are also 32 native stipendiary magistrates associated with 19 District Commissioners in the administration of justice. A European commissioner, who is also Government medical officer, resides in Rotumah.

Area and Population.

Fiji comprises a group of over 200 islands (about 80 inhabited) lying between 15° and 20° south latitudes and 177° east and 178° west longitude. The largest is Viti Levu, area 4,250 square miles; next is Vanua Levu, area 2,600 square miles. The island of Rotumah, between 12° and 15° of south latitude, and 175° and 177° east longitude, was added to the colony in 1880. Total area, including Rotumah, 7,435 square miles.

At the census of April 2, 1911, the population was 139,541; the Europeans, 3,707 (2,403 males, 1,304 females); Fijians, 87,096 (46,110 males, 40,986 females); Rotumans, 2,176 (1,043 males, 1,133 females); Indians, 40,286 (26,073 males, 14,213 females); Polynesians, 2,758 (2,429 males, 329 females); Chinese, 305 (276 males, 29 females); others, 3,213 (1,674 males, 1,539 females). On December 31, 1915, the estimated population was 159,321, including 89,574 natives. In 1915 there were 2,508 Indian immigrants. The total number of East Indians serving under indenture, including 2,440 children, at the end of 1915 was 14,362.

Among Europeans in 1915 the births were 99 and deaths 37; among Fijians, births 3,325, deaths 2,538; among Indians, births 2,032, deaths 604.

Suva, the capital, is on the south coast of Viti Levu; European population (census of April 2, 1911), 1,376.

Religion and Instruction.

Attending at Wesleyan native churches in 1915, 84,880; Roman Catholic Mission, 10,256. The Wesleyan Mission comprises 18 European missionaries, 15 European mission sisters, 62 native ministers, 165 catechists, 773 teachers, and 3,849 local preachers, 4,891 class leaders, with 707 churches, and 461 other preaching places. The Roman Catholic Mission has 33 European ministers and 238 native teachers, 53 European sisters, 70 churches and chapels, 3 native training institutions.

Two public schools, in Suva and Levuka, receive 1,086*l.* a year State aid; 302 scholars in 1915. Another State-supported school is solely for natives; 68 scholars in 1915. During 1915 the Wesleyan Mission had 1,027 schools with 16,606 scholars; the Roman Catholic had 130 schools with 2,256 scholars. The Roman Catholic Mission maintain 3 schools for Europeans, with 136 children in 1915. Expenditure on education, 1915, 3,335*l.*

Shipping and Communications.

Fiji is in regular steam communication with New Zealand, Australia, Tonga and Samoa, Honolulu and Canada. During 1915 the number of merchant vessels entered at the ports of entry was 144 steamers of 403,098 tons, and 4 sailing vessels of 2,344 tons. Total tonnage entered and cleared in 1915, 821,566 tons (British, 803,371). Registered shipping, 1915, 12 vessels of 1,321 tons; registered vessels holding coasting licences (1915), 243 of 2,653 tons. There is also a subsidised inter-island steamer. Extensive harbour works involving the reclamation of 17 acres, to cost 200,000*l.*, are in progress at Suva.

A scheme for the construction of 50 miles of railway from Suva up the Rewa Valley, at an estimated cost of 353,000*l.*, is under consideration.

Local correspondence, 1915, 799,908 letters and postcards, 70,081 book-packets, 330,522 newspapers, 13,657 parcels; foreign correspondence, 1,358,062 letters and postcards, 608,392 newspapers, 134,574 book-packets, and 28,649 parcels. There is a Money Order system with the United Kingdom, Canada, the Australian States, New Zealand, Tonga, and India. There is telegraphic communication between Suva and Levuka, 54 miles, of which 11½ miles is by submarine cable. An overland telephone from Suva to Lautoka, 125 miles. Wireless telegraph stations have been erected at Suva, Labasa, Taveuni and Savusavu.

Government Savings Bank, end of 1915: 1,371 depositors and 16,657*l.* deposits. The Bank of New Zealand and the Bank of New South Wales are established in the Colony.

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

TONGA.

(FRIENDLY ISLANDS.)

The Tonga or Friendly Islands continued up to 1899 to be a neutral region in accordance with the Declaration of Berlin, April 6, 1886. By the Anglo-German Agreement of November 14, 1899, subsequently accepted by the United States, the Tonga Islands were left practically under the Protectorate of Great Britain. A Protectorate was proclaimed over Tonga on May 19, 1900. In December, 1900, the British High Commissioner, with the assent of the King and native chiefs, assumed the exercise of civil and criminal jurisdiction over all subjects of Foreign Powers in Tonga, and the supervision of the financial administration.

King.—George II., born June 18, 1874; succeeded his great-grandfather, George Tubou, in 1893; married June 1st, 1899, to Lavinia, who died in April, 1902. He married again in 1909.

There is a Legislative Assembly which meets annually, composed of seven nobles elected by their peers, seven elected representatives of the people, and the Ministers of the Crown, numbering seven, or twenty-one members in all. The elections are held triennially.

The kingdom consists of 3 groups of islands, called respectively Tonga-tabu, Haabai, and Vavau, together with the outlying islands of Niuatobu-tabu, Tafahi, and Niuafoou, and lies between 15° and 23° 30' south, and 173° and 177° west, its western boundary being the eastern boundary of Fiji. The main group was discovered by Tasman in 1643. Area, 390 square miles; population, census, April, 1911, 23,011 Tongans; 346 Pacific islanders, and 380 Europeans. Capital, Nukualofa. Estimated population 1914, 23,121 Tongans, and 335 other persons. In 1914, the police courts dealt with 14,200 criminal cases (including petty offences, and breaches of the sanitary and taxation laws) and the Supreme Court with 14. The natives are Christian, mostly Wesleyan Methodists. At the end of 1914, there were 57 public primary schools (against 55 in 1913), with 2,780 pupils on the roll. At Tonga College there were 8 teachers and 128 students on December 31, 1914. There are now no State-aided schools in the kingdom. The revenue, chiefly from customs (11,989% in 1914-15), a poll tax, licences, and leases (no land being sold), amounted in 1914-15 to 36,114%., and the expenditure to 36,414%. Native produce consists mostly of copra, green fruit, mats, tapa (a textile from bark), and fungus. Imports, 1914, 87,702%.; exports, 73,036%. The imports exclude specie (nil in 1914), but include drapery (23,401%.), flour (3,222%.), biscuits (2,918%.), fish (1,962%.), hardware (3,386%.), timber (4,113%.), sugar (2,392%.), meats (11,522%.); and the exports, copra, 67,304%.; fungus, 956%.; live stock, 700%. The imports are chiefly from New Zealand (38,329% in 1914) and Australia (29,906%.); the exports chiefly to Australia, and New Zealand. In 1914, 33 vessels of 57,474 aggregate tonnage entered (32 British, 56,779 tons), and 30 of 54,099 tons cleared (29 British, 53,404 tons). Two boats of the New Zealand Union Steamship Company visit, when engaged in the regular service, each of the 3 Tongan groups every two weeks, one running from Auckland to Tonga, via Fiji, and the other from Sydney via Fiji and Samoa.

Since May 1, 1905, British coin is the only legal tender. The weights and measures are the same as in Great Britain. Accounts are kept in pounds, shillings, and pence.

High Commissioner and Consul-General for the Western Pacific.—Sir E. Bickham Escott, K.C.M.G.

Agent and Consul.—H. E. W. Grant, C.M.G.

In the sections devoted to New South Wales and New Zealand mention is made of various annexed Pacific Islands. The following summary (omitting islands described elsewhere) gives the names and positions of islands which are unattached:—

Ducie Island, 24° 40' S. lat., 124° 48' W. long. Pitcairn Island, 25° 5' S., 130° 5' W.; area 2 sq. m.; pop. in 1914, 140 (35 adult males, 39 adult females, 66 children). The affairs of the island are conducted by a Council of 7 members, with a President, who acts also as Chief Magistrate, and a Vice-President, who is also Government Secretary, subject to the control of the High Commissioner for the Western Pacific. In religion the islanders (descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty) are 'Seventh Day Adventists.' The products of the island are sweet potatoes, beans, sugar cane, yams, taro, melons, pumpkins, oranges, bananas, pineapples, and arrowroot, which is prepared in limited quantities with antiquated appliances. Excellent coffee also grows, and its cultivation will probably extend. On the Island there are about 200 wild goats and a small stock of chickens. Dudoza Island, 7° 40' S. lat., 161° W. long.; area 2 sq. m. Victoria Island, area 2 sq. m., uninhabited. Phoenix Group between 2° 30' and 4° 30' S. lat., and 171° and 174° 30' W. long. Eight islands: Mary, Enderbury, Phoenix, Birney, Gardner, McKean, Hull, Sydney; area of group, 16 sq. m., pop. 59.

Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony. The islands in this group were proclaimed as Protectorates in 1892 and annexed (at the request of the native governments), as Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony, on November 10, 1915. The Colony includes several groups of islands. (1) The Union, or Tokelau Group, between 8° 30' and 11° S. lat., and 171° and 172° W. long. Five clusters of islets, the principal of which are Fakaofu or Bowditch, Nukunono or Duke of Clarence, Atafu or Duke of York, Nassau, Danger; area of group, 7 sq. m.; pop. 912 natives and 2 Europeans (1911). (2) The Ellice Islands, between 5° 30' and 11° 20' S. lat., and 176° and 180° E. long. The principal islands are Funafuti, Nukufetau, Vaitupu, Nui (or Netherland), Niutao (or Lynx or Speiden), Nanumaga (or Hudson), Nanomea (or St. Augustine), Nukulaelae (or Mitchell), Nurukita (or Sophia); area of group, 14 sq. m.; pop. (1911), 3,084 natives, 6 Europeans, and 1 Asiatic. (3) Two Orders in Council dated respectively January 27, 1916, and February 29, 1916, extended the boundaries of the Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony so as to include Fanning Island, 3° 50' N., 159° W.; area 15 sq. m., pop. 150, and Washington Island, 4° 40' N., 160° 20' W., area 6 sq. m. (4) The Gilbert Islands on the equator. The principal islands are Butaritari, Makin, Tarawa, Abaian, Marakci, Maiana, Abemama, Kuria, Ananuka, Nonouti, Tapiteuea, Beru, Nikunau, Onotoa, Tamana, Arorae, and Ocean Islands. Area 166 sq. m.; estimated pop. (1911), 26,417 natives and 446 foreigners. Education is in the hands of various missions. Revenue of the Colony was for the year ended June 30, 1915, 16,120*l.* (chief items: Customs, 2,845*l.*; native taxes, 3,731*l.*; licences, &c., 3,797*l.*; royalty on phosphate, 3,282*l.*) and expenditure, 23,522*l.* Principal crops: pandanus fruit and coconuts. The trade in 1914 amounted to 144,479*l.* for imports, and 350,000*l.* for exports (phosphates, 305,000*l.*, and copra, 45,000*l.*).

British Solomon Islands, about 8° S. and 160° W., are Guadalcanar, Malaita, Isabel, San Cristoval, New Georgia, Choiseul, Shortland, Mono (or Treasury), Vella Lavella, Ronongo, Gizo, Rendova, Russell, Florida, Rennell, and numerous small islands (the Lord Howe Group or Ontong Java, the Santa Cruz Islands, Tucopia and Mitre Islands are also included in the Solomon Islands Protectorate). Area 11,000 sq. nautical miles; European population (1915), 660; native population, about 150,000. They are under British Protection. Revenue (1915-16), 22,006*l.* (Customs, 16,736*l.*); expenditure, 26,425*l.* About 30,000 acres planted by white planters were under coco-nuts in March, 1914, and about 300 acres under rubber; sweet potatoes, pineapples, bananas are grown. The value of imports in 1914-15 was 133,062*l.* (chief items: biscuits, 5,084*l.*; boats and small vessels, 3,514*l.*; drapery, 13,381*l.*; hardware, 10,680*l.*; meats (tinned), 10,219*l.*; rice, 11,025*l.*; timber, 4,386*l.*; tobacco, 8,713*l.*); and of exports, 87,539*l.* (chief items: copra, 75,398*l.*; green snail and trochus shells, 3,662*l.*; mother of pearl shell and pearl shell black, 3,983*l.*). Foreign-going vessels entered, 1914-15, 39 of 30,494 net tons (30,407 tons British); cleared, 37 of 27,342 net tons (27,232 British). There is a Resident Commissioner.

Santa Cruz Islands, seven large islands, the largest about 15 miles long. Duff or Wilson Islands, eleven islands, the largest about 6 miles in circumference (included in the British Solomon Islands Protectorate). Starbuck Island, 5° 30' S. lat., 155° W. long.; area 1 sq. m., uninhabited. Malden Island, 4° S. lat., 155° W. long.; area 35 sq. m., pop. 168. Jarvis Island, on the equator, 159° W., area 1½ sq. m., pop. 30. Palmyra, 6° N., 162° 30' W., area 1½ sq. m. Baker Islands, on the equator.

These islands are mostly of coral formation; most of them grow coconut trees, and some of them are valuable for their guano.

The High Commissioner of the Western Pacific, assisted by deputies, has jurisdiction, in accordance with an Order in Council of 1893, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Pacific Islanders' Protection Acts of 1872 and 1875, and to settle disputes between British subjects living in these islands. The jurisdiction of the High Commissioner extends over all the Western Pacific not within the limits of Fiji, Queensland, or New South Wales, or the jurisdiction of any civilised Power, and includes the Southern Solomon Islands, and the various small groups in Melanesia.

The New Hebrides, however, are under the joint administration of English and French officials, as arranged by the Anglo-French Convention of February, 1906, ratified October, 1906. This convention guarantees the interests of French, British, and natives, respectively; fixes the conditions of land-holding in the Islands; and provides for the regulation of the recruitment of native labourers. Within the Islands Great Britain is represented by a Resident Commissioner, who reports to the High Commissioner for the Western Pacific. The larger islands of the group are Espiritu Santo, Mallicolo, Epi, Efate or Sandwich, Erromanga, Tanna, Futuna or Errovan, and Aneityúm. Area, 5,100 square miles; population about 70,000. At the end of 1905 there were within the group 225 British and 417 French subjects. There are 3 French Catholic mission schools, and many Presbyterian. Settlers have acquired large areas within the islands; and though there are many disputes as to rightful possession, and much of the land is still uncleared, cocoanuts (for copra), maize, millet, coffee, and bananas are grown, and a timber factory on Aneityúm prepares Kauri wood for export. The distillation and importation of spirits are prohibited. The expenditure for 1915 was estimated at 22,623*l.*, and the revenue at 11,000*l.*, the deficit being met by the British and French jointly. An expenditure of 8,302*l.* on purely British purposes was also estimated for the same year. There are several French and British trading companies, and the commerce of the Islands, in the absence of statistics, may be estimated at about 53,000*l.* for imports, and 43,000*l.* for exports. The trade is mostly with Sydney and Nouméa (New Caledonia). The imports are provisions and foodstuffs, clothing, metal-work, and furniture; the exports are maize, copra, coffee, and other island products. Vessels visit the islands frequently, including the repeated voyages of one British and two French companies, whose steamers provide for communication with Sydney, Nouméa, the Solomon Islands, and sometimes the Gilbert Islands.

British Resident.—M. King.

French Resident.—L. Miramende.

PART THE SECOND

THE UNITED STATES

UNITED STATES.

(UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Declaration of Independence of the thirteen States of which the American Union then consisted was adopted by Congress July 4, 1776. On November 30, 1782, Great Britain acknowledged independence of the United States, and on September 3, 1783, the treaty of peace was concluded.

The form of government of the United States is based on the Constitution of Sept. 17, 1787, to which ten amendments were added Dec. 15, 1791; an eleventh amendment, Jan. 8, 1798; a twelfth amendment, Sept. 25, 1804; a thirteenth amendment, Dec. 18, 1865; a fourteenth amendment, July 28, 1868; a fifteenth amendment, March 30, 1870; a sixteenth amendment, February 25, 1913; and a seventeenth amendment, May 31, 1913.

By the Constitution, the government of the nation is entrusted to three separate authorities, the Executive, the Legislative, and the Judicial. The executive power is vested in a President, who holds his office during the term of four years, and is elected, together with a Vice-President chosen for the same term, in the mode prescribed as follows:—‘Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress: but no senator or representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an elector.’ The practice is that in every State the electors allotted to the State are chosen by direct vote of the citizens on a general ticket, on the system known in France as scrutin de liste. The Constitution enacts that ‘the Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States’; and further, that ‘no person except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States’.

The quadrennial election is held every fourth (leap) year. Electors are chosen in the several States on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November; the electors meet and give their votes at their respective State capitals on the second Monday in January next following their appointment; and the votes of the electors of all the States are opened and counted in the presence of both Houses of Congress on the second Wednesday in February. The presidential term begins on March 4, in the year following leap years.

The President is commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and of the militia in the service of the Union. The Vice-President is ex-officio President of the Senate; and in the case of the death or resignation of the President, he becomes the President for the remainder of the term.

President of the United States.—Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey, born at Staunton, Virginia, December 28, 1856; educated at Princeton University (1875-1879), Associate Professor at Bryn Mawr College (1885-1888); Professor of Political Economy at Wesleyan University (1888-1890); Professor of Jurisprudence and Politics at Princeton University (1890-1902); President of Princeton University (1902-1910); Governor of New Jersey (1911-1913).

Vice-President of the United States.—Thomas Riley Marshall, of Indiana, born 1854; admitted to the bar, 1875; Governor of Indiana, 1909-1912.

The President of the United States has an annual salary of 75,000 dollars, with an additional allowance of 25,000 dollars for travelling expenses; and the Vice-President 12,000 dollars.

Since the adoption of the Constitution the offices of President and Vice-President have been occupied as follows :—

By a law which came into force Jan. 19, 1886, in case of removal, death, resignation, or inability of both the President and Vice-President, the Secretary of State, and after him, in the order of the establishment of their departments, other members of the Cabinet, shall act as President until the disability of the President is removed or a President shall be elected. On the death of a Vice-President the duties of the office shall fall to the President pro tempore of the Senate, who receives the salary of the Vice-President.

The administrative business of the nation is conducted by nine chief officers, or heads of departments, who form what is called the 'Cabinet.' They are chosen by the President, but must be confirmed by the Senate. Each of them presides over a separate department, and acts under the immediate authority of the President. They are, in the order prescribed by law for their succession to the presidency, in case both the President and the Vice-President die or become unable to take office:—

1. Secretary of State.—Robert Lansing, of New York, born in New York 1864; counsel under the Department of State in the Bering Sea controversy, 1892-93; Alaska Boundary dispute, 1903; North Atlantic Coast Fisheries 1908; at the Hague Arbitration, 1909-10; and in the Fur Seal Conference, 1911; Counsel at various times for the Chinese and Mexican embassies; Counsellor of the Department of State, 1913. Present appointment, June 24, 1915.

2. Secretary of the Treasury.—William Gibbs McAdoo, of New York, born in Georgia, 1863 ; admitted to the bar, 1884 ; Organizer and builder of railway tunnels under the Hudson river. Present appointment, March 5, 1913.

3. Secretary of War.—Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, born in West Virginia, 1871 ; City Solicitor of Cleveland, Ohio, 1902–12 ; Mayor of Cleveland, 1914–16. Present appointment, March 7, 1916.

4. Attorney-General.—Thomas Watt Gregory, of Texas, born in Mississippi, 1861 ; admitted to the bar in Texas, 1885 ; Assistant Attorney General of the United States, 1913–14. Present appointment, September 4, 1914.

5. Postmaster-General.—Albert Sidney Burleson, of Texas, born in Texas, 1863 ; admitted to the bar, 1884 ; Member of Congress, 1899–1913. Present appointment, March 5, 1913.

6. Secretary of the Navy.—Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina, born in North Carolina, 1862 ; State Treasurer of North Carolina, 1887–93 ; Chief Clerk Department of the Interior of the United States, 1893–95. Present appointment, March 5, 1913.

7. Secretary of the Interior.—Franklin Knight Lane, of California, born in Prince Edward Island, 1864 ; Corporation Counsel of San Francisco, 1897–1902 ; Democratic candidate for Governor of California, 1902 ; Member (and since 1912 Chairman) of the Interstate Commerce Commission, 1905–13. Present appointment, March 5, 1913.

8. Secretary of Agriculture.—David Franklin Houston, of Missouri, born in South Carolina, 1866 ; has held professorships in several southern colleges and been President of the University of Texas ; recently, Chancellor of the Washington University of St. Louis, Missouri. Present appointment, March 5, 1913.

9. Secretary of Commerce.—William C. Redfield, of New York, born in New York, 1858 ; Member of Congress, 1911–13. Present appointment, March 5, 1913.

10. Secretary of Labour.—William Baucko Wilson, of Pennsylvania, born in Scotland, 1862 ; Secretary of the United Mine Workers of America, 1900–1909 ; Member of Congress, 1907–1913. Present appointment, March 5, 1913.

The Ministry for Labour was created in 1913.

Each of the above ministers has an annual salary of 12,000 dollars, and holds office during the pleasure of the President.

The whole legislative power is vested by the Constitution in a Congress, consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives. The Senate consists of two members from each State, chosen by popular vote for six years. Senators must be not less than thirty years of age ; must have been citizens of the United States for nine years ; and be residents in the States for which they are chosen. Besides its legislative functions, the Senate is entrusted with the power of ratifying or rejecting all treaties made by the President with foreign Powers, a two-thirds majority of senators present being required for ratification. The Senate is also invested with the power of confirming or rejecting all appointments to office made by the President ; and its members constitute a High Court of Impeachment. The judgment in the latter case extends only to removal from office and disqualification. The House of Representatives has the sole power of impeachment.

The House of Representatives is composed of members elected every second year by the vote of citizens who, according to the laws of their respective States, are qualified to vote. In general such voters are all male citizens over 21 years of age. Neither race nor colour affects the right of citizens. The franchise is not absolutely universal; residence for at least one year in most States (in Rhode Island and Kentucky two years, in Michigan and Maine three months) is necessary, in some States the payment of taxes, in others registration. On the other hand many of the Western States admit to the franchise unnaturalised persons who have formally declared their intention to become citizens. Several of the Southern States have adopted methods—which differ from one another—too complicated for explanation here, with the express and avowed purpose of excluding the negroes from the franchise, and yet avoiding the constitutional consequences of discriminating 'on account of race, colour, or previous condition of servitude.' Untaxed Indians are excluded from the franchise, in most States convicts, in some States duellists and fraudulent voters; in Massachusetts voters are required to be able to read English. In some Southern States they are required to give a reasonable explanation of what they read. Wyoming (1869), Colorado (1893), Utah and Idaho (1896), Washington (1910), California (1911), Arizona, Kansas and Oregon (1912), Nevada and Montana (1914), admit women to the franchise on equal terms with men. The number of members of the House of Representatives to which each State is entitled is determined by the census taken every ten years. By the Apportionment Act consequent on the census of 1910, the number of representatives is 433.

In 1912 with the admission of Arizona and New Mexico it became 435, distributed as follows:—

Alabama . . .	10	Maryland . . .	6	Oregon . . .	3
Arizona . . .	1	Massachusetts . . .	16	Pennsylvania . . .	36

On the basis of the census of 1910 there is one representative to every 210,415 inhabitants. The popular vote for President in 1916 was 18,521,625, or about one in six of the entire population. In 1910 there were in the States, which alone participate in elections of President and representatives, 26,999,151 males of voting age, 21 years and over, including 6,829,581 of foreign birth, naturalised and unnaturalised.

According to the terms of the Constitution, representatives must not be less than twenty-five years of age, must have been citizens of the United States for seven years, and be residents in the States from which they are chosen. In addition to the representatives from the States, the House admits a 'delegate' from each organised Territory, who has the right to speak on any subject and to make motions, but not to vote. The delegates are elected in the same manner as the representatives.

Each of the two Houses of Congress is made by the Constitution the 'judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members'; and each of the Houses may, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

The Congress of the United States has the power to propose alterations in the Constitution, by the 5th article of the same. The article orders that the Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to the Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of all the States, shall call a convention for proposing the amendments, which in either case shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or other mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress.

The salary of a senator, representative, or delegate in Congress is 7,500 dollars per annum, with an allowance, based on distance, for travelling expenses. The salary of the Speaker of the House of Representatives is 12,000 dollars per annum.

No senator or representative can, during the time for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under authority of the United States which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States can be a member of either House during his continuance in office. No religious test is required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States, or in any State.

The period usually termed 'a Congress' in legislative language continues for two years; as, for example, from noon, March 4, 1917, until noon, March 4, 1919, at which latter time the term of the representatives to the 65th Congress will expire, and the term of the new House of Representatives will begin.

The 65th Congress is constituted as follows: Senate, 54 Democrats, 42 Republicans. House of Representatives, 213 Democrats, 217 Republicans, 2 Progressives, 1 Socialist, 1 Independent, 1 Prohibitionist.

The National Government has authority in matters of general taxation, treaties and other dealings with foreign powers, army, navy, and (to a certain extent) militia, commerce, foreign and inter-State, postal service, coinage, weights and measures, and the trial and punishment of crime against the United States.

Slavery was abolished throughout the whole of the United States by the thirteenth Amendment of the Constitution, passed December 13, 1865. The vast change in the political and social organisation of the Republic made by this new fundamental law was completed by the fourteenth and fifteenth Amendments of the Constitution, passed in 1868 and 1870, which gave to the former slaves all the rights and privileges of citizenship.

STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Union comprises 13 original States, 7 States which were admitted without having been previously organised as Territories, and 28 States which had been Territories—48 States in all. Each State has its own constitution, which must be republican in form, and each constitution derives its authority, not from Congress, but from the people of the State. Admission of States into the Union is granted by special Acts of Congress, either (1) in the form of 'enabling Acts,' providing for the drafting and ratification of a State constitution by the people, in which case the Territory becomes a State as soon as the conditions are fulfilled, or (2) accepting a constitution already framed, and at once granting admission.

Each State is provided with a Legislature of two Houses, a Governor, and other executive officials, and a judicial system. Both Houses of the Legislature are elective, but the Senators (having larger electoral districts) are less numerous than the members of the House of Representatives, while in some States their terms are longer and, in a few, the Senate is only partially renewed at each election. Members of both Houses are paid at the same rate, which varies from 150 to 1,500 dollars per session, or from 1 to 8 dollars per day during session. The duties of the two Houses are similar, but in many States money bills must be introduced first in the House of Representatives. The Senate has to sit as a court for the trial of officials impeached by the other House, and besides, has often the power to confirm or reject appointments made by the Governor. In most of the States the sessions are biennial, the Governor having power to summon an extraordinary session, but not to dissolve or adjourn. State Legislatures are competent to deal with all matters not reserved for the Federal Government by the Federal constitution, or falling within restrictions imposed by the State constitutions. Among their powers are the determination of the qualifications for the right of suffrage, and the control of all elections to public office, including elections of members of Congress and electors of President and Vice-President; the criminal law, both in its enactment and in its execution, with unimportant exceptions, and the administration of prisons; the civil law, including all matters pertaining to the possession and transfer of, and succession to, property; marriage and divorce, and all other civil relations; the chartering and control of all manufacturing, trading, transportation, and other corporations, subject only to the right of Congress to regulate commerce passing from one State to another; the regulation of labour; education; charities; licensing, including regulation of the liquor traffic; fisheries, and game laws. The revenues of the States are derived chiefly from a direct tax upon property, in some cases both real and personal, in others on land and buildings only. The prohibition upon Congress to levy direct taxes save in proportion to population, contained originally in the national constitution, left this source of revenue to the States exclusively until 1913, when an amendment was adopted authorizing the imposition of an income tax by Congress.

The Governor is chosen by direct vote of the people over the whole State. His term of office varies from 1 year to 4 years and his salary from 1,000 to 10,000 dollars. His duty is to see to the faithful administration of the law, and he has command of the military forces of the State. His power of appointment to State offices is usually unimportant. He may recommend measures, but does not present bills to the legislature. In some States he presents estimates. In all but two of the States the Governor has a veto upon legislation, which may, however, be overridden by the two houses, in some States by a simple majority, in others by a three-fifths or two-thirds majority.

The officials by whom the administration of State affairs is carried on (secretaries, treasurers, members of boards of commissioners, &c.) are usually chosen by the people at the General State elections for terms similar to those for which governors hold office, the party in power appointing its own adherents.

In the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska there is a local legislature, the form of which has been prescribed by the National Government. These bodies have powers similar to those of the States, but any of their acts may be modified or annulled by Congress. The Governor of a Territory is appointed for 4 years by the President to whom he makes an annual report. The President appoints also the Territorial secretaries and other officials, together with the Territorial judges. Porto Rico, although not designated as a 'territory' in the technical sense, is self-governing. Its government is organised on a system almost identical with that of the territories. The Philippine Islands are governed by a civil Governor and elected Upper and Lower Legislative Chambers.

The District of Columbia is the seat of the United States Government, provided by the State of Maryland for the purposes of government in 1791. It is co-extensive with the city of Washington, and embraces an area of 60 square miles. The district has no municipal legislative body, and its citizens have no right to vote either in national or municipal concerns. By an Act of Congress of 1878, its municipal government is administered by three commissioners, appointed by the President.

The unit of local government in the North, especially in the New England States, is the rural township, governed directly by the voters who assemble annually or oftener if necessary, and legislate in local affairs, levy taxes, make appropriations, and appoint and instruct the local officials (select men, clerk, school-committee, &c.). Where cities exist the township government is superseded by the city government. Townships are grouped to form counties, each with its commissioners and other paid officials who have charge of public buildings, lay out highways, grant licences, and estimate and apportion the taxation necessary for county purposes. In the South the counties are themselves the units, though subdivided for educational or other special purposes. Their officials have in general additional functions, as the care of the poor and the superintendence of schools. In the Middle and North-Western States the two systems of local government are mixed. In the West all the public land is already divided into townships six miles square.

The total area of Indian reservations in the United States, exclusive of Alaska, was in June, 1915, 104,727 square miles (in 1900, 121,665 square miles), with an Indian population of 333,010 (in 1900 270,544).

In 1915 the United States spent 21,941,714 dollars on the Indians.

In 1910 (not including Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico and other non-contiguous possessions, and persons in the military and naval service stationed abroad) 78,456,380, or 85·3 per cent. were natives and 13,515,886, or 14·7 per cent., foreign-born.

II. MOVEMENT OF POPULATION.

There is as yet no national system of registration of births, deaths, and marriages in the United States. The registration area for births was established in 1915, and the birth-rates are computed from returns for certain areas for which the registration of births is accepted by the Bureau of the Census as approximately complete. These areas include Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Vermont, and the District of Columbia. The estimated population of this area in 1915 was 31,150,803, or 31·0 per cent. of the total estimated population of the United States, and the number of births returned was 776,451, or 24·9 per 1,000 population.

Death rates are computed from returns for certain areas where local registration records are kept. These areas now include California, Colorado, Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina (municipalities of 1,000 population and over in 1910), Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, the District of Columbia, and 41 cities in non-registration states. The estimated population for the registration area in 1915 was 67,386,992, or 67·1 per cent. of the total estimated population of Continental United States; and the number of deaths returned for that year was 909,155, or 13·5 per 1,000 of population.

Marriage rate per 10,000, based on total population, 93; based on population over 15 years of age, 141; based on unmarried population over 15 years of age, 321. Divorce rate per 10,000, based on total population, 7·2; based on married population, 20·0.

It is estimated that, from the foundation of the Government up to 1820, about 250,000 alien passengers arrived.

The total number of immigrants from 1820 to 1916 (June 30) was 32,652,950. In the following statement, immigrants from Canada and Mexico are included in the total :—

Of the total increase of 15,977,691 in the population of the country between 1900 and 1910, whites contributed 14,922,761; negroes, 993,769; and other races, 61,161. The increase in the native population was 12,803,081, and that in the foreign-born 3,174,610, or about one-fifth of the total increase.

The percentage of increase for the whites was 22·3, and for the negroes, 11·2. The native white population increased 20·8 per cent., and the foreign-born white, 30·7 per cent.

In 1910 whites constituted 88·9 per cent. of the total population, as compared with 87·9 per cent. in 1900. Native whites, however, constituted a slightly smaller proportion of the total in the later year than in the earlier, while foreign-born whites formed 14·5 per cent. of the total in 1910, as compared with 13·4 per cent. ten years earlier.

Instruction.

Each State of the Union has a system of free public schools established by law. The work of these is largely supplemented by private and parochial schools. In 1880 the percentage of illiterates in the population above ten years of age was 17 per cent., in 1890 13·3 per cent., in 1900 10·7 per cent., in 1910 7·7 per cent. The following statistics are for 1910 :—

	Total Population	Per cent. of total population	Population 10 years of age and over
			Total	Unable to Read and Write
				Number	Per cent.
Native Whites	68,386,422	74·4	50,989,343	1,535,530	3·0

The United States Government has set aside for elementary schools in each of the newer States, from two to four 'sections' (or square miles) in each township six miles square, the proceeds from the sale of which form the chief part of the permanent school funds of those States, the income alone being used for the support of the schools. This income is supplemented by State and local taxation, so that it constitutes about 3·3 per cent. of the total school revenue of all the States. In 1914 the amount expended on public schools of elementary and secondary grades was 555,077,146 dollars. In 1914 the 587 universities and colleges, including the 330 co-educational colleges, the 145 colleges for men only, and the 92 colleges for women only, had an income of 102,156,401 dollars from productive funds, from fees, and from United States Government, State, and Municipal appropriations.

The following table is for 1915. School statistics for States will be found under the several States:—

Justice and Crime.

The judicial system, like the executive and legislative systems, is dual. The General Government maintains courts for the trial of civil causes arising out of the admiralty, patent, banking, and other laws of the United States ; of certain causes between citizens of different States ; and of crimes against the United States. Almost all offences against the person and against property are dealt with by the State courts ; also all civil causes where the parties are residents of the same State, and matters of probate and divorce. The District Courts have original jurisdiction of bankruptcy.

In the separate States the lowest courts are those held by Justices of the Peace, or, in towns and cities, by Police Judges. In the counties, courts of record are held, some by local county officers, others by District or Circuit Judges, who go from county to county. In these courts there are usually the grand and petty jury. The highest court in each State is the Supreme Court, or Court of Final Appeal, with a Chief Justice and Associate Judges. These judges are usually elected by the people, but sometimes appointed by the Governor, with or without the Senate or Council ; they usually hold office for terms of years, but sometimes practically for life or during good behaviour. Their salaries vary from 2,500 dollars to 7,500 dollars.

The judges of the United States Courts are appointed for life. Of the United States Courts the lowest are those of the districts, of which there are about 60, each State forming one or more districts. These courts may try any case of crime against the United States not punishable with death. Each of the nine Justices of the Supreme Court must hold a Court in one of the nine circuits into which the country is divided, at least once every two years. There are also circuit courts of appeal. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief Justice and eight Associate Judges, appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate. It deals with appeals from inferior courts, and has original jurisdiction in cases affecting foreign ministers and consuls, and those in which a State is a party. The Chief Justice has a salary of 15,000 dollars, and each of the Associate Judges 14,500 dollars.

Other courts with criminal jurisdiction are the Court of the District of Columbia and those of the Territories.

On June 30, 1915, the cash balance in the Treasury, exclusive of reserve and trust funds, amounted to 82,025,716 dollars.

National debt on the 1st of July at various periods from 1880 :—

Year	Capital of Debt	Year	Capital of Debt
	Dollars		Dollars
1880	2,120,415,370	1913	2,916,204,914
1900	2,136,961,092	1914	2,912,499,269

1912	2,868,373,874	1916	3,609,244,262

The net debt—that is, what remains after deducting the cash in the Treasury—was 989,219,621 dollars on June 30, 1916. Nearly one hundred and eighteen and one-half millions of the interest-bearing debt is at 4 per cent., and the rest at 2, 2½ and 3 per cent.

In 1900 the true value of property was estimated at 88,517,306,775 dollars ; in 1904, at 107,104,192,410 dollars, and in 1912 at 187,739,071,090 dollars.

II. STATE FINANCE.

The revenues required for the administration of the separate States are derived from direct taxation, chiefly in the form of a tax on property real and personal ; and the greater part of such revenue is collected and expended by the local authorities, county, township, or school district.

For details see the separate States.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

The military forces consist of a Federal regular army obtained by voluntary enlistment, of the National Guard (also obtained by voluntary enlistment), which belongs to the different States, but which is under Federal control, and of a reserve to the National Guard which is unorganised but means a levée en masse.

In the regular army enlistment is for seven years, of which three years are spent with the colours and the remaining four 'on furlough'—practically in the reserve. Re-enlistment for a further term of seven years is allowed under certain circumstances. The pay of a private in any branch of the service is 15 dollars a month (about 2s. a day) at first ; but the soldier can obtain 'continuous service' or 're-enlistment' pay, so that after three years he may be drawing 18 dollars a month, equivalent to about 2s. 6d. a day. The minimum height is nominally 5 feet 4 inches, and the chest measurement 32 inches, but a certain relaxation of standards is allowed.

The U.S. Infantry is organised in 38 regiments of 3 battalions, each of 4 companies ; the ordinary peace strength of a company being 3 officers and 100 men. The Porto Rico regiment (natives), now a part of the regular establishment, has 3 battalions of 4 companies. There are 17 cavalry regiments of 3 squadrons ; the ordinary peace strength of a troop is 3 officers, 70 men ; the cavalry are practically mounted rifles. Two infantry regiments and 2 of cavalry are composed of negroes, with white officers. Thirteen special infantry regiments and three special cavalry regiments have moreover been organised for permanent service in the Philippines, Hawaii, and Panama. The field artillery of the U.S. Army comprises 9 regiments, each of 6 batteries ; of these, 5 regiments are 'light' artillery, 2 mountain artillery, 1 field artillery, and 1 horse artillery. All batteries have 4 guns and 12 wagons both in peace and war. There is also a coast artillery corps with 21,423 men. The engineers consist of 3 regiments, each of 2 battalions of 3 companies, 3 officers and 109 men. The regular troops other than those detached for coast defence are now organised as three divisions and a cavalry division. Each division consists of 2 or 3 brigades of from 2 to 4 regiments, 1 regiment of field artillery, 1 regiment of cavalry and 1 battalion of engineers. The cavalry division consists of 3 brigades, 1 of 3 regiments, the others of 2 regiments, 5 heavy artillery, 6 horse artillery batteries, and 2 companies of engineers.

In addition to the regular United States army, there are 52 companies of Philippine Scouts, (natives) each of 3 officers and 110 men ; total 5,915. There are also the Indian Scouts, 75 in number.

The authorised peace strength of the army at present is as follows :—

Infantry, cavalry, artillery, and engineers	99,966
Staff and Departments	31,504
Native Colonial troops	5,783

The regular U.S. troops stationed abroad amount to about 30,179 of all ranks, viz. :—14,315 in the Philippines, 9,521 in Hawaii and 6,343 in the Isthmian Canal Zone.

In the case of the National Guard or organised Militia the various States maintain the units of all arms with the aid of grants from the Federal Government. Enlistment in the National Guard is purely voluntary, the term of service being usually three years; the organisation has been assimilated to that of the regular troops. The President can call out the Militia for service within the borders of the United States. The total strength of the National Guard on July 30, 1916, was 8,589 officers and 123,605 enlisted men, and it is estimated that about three-fourths of the whole could actually be put into the field. It is organised in 122 regiments of infantry, 15 separate battalions of infantry, and 20 separate companies of infantry; 3 regiments of cavalry, 12 separate squadrons and 28 separate troops of cavalry; 9 regiments of field artillery, 9 separate battalions and 19 separate batteries of field artillery; 1 regiment of engineers, 1 separate battalion and 15 separate companies of engineers; 4 battalions signal corps, 25 separate companies signal corps; 25 ambulance companies, 37 field hospitals, and 143 companies of coast artillery.

The reserve, or unorganised, Militia comprises, with certain exemptions, the whole of the manhood of the nation between the age of 18 and 45, all being legally liable to serve in a national emergency for a period of 2 years. Their estimated number is 17 millions, but they are untrained and of no present value, though encouragement is being given to rifle shooting.

In event of war the United States could put into the field about 90,000 regular troops, and about 120,000 or 130,000 partially trained National Guard. The American nation relies on being able to raise, in case of emergency, a great Volunteer army. If sufficient numbers were not forthcoming, the reserve militia could be obliged to serve for two years, but this army, whether its ranks were filled by voluntary or compulsory recruitment, would practically be a new creation.

The regular infantry and cavalry are both armed with the U.S. rifle, model 1903 (Springfield), calibre .300. The armament of the horse and field batteries is a shielded Q. F. gun firing a 15 lb. shell.

The President is Commander-in-Chief of both the army and the navy. The Secretary of War controls the army with the aid of an Assistant Secretary and a Chief of the Staff. The former has charge of finance and non-military work, while the latter is entrusted with the general supervision of the army.

The army budget in 1916-17 amounted to 268,907,970 dollars (53,781,594*l.*). This does not include the expenditure by the several States on their National Guard; nor the enormous sum paid in pensions to former soldiers, both regulars and volunteers, which is separately provided.

The official analysis of the new Army Bill provides for four classes of soldiers in the United States. First, the Regular Army; second, the National Guard; third, the enlisted reserve corps, all of which shall exist in time of peace; and fourth, the Volunteer Army, which will be raised only in time of war. The peace strength of the Regular Army is approximately 11,000 officers, not to exceed 175,000 combatant troops, and approximately 40,000 non-combatant troops, including the unassigned recruits. The National Guard will consist of about 17,000 officers and 440,000 men. The number of men who will join the enlisted reserve corps cannot be foretold. They are practically enlisted specialists for the technical departments of the army recruited in time of peace for use in time of war only, and are subject in time of peace to short periods of training yearly. Volunteers can be called in time of war when and in such numbers as Congress shall authorise,

The increase in the regular army will be made in five annual increments, beginning July 1, 1916, and running to July 1, 1920, although the President is authorised to make the increase more rapidly in case of emergency.

The present enlistment contract is for 7 years, 4 with the colours and 3 with the reserve. Under the new law these periods are reversed; this is, 3 years with the colours and 4 in the reserve; but an important addition is made, viz., that at the end of 1 year's service any enlisted man within the continental limits of the United States may be discharged if he has become proficient in that time.

The National Guard is, within the limits of the Constitution, federalised. The maximum number authorised is 800 for each representative and senator in Congress, and such number from the Territories as the President shall prescribe. This will probably give a total of about 17,000 officers and 440,000 enlisted men. The organisation of the National Guard will conform to that of the Regular Army, as will also its equipment and armament. Enlistment in the National Guard will be for six years, three years with the colours and three with the reserve, but a man may serve out his enlistment, if he so desires, instead of going into the reserve.

In order to encourage target practice, the Secretary of War is authorised to establish ranges and to supply rifles, ammunition, and instructors for rifle clubs in various parts of the country.

II. NAVY.

The navy estimates (financial years ending June 30) were as follows:—

Years.	£	Years.	£
1916-17	64,251,160	1912-13	25,929,712
1915-16	29,877,082	1911-12	25,960,785
1914-15	28,973,343	1910-11	25,929,712
1913-14	28,932,630	1909-10	28,153,331

The greatly increased expenditure in 1916-17 is due mainly to the adoption of a three-years' shipbuilding programme, providing for a great expansion of the fleet. The total cost will be about £103,000,000, and in the first year 4 battleships, 4 battle-cruisers, 4 scouts, 30 submarines, and 20 destroyers are to be laid down. Six additional battleships, 2 battle-cruisers, and a number of smaller vessels will complete the programme.

A total sum of 75,770,000*l.* was voted by the House of Representatives in February for the year 1917-18. The strained relations with Germany caused the House to increase the estimates prepared by its Committee. Eighteen 800-ton submarines are included. The Secretary of the Navy was authorised to expend immediately a sum of about 30,000,000*l.* provided last year for the acquisition of submarine-chasers, destroyers and small craft. The completion of 200 anti-U boats was expected within the next five months.

The control of naval affairs is vested in the Secretary of the Navy, a Cabinet officer, appointed by the President, with the approval of the Senate. The Assistant-Secretary, a civilian, also appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate, the Chief of Naval Operations, the chiefs of seven administrative bureaux, the Commandant of the Marine Corps, and the Judge-Advocate-General, are directly responsible to the Secretary. The administrative bureaux are: yards and docks, navigation, ordnance, construction and repair, steam engineering, supplies and accounts, and medicine and surgery.

The Government Naval Stations and constructive and repairing establishments are at Portsmouth, N.H.; Boston, Mass.; Brooklyn, N.Y.; League Island, Pa.; Washington, D.C.; Norfolk, Va.; Pensacola, Fla.; Mare Island, Cal.; and Puget Sound, Washington; and naval stations are at Newport, R.I.; New London, Conn.; Charleston, S.C.; Port Royal, S.C.; Key West, Fla.; New Orleans, La.; Guantanamo, Cuba; Guam; Hawaii; Tutuila, Samoa; Cavite, P.I.; Olongapo, P.I.

All warships, under the requirements of law, are built within the country and of home material. The following is a classified statement of the strength of the United States Navy on July 1, 1916. Vessels unserviceable for war purposes, gunboats, yachts, tugs, training ships, &c., not included :—

The public lands are divided into two great classes. The one class have a dollar and a quarter an acre designated as the minimum price, and the other two dollars and a half an acre, the latter being the alternate sections, reserved by the United States in land grants to railroads, &c. Titles to these lands may be acquired by location under the homestead laws; or, as to some classes, by purchase for cash. The homestead laws give the right to 160 acres of a-dollar-and-a-quarter lands to any citizen or applicant for citizenship who will actually settle upon and cultivate the land. The title is perfected by the issue of a patent after three years (law of June 6, 1912) of actual settlement. The only charges in the case of homestead entries are fees and commissions. On July 1, 1916, 617,611,349 acres were unappropriated and unreserved, of which 362,665,760 were in Alaska. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916, the area patented was 12,161,808 acres, of which 7,723,738 acres were patented under the homestead laws. It is provided by law that two sections, of 640 acres of land, in each 'township,' are reserved for common schools, so that the spread of education may go together with colonisation.

The power of Congress over the public territory is exclusive and universal, except so far as restrained by stipulations in the original cessions.

According to census returns the total acreage of farms and the improved acreage have been :—

In 1910, 4,771,063 farms were occupied by native whites, 669,556 by foreign-born whites and 920,883 by negroes and other non-whites. Of the occupants, 3,948,722 were owners, 58,104 managers, 712,294 cash tenants, 1,399,923 share tenants, 128,466 share-cash tenants and 113,993 not reporting.

The estimated gross value at farm of all crops and animal products was, in 1914, 9,895,000,000 dollars; in 1915, 10,775,000,000 dollars; and in 1916 (preliminary estimate), 13,449,000,000 dollars.

The areas and produce of the principal cereal crops for three years are shown in the subjoined tables,

The output of cane sugar in 1914-15 amounted to 493,240,000 pounds, and in 1915-16, about 277,000,000 pounds. The beet sugar production in 1914-15 was 1,444,108,000 pounds, and in 1915-16, 1,748,440,000 pounds.

Cotton acreage and production (excluding "linters"), for the last six years were:—

Years	Acres harvested	Bales (500 lbs. gross)	Years	Acres harvested	Bales (500 lbs. gross)
1911	36,045,000	15,693,000	1914	36,832,000	16,135,000
1912	34,283,000	13,703,000	1915	31,412,000	11,192,000

The estimated cotton production in 1916, was grown in the following States: Texas, 3,775,000 bales; Georgia, 1,845,000; Arkansas, 1,145,000; South Carolina, 920,000; Oklahoma, 835,000; Mississippi, 800,000; North Carolina, 646,000; Alabama, 525,000; Louisiana, 440,000; Tennessee, 378,000; Missouri, 62,000; California, 60,000; Florida, 43,000; Virginia, 29,000; all other, 8,000 bales.

In 1916 there were under tobacco 1,411,800 acres, which yielded 1,150,622,000 lbs. of tobacco. The chief tobacco-growing States were Kentucky, 484,000 acres, yielding 435,600,000 lbs.; North Carolina, 320,000 acres, yielding 176,000,000 lbs.; Virginia, 190,000 acres, yielding 129,200,000 lbs.; Ohio, 100,000 acres, yielding 95,000,000 lbs.; Tennessee, 102,200 acres, yielding 81,760,000 lbs.; Wisconsin, 43,900 acres, yielding 55,753,000 lbs.; Pennsylvania, 36,100 acres, yielding 49,096,000 lbs.; Connecticut, 22,200 acres, yielding 36,186,000 lbs.; South Carolina, 39,000 acres, yielding 20,280,000 lbs.; Maryland, 25,500 acres, yielding 19,635,000 lbs.; Indiana, 14,800 acres, yielding 13,764,000 lbs.; West Virginia, 14,100 acres, yielding 12,690,000 lbs.; Massachusetts, 7,300 acres, yielding 12,118,000 lbs.

The following table exhibits the number of farm animals in 1900 (June 1), 1910 (April 15), 1916 and 1917 (January 1):—

Live Stock	1900 (Census)	1910 (Census)	1916 (Estimate)	1917 (Estimate)
Horses . . .	18,267,020	19,833,113	21,159,000	21,126,000
Mules . . .	3,264,615	4,209,769	4,593,000	4,639,000
Cattle of all kinds	67,719,410	61,803,866	61,920,000	63,617,000
Sheep . . .	61,503,713	52,447,861	48,625,000	48,483,000
Swine . . .	62,868,041	58,185,676	67,766,000	67,453,000

The value of farm animals in the United States on January 1, 1917, was:—Cattle other than milch cows, 1,465,786,000 dollars; milch cows, 1,358,435,000 dollars; total value of all farm animals, 6,685,020,000 dollars.

In 1909 the factories used 9,888,727,303 pounds of milk, and 1,406,143,908 pounds of cream, made 627,145,865 lbs. of butter, 311,175,730 lbs. of cheese, and 495,197,844 lbs. of condensed milk. The total value of the products manufactured was 275,277,090 dollars. The total production of butter in the United States, including the output of farms as well as factories, in 1909, was 1,621,796,475 lbs.; the total production of cheese was 320,581,594 lbs. New York, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Illinois, and Iowa have the largest dairy industries.

In 1914, the factories used 8,431,632,860 lbs. of milk and 2,383,828,265 lbs. of cream, made 736,013,489 lbs. of butter, 377,506,109 lbs. of cheese, and 884,646,761 lbs. of condensed milk. The total value of the products manufactured was 370,818,728 dollars.

In 1901 the estimated wool clip was 302,502,328 pounds: in 1914, 290,192,000 pounds; in 1915, 285,726,000 pounds; and in 1916, 288,490,000 pounds.

The census reports for 1914 show that the value of canned vegetables was 84,413,667 dollars; of canned fruits, 24,897,174 dollars; of dried fruits, 84,771,912 dollars; of canned soups, 7,877,057 dollars; and of all other products, including preserves, pickles, sauces, cider, and vinegar produced in canning establishments, 6,056,083 dollars. The total value of canned products, in 1914, was 158,015,893 dollars.

II. FORESTS AND FORESTRY.

The United States forests cover 550,000,000 acres, or about one-fourth of the whole country. Forests publicly owned contain one-fifth of all timber standing. Forests privately owned contain at least four-fifths of the standing timber. The original forests of the United States covered 850,000,000 acres, with a stand of not less than 5,200 billion feet of merchantable timber. There were five great forest regions—the northern, the southern, the central, the Rocky Mountain, and the Pacific. The present rate of cutting is three times the annual growth of the forests of the United States. The great pineries of the Lake States are nearing exhaustion and heavy inroads have been made upon the supplies of valuable timber throughout all parts of the country.

The heavy demands for timber have been rapidly pushing the great centres of lumber industry toward the South and West. In consequence, the State of Washington has led for several years in lumber production, and is now followed in order by Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, and Oregon. Among the soft-woods, in 1915 the production of yellow pine lumber amounted to about 14½ billion feet; the Douglas fir of the north-west held second place, with more than four and one-half billion feet; while white pine with two and three-quarter billion feet ranked third. Of the hard-woods, oak came first, with nearly three billion feet, followed in the order named by cypress, maple, red gum, chestnut, yellow poplar, birch and beech.

The annual consumption including waste in logging and in manufacture, is more than 22,000,000,000 cubic feet of wood, valued at about 1,375,000,000 dollars. It includes 90,000,000 cords of firewood, nearly 40,000,000,000 board feet of lumber, 445,000,000 board feet for veneer, 150,000,000 ties, nearly 1,700,000,000 staves, over 135,000,000 sets of heading, over 350,000,000 barrel hoops, over 3,300,000 cords of native pulpwood, 170,000,000 cubic feet of round mine timbers, nearly 1,500,000 cords of wood for distillation, over 140,000 cords for excelsior and nearly 3,500,000 telegraph and telephone poles. The demand for wood pulp is making a severe drain on the spruce forests, but a larger drain upon the forest resources is made by the demand for railroad ties.

The national forests were set aside as follows: By President Harrison, 13,416,710 acres; by President Cleveland, 25,686,320 acres; by President McKinley, 7,050,089 acres; by President Roosevelt, 148,346,924 acres. Since early in 1909 a careful readjustment of the boundaries has been going on. In consequence President Taft added to the national forests 4,333,847 acres and eliminated from them 11,680,578 acres, while to June 30 (inclusive), 1916, President Wilson has added 563,279 acres and eliminated 11,615,124 acres. Acts of Congress prohibit any additions by the President to the national forest area in Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, and Colorado.

The present net area of the national forests, including Alaska and Porto Rico, is 155,407,920 acres, with an additional 706,975 acres acquired by purchase in the White Mountains and Southern Appalachian regions for national forest purposes.

The expenditures upon the National Forests for protection, administration, and improvement at present exceed the revenue from the forests by about 3,000,000 dollars a year, depending partly on the severity of the fire season and partly on the activity of the general lumber market. The normal gross cost of administration and protection is approximately 4,750,000 dollars, while from 300,000 dollars to 600,000 dollars yearly are invested in the construction of roads, trails, buildings, and other permanent improvements. The cost of administration includes the cost of handling much free-use business, while the cost of protection is chiefly the cost of protecting water-supplies and future timber supplies.

The receipts from the several sources for the last three fiscal years were as follows:—

Fiscal Year	Timber	Grazing	Special Uses, &c.	All sources
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
1914	1,304,053	1,002,347	131,309	2,437,710
1915	1,175,133	1,130,495	175,840	2,481,469
1916	1,412,592	1,210,214	200,733	2,823,540

Under the law 25 per cent. of the receipts is paid to the States in which the national forests are located, to be expended for roads and schools. The amount to be paid to the States in this way from the receipts in 1916 was 695,541 dollars. Besides this 10 per cent. of the receipts is set aside to be used under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture for road and trail building in national forests in co-operation with State authorities or otherwise. The amount thus appropriated on account of fiscal year 1916 receipts was 278,216 dollars. This, added to the amount carried over from the 1915 receipts fund, 151,089 dollars, and the amount appropriated for improvements, in the regular agricultural bill, 400,000 dollars, together with the million dollars per annum voted by Congress in 1916 for each of the next 10 years, makes the total available for the construction of roads, trails, cabins bridges, telephone lines, &c., on the national forests for the fiscal year 1917 1,829,305 dollars.

The grazing receipts for 1916 were paid by the holders of 28,052 permits to graze 1,860,635 cattle, horses, and swine, and of 5,276 permits to graze 7,886,473 sheep and goats. The receipts from timber sales were paid by approximately 11,000 purchasers, to cut the equivalent of 545,428,000 board feet of timber.

Figures for free use of timber are as follows:—

Fiscal Year	Number of Permittees	Cut Board Feet	Value
			Dollars
1915	40,015	123,168,000	206,464
1916	41,544	120,353,000	184,653

III. MINING.

The following are the statistics of the metallic products of the United States in 1914 and 1915 (long tons, 2,240 lbs.; short tons, 2,000 lbs.) The values are: for iron, at point of production; for nickel, the value at New York City; for copper and lead, the values at New York; for zinc, the value at St. Louis (Missouri), except for 1915, when value is that of sales; for quicksilver, the value at San Francisco; for platinum, the value at New York City:—

The total production of coal from 1807, the date of the earliest record, to the close of 1915 was 10,889,304,901 short tons.

The total production of gold and silver in the country was as follows in the years mentioned:—

Year	Gold		Silver
	Fine ounces	Value	Fine ounces	Value
		Dollars		Dollars
1911 . . . . .	4,687,053	96,890,000	60,899,400	32,615,700

1913 . . . . .	4,299,784	88,884,400	66,801,500	40,348,100

The report on gold and silver is the result of a conference between the U.S. Geological Survey and the Director of the Mint.

The precious metals are raised mainly in California, Colorado, Alaska, and Nevada for gold, and Nevada, Montana, Utah, Idaho, and Colorado for silver. The production of gold and silver in the United States from 1792 to 1915 was as follows :—

Year	Gold		Silver
	Quantity	Value	Quantity	Value
	Ozs. troy	Dollars	Ozs. troy	Dollars
1792-1847 . . .	1,187,170	24,537,600	309,500	404,500

Precious stones are found in considerable varieties in the United States ; the total production was valued in 1912 at 319,722 dollars, in 1913 at 319,454 dollars, in 1914 at 124,651 dollars, and in 1915 at 170,431 dollars. The stones found are sapphires (in Iowa and Montana), turquoise, tourmaline, garnets, beryl, agates, amethyst, ruby, topaz, &c.

IV. MANUFACTURES.

The following table shows the condition of manufacturing industries in the United States as reported at each census from 1880 to 1915. The censuses of 1905, 1910, and 1915, unlike the earlier censuses, did not include hand and neighbourhood industries, but were confined to establishments conducted under the factory system or producing goods for the general market. The statistics for each census cover the preceding calendar year :—

Census	Number of Establishments	Capital	Persons employed	Value of products	Cost of materials

<sup>4</sup> Includes salaried officials, clerks, &c., and wage earners ; does not include proprietors and firm members.

The censuses of 1890, 1900, and 1905 cover Alaska ; the census of 1910 covers Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico ; the census of 1914 covers Continental United States.

The census of manufactures for 1909 and 1914 (not including Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico) were confined to establishments under the factory system, to the exclusion of neighbourhood industries and hand trades such as custom dress-making, tailoring, carpentering, grist and saw-milling. The census results were as follows:—

In 1914 there were 353 blast furnaces in active plants with a daily capacity of 109,426 tons ; in 1909, 388, with a daily capacity of 101,447 tons. In 1914 the output of pig-iron was 23,269,731 tons, value 312,761,617 dollars ; in 1909 it was 25,651,798 tons, value 387,830,443 dollars. Bessemer, or modified Bessemer steel plants in 1914 had 115 converters ; in 1909, 112 ; total daily capacity of ingots or direct castings, double turn, in 1914, 53,106 tons ; in 1909, 49,005 tons. Open-hearth steel plants in 1914 had 864 basic and acid furnaces ; in 1909, 706 ; in 1904, 489 ; daily capacity of steel, in 1914, 93,590 tons ; in 1909, 62,161 tons. The total value of products of the steel works and rolling mills in 1914 was 918,664,565 dollars; in 1909, 985,722,534 dollars. The value of output comprised :—

Products	1914	1909

The output of tin plates in 1914 was of the value of 60,258,024 dollars; in 1909, 38,259,885 dollars. The output of terne plates in 1914 was of the value of 6,012,321 dollars; in 1909, 7,555,261 dollars.

The output of sawed lumber in 1909 amounted to the value of 684,479,859 dollars; in 1904, to 435,708,084 dollars. The output of the leather, tanned, and curried industry, in 1914, was valued at 367,201,705 dollars; in 1909, at 327,874,187 dollars. The boot and shoe products manufactured in 1914 were valued at 501,760,458 dollars; in 1909, at 424,630,726 dollars; leather gloves and mittens, products, 1914, 21,614,109 dollars; 1909, 23,630,598 dollars.

The value of the output of paper and wood-pulp products in 1914 was 332,147,175 dollars; in 1909, 267,656,964 dollars. The value of the output of printing and publishing industries including bookbinding and blank books, engraving steel and copper plate, lithographing, book and job music, and newspapers and periodicals, in 1914, were valued at 901,534,801 dollars; in 1909, 737,876,087 dollars.

The output of the chemical and allied industries for 1904 and 1909, comprised products to the values shown below :—

Products	1914	1909
	Dollars	Dollars
Chemicals (acids, &c.) . . . . .	183,151,613	137,309,942

The production of tin plates and terne plates was in 1904, 458,208 tons (census); in 1910, 722,770 tons; in 1912, 962,971 tons; in 1913, 823,719 tons; in 1914, 931,241 tons; and in 1915, 1,055,936 tons.

The total production of rolled iron and steel in 5 years is given (in gross

(tons) in the following table (official figures of the American Iron and Steel Institute, Philadelphia):—

Years	Iron and steel rails	Bars, hoops, skelp, and shapes	Wire rods	Plates and sheets, except nail plate	Nail plate Gross tons	Total Gross tons.

Fermented liquors 66,189,473 barrels in 1913-14, 59,808,210 barrels in 1914-15, and 58,633,624 barrels in 1915-16.

V. FISHERIES.

In 1908 (latest census) there were in the United States 143,881 fishermen, or 6,933 vessels and 83,549 boats, and the products were valued at 54,030,630 dollars. The capital invested was 42,021,000 dollars.

For the canning and preserving of fish, clams, oysters, and shrimp in the United States (including Alaska) there were in 1914, according to the census reports, 538 establishments, the products of which for that year were valued at 55,283,404 dollars.

Commerce.

The subjoined table gives the total value, in pounds sterling, of the imports and exports of domestic merchandise in years ended June 30:—

Year (ended June 30)	Imports of Merchandise	Exports of Merchandise	Year (ended June 30)	Imports of Merchandise	Exports of Merchandise
	£	£		£	£
1911	305,447,221	402,700,805	1914	378,785,131	465,936,805
1912	330,652,987	434,063,965	1915	334,833,948	553,717,868
1913	362,801,647	485,701,271	1916	439,576,702	566,696,577

In the United States the values are fixed not according to average prices, but according to invoices or shipping papers, which the importers and exporters have to produce. For imports the invoices are signed by an American Consul; for exports the shipping papers are signed by the exporter or agents at the port of shipment. The quantities and values are determined by declarations.

The 'most favoured nation' treatment in commerce between Great Britain and the United States was agreed to for 4 years by the treaty of 1815, was extended for 10 years by the treaty of 1818, and indefinitely (subject to 12 months' notice) by that of 1827.

Imports and exports of gold and silver bullion and specie in years ended June 30 :—

Internal Communications.

According to Poor's Railway Manual, the extent of railways in operation in 1830 was 23 miles; it rose to 52,922 miles in 1870; to 167,191 miles in 1890; in 1900, 198,964; in 1910, 249,992; in 1912, 258,033; in 1913, 261,036; in 1914, 263,547; in 1915, 264,378 miles. The ordinary gauge is 4 ft. 8½ in.

The following table, based on the figures of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, shows some railway statistics for 4 years :—

Year	Mileage	Miles of line		Number of passengers	Weight of freights in tons per 100 square miles of territory	per 10,000 of the population
1912	246,816	8.30	25.93	1,004,081,346	1,844,977,673
1913	249,802	8.40	25.81	1,033,679,680	2,058,035,487
1914	252,231	8.48	25.64	1,053,138,718	1,976,138,155
1915	253,789	8.53	25.39	976,303,602	1,802,018,177

The total capital invested in railways (stock, funded and unfunded debt) in 1915 was 21,127,959,078 dollars, and the total amount paid in dividends and interest was 792,663,959 dollars. The number of locomotives was 63,850.

The telegraphs of the United States are largely in the hands of the Western Union Telegraph Company, which had (December 31, 1915) 238,940 miles of line, 1,610,709 miles of wire, and 25,142 offices; the number of messages sent in 1912 was estimated at 90,000,000, not including messages sent over leased wires or under railroad contracts; the receipts, in 1915, 52,475,721 dollars; expenses, 40,972,541 dollars; and profits, 11,503,180 dollars.

The following table relates to the business of another important company; the figures of the table do not represent the operations of one company, but the aggregation of the figures of many companies which go to make up the telephone system which is generally known as the American Telephone and Telegraph Company ('Bell Telephone System') :—

Money and Credit.

The monetary system is monometallic, and has been so since 1873, gold being the standard.

The Act of February 28, 1878, commonly known as the Bland-Allison Act, required the purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury of silver bullion at the market price of silver of not less than 2,000,000 dollars or more than 4,000,000 dollars worth per month, the same to be coined as fast as so purchased into silver dollars. 378,166,793 silver dollars were coined under the Bland-Allison Act. The Act of July 14, 1890, known as the Sherman Act, required the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of fine silver monthly, which was paid for in Treasury notes issued as the silver was purchased. The total amount of silver purchased under this Act from August 13, 1890, to November 1, 1893, date of repeal of the purchasing clause, was 168,674,682 five ounces, costing 155,931,002 dollars, the coinage value of which was 218,081,438 silver dollars. From the bullion purchased under the Act of July 14, 1890, there were coined to December 31, 1901, 149,710,163 silver dollars. Under the Act of March 3, 1891, for re-coinage of trade dollars, 5,078,472 silver dollars were coined, making a total of 532,955,428 standard silver dollars coined from March 1, 1878, to December 31, 1901.

There is no National Bank in the United States, but the Federal Reserve Act, adopted on December 23, 1913, set up a Federal Reserve Bank in each of the 12 districts into which the United States is divided for the purpose. The 12 Federal Reserve Banks and their capital stock is shown as follows:—

District	Federal Reserve Bank	Capital	District	Federal Reserve Bank	Capital
		Dollars			Dollars

Every National Bank is required to become a stockholder, to the extent of 6 per cent. of its capital and surplus, in the Federal Reserve Bank of the district in which it is situated. State banks may also become member banks under certain conditions. There are at present 7,621 National Banks and 27 State Banks in the system. The largest district is that of Chicago with 987 member banks, the smallest that of Atlanta with 385.

The Federal Reserve Banks do not do banking business with the public, but only with their member banks. They may also issue Federal Reserve notes against commercial paper with a minimum gold reserve of 40 per cent. The whole system is under the control of the Federal State Board, composed of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Controller of the Currency, both ex-officio, together with five other appointed members.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The dollar of 100 cents is of the par value of 49·32*d.*, or 4·8665 dollars to the pound sterling.

The monetary unit, in accordance with the monetary law of March 14, 1900, is the gold dollar of 25·8 grains (or 1·6718 gramme) ·900 fine. The Government undertakes to maintain parity between gold and silver coin, and a fund of 150,000,000 dollars in gold has been established for the repayment of United States notes and Treasury notes in gold at sight.

Gold coins in common use are 20, 10 and 5-dollar pieces called double eagles, and half-eagles. The eagle weighs 258 grains or 16·71818 grammes ·900 fine, and therefore contains 232·2 grains or 15·0464 grammes of fine gold.

The silver dollar weighs 412·5 grains or 26·730 grammes ·900 fine, and therefore contains 371·25 grains or 24·057 grammes of fine silver. Subsidiary silver coins contain 347·22 grains of fine silver per dollar.

British weights and measures are usually employed, but the old Winchester gallon and bushel are used instead of the new or imperial standards. They are :—

Wine Gallon = 0·83333 gallon.

Ale Gallon = 1·01695 „

Bushel = 0·9692 imperial bushel.

Instead of the British cwt. a Cental, of 100 pounds, is used; the short ton contains 2,000 lbs.; the long ton, 2,240 lbs.

In December, 1916, a Bill was introduced in the House of Representatives to make the metric system of weights and measures compulsory in the United States on and after July 1, 1920.

ALABAMA.

Constitution and Government.—The State of Alabama was admitted into the Union on December 14, 1819. The legislature consists of a Senate of 35 members and a House of Representatives of 106 members; all the legislators being elected for four years.

Governor.—Charles Henderson, 1915-19 (7,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—John Purifoy.

The State is divided into 67 counties. The State Capital is Montgomery.

Area and Population.—Area 51,998 square miles, of which 719 square miles is water. Estimated population July 1, 1916, 2,332,608.

Years	Population.
	White.	Coloured.	Total.	Per Sq. Mile.
1860	526,431	437,770	964,201	18·8
1890	834,892	678,489	1,513,401	29·5
1900	1,001,390	827,307	1,828,697	35·7
1910	1,228,832	908,282	2,138,093	41·7

By sex and race the population in 1910 was thus distributed:—

	White.	Negro.	Asiatic.	Indian.	Total.
Male . . . . .	625,891	447,194	70	454	1,074,209
Female . . . . .	602,941	460,488	—	455	1,063,884
Total . . . . .	1,228,832	908,282	70	909	2,138,093

The foreign-born numbered 19,286, of whom 3,599 were German, 2,348 English, 1,167 Irish, and 1,120 Scotch. The large cities (estimated population in 1916), Birmingham 181,762 ; Mobile, 58,221 ; Montgomery (capital), 43,285. Of the total population in 1910, 17·3 per cent. was urban.

Religion, Instruction and Charity.—Protestant churches are in the ascendency in the State. The order of strength of different religious bodies is : Baptist, Methodist, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Disciples or Christians.

The 6,753 public elementary schools in 1915 had 2,979 male and 7,324 female teachers, and 456,561 enrolled pupils. The 54 County high schools had 201 teachers and 5,297 pupils in 1915. The nine public normal schools in 1915 had 355 teachers and 3,906 pupils. The nine agricultural schools in 1915 had 44 teachers and 1340 enrolled pupils. Total expenditure on education (1915), 7,201,996 dollars (excluding private and denominational schools). For superior and professional education there are various institutions, the most important (1916) being (for men and both sexes) :—

Founded	Institutions	Instructors	Students
1831	University of Alabama (State)	140	1,700
1859	Southern University, Greensboro' (M.E.So.)	16	161
1872	Alabama Polytechnic Institute	75	901
1909	Woman's College of Alabama	17	225
1880	Tuskegee Normal & Industrial Inst. (Coloured)	198	1,564

Within the State are 48 benevolent institutions (hospitals, homes, orphanages, &c.). On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 739, being 34·6 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions, 3,687, being 172·4 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—The revenue is derived partly from occupation taxes, but mostly from taxes on property of all kinds, the assessment being made at 60 per cent. of the cash value for State and county purposes by the county assessors on the sworn statements of the taxpayers.

The receipts and disbursements in the year ending September 30, 1915, were :—

	Dollars
Balance October 1, 1914	180,196
Receipts, 1914-15	6,694,538
Total	6,874,734
Disbursements, 1914-15	7,830,045
Deficit, September 30, 1915	955,311

The bonded debt of the State in 1915 amounted to 9,057,000 dollars. The assessed value of real property in 1915 was 389,741,082 dollars ; of personal property, 236,417,740 dollars ; total assessed value, 626,158,822 dollars.

According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders, Alabama has a defaulted debt estimated at 30,000,000 dollars, but the State denies any liability for such estimated indebtedness, having legally adjudicated all claims. The amount so claimed is made up of unauthorised charges, for which no lawful warrant ever existed.

The militia (or State Troops) consists of artillery and infantry ; total strength (June 30, 1916) 166 officers and 2,391 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Alabama is largely an agricultural State ; the number of farms in 1910 was 262,901 ; the farm area was 20,732,312 acres, of which 9,693,581 acres were improved land ; the value of all farm property was 370,138,429 dollars. The chief crops are maize, 46,688,000 bushels in 1916 ; wheat, 1,045,000 bushels ; oats, 10,500,000 bushels ; potatoes, 1,800,000 bushels. Other crops are hay and vegetables. Tobacco, 300,000 pounds. Sugar is largely grown and manufactured. On January 1, 1917, the live-stock comprised 150,000 horses, 278,000 mules, 405,000 milch cows, 534,000 other cattle, 121,000 sheep, and 1,850,000 swine. In 1915 the area under cotton was 3,219,000 acres ; the yield was 525,000 bales of cotton, valued at 48,956,000 dollars.

In 1910 there were 3,398 manufacturing establishments with capital amounting to 173,180,038 dollars, employing 72,148 wage-earners who earned 27,284,000 dollars, used raw material worth 83,443,000 dollars, and turned out products valued at 145,962,000 dollars. The iron and steel output was worth 21,236,000 dollars ; cotton goods, 22,212,000 dollars ; lumber and timber products, 26,058,000 dollars ; other large industries being foundry work, railway-car construction, the manufacture of fertilisers, of cotton-seed oil and cake, and of turpentine and resin.

In 1914 the output of coal was 15,593,422 short tons, valued at 20,849,919 dollars, and of coke 3,084,149 short tons, valued at 8,408,443 dollars. Of sandstone, marble, and limestone the output in 1914 was valued at 1,319,753 dollars ; clay products of the State were valued at 1,574,023 dollars. Alabama yielded in 1914 pig iron to the amount of 1,661,420 long tons valued at 17,481,828 dollars. The total value in 1918 of the mineral output of the State (excluding pig iron) was 30,879,284 dollars ; in 1913, 34,660,545 dollars.

The chief port of Alabama is Mobile, through which there is a large trade. The exports comprise raw cotton (over 12,062,000 dollars annually), timber, lumber, &c. (6,800,000), cereals and flour (2,950,000), and lard (1,800,000), besides cattle, sheep and other animals, nuts, hops, fruit, flax-seed and oil, sugar, tobacco, &c. The port is the outlet not only for products of Alabama, but for those of neighbouring States. The imports at Mobile are mostly from Mexico and consist largely of bananas, other tropical fruits, and sisal grass. The harbour channel is deepened to 22½ ft.

The larger rivers in the State are navigable (except at low water) for several hundred miles ; the Alabama river for 400 miles. In 1915 the railways within the State had a length of 5,424 miles, exclusive of 365 miles of electric railway.

In 1915 there were 11 savings banks in the State with 17,204 depositors who had to their credit 1,000,665 dollars, making an average of 57·86 dollars to each depositor.

British Vice-Consul at Mobile.—Thomas John McSweany.

ARIZONA.

Government.—Arizona was admitted into the Union as a Sovereign State on February 14, 1912. In the laws which the first State Legislature of Arizona enacted, the affairs of State government are placed under direct control of the people, who can at any time exercise the machinery of the Initiative, Referendum and the Recall. Among the amendments to the Constitution upon which the people voted in 1912 was one giving the State power to engage in industrial pursuits.

The State Senate consists of 19 members, and the House of Representatives 35. The State is represented in the National Congress by one member of the lower house and two Senators.

Governor.—Thomas E. Campbell, 1916-18 (4,000 dollars).

Secretary.—Sidney Osborn.

The State capital is Phoenix (estimated population in 1916, 18,621). Tucson had an estimated population of 16,750 in 1916. The State is divided into 14 counties.

Area, Population and Instruction.—Area of 113,956 square miles, of which 146 square miles is water. The Indian reservations had an area of 25,536 square miles in 1915. Estimated population, July 1, 1916, 255,544.

The population in four census years was:—

Years.	Population.	Per Sq. Mile.	Years.	Population.	Per Sq. Mile.
1880	40,440	0.4	1900	122,931	1.1
1890	88,243	0.8	1910	204,354	1.8

In 1910 the population by race and sex was:—

	White.	Negro.	Asiatic.	Indian.	Total.
Male . . . . .	100,871	1,054	16,649		18,574
Female . . . . .	70,597	955	14,228		85,780
Total . . . . .	171,468	2,009	1,676	29,201	204,354

In 1910, 48,765 were foreign born, of whom 3,500 were English, 29,987 Mexicans, 2,666 Canadians, and 1,846 Germans. Of the total population in 1910, 31.0 per cent. was urban.

The order of strength of religious bodies is: Roman Catholic, Latter-day Saints, Presbyterian, Methodist, Congregationalists.

School attendance is compulsory for 12 weeks (6 consecutive) annually for children from 8 to 14 years of age. Instruction is free for children from 6 to 21 years of age. The enrolled pupils in 1916 in the elementary schools numbered 43,945, and there were 1,364 teachers. The number of high schools in 1916 was 24, with 177 teachers and 3,133 pupils. Two public normal schools at Tempe and Flagstaff had 45 teachers and 670 students in 1915. Total expenditure for elementary and high schools (1916) 2,667,076 dollars. The State University of Arizona, at Tucson, founded in 1891, had 36 professors and 500 students in 1916 (280 men and 220 women). There is a State Agricultural School also at Tucson.

Charity.—The State has reform and industrial schools and 11 penal and benevolent institutions. On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 271, being 132.6 per 100,000 of population, and, of prisoners in penal institutions 645, being 315·6 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—Revenues are derived mainly from the general property tax levied on all property not specially exempted. The revenue and expenditure in the year ending June 30, 1915, were :—

	Dollars
Balance in hand July 1, 1914 . . . . .	753,298
Receipts, 1914-15 . . . . .	2,525,792
Total . . . . .	3,279,090
Disbursements, 1914-15 . . . . .	2,702,041
Balance, June 30, 1915 . . . . .	577,049

The bonded debt, June 30, 1915, amounted to 910,972 dollars. The assessed value of taxable real and personal property amounted to 375,862,414 dollars for 1914.

The militia, or national guard, with headquarters at Phoenix, consists of cavalry and infantry; total strength (June 30, 1916), 54 officers and 866 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Arizona, with its dry climate, is not well suited for agriculture, but along the watercourses and where irrigation is used the soil is productive. The wide pasture-lands are favourable for the rearing of cattle and sheep. Several large reservoirs for the storage of water have been and are being constructed by the United States Government, notably the Roosevelt dam, which supplies water to the rich Salt River Valley District, of which Phoenix is the principal city. The Federal Government is now engaged on the Yuma project, which will make use of the water of the lower Colorado River and add hundreds of thousands of acres to the agricultural area.

In 1910 Arizona contained 9,227 farms of an aggregate area of 1,246,613 acres, of which 350,173 acres were improved land. The value of all farm property was 75,123,970 dollars. Alfalfa is the most important crop; next to it, wheat and barley. In the south are grown figs, grapes, almonds, &c.; in the north potatoes, apples and other fruits. On January 1, 1917, there were 129,000 horses, 8,000 mules, 81,000 milch cows, and 864,000 other cattle, 1,632,000 sheep, and 80,000 swine. The wool clip in 1915 amounted to 5,985,000 pounds of wool. The national forests in the State have an area (1915) of 12,288,125 acres. There is considerable ostrich-farming (began in 1892). In 1910 Arizona had over 6,000 birds, being about 80% of total in the United States.

The mining industries of the State are important. The output of copper in 1914 was 393,017,400 pounds; lead, 7,502 short tons of merchant lead; gold, 202,167 fine ounces; silver, 4,377,994 fine ounces. The quarries in 1914 yielded granite, sandstone and limestone to the total value of 50,251 dollars. Tungsten, asbestos, quicksilver, zinc are (less or more) worked in the Territory. Total value of mineral output in 1913, 71,429,705 dollars; in 1914, 80,391,272 dollars.

The capital invested in manufacturing industries in the State in 1910 amounted to 32,873,000 dollars; the raw material used cost 33,600,000 dollars, and the output was valued at 50,257,000 dollars. By far the most important of the industries is copper smelting and refining, for which there were 8 establishments with a capital of 21,487,000 dollars, employing an average number of 3,129 wage-earners, using material costing 12,486,782 dollars, and giving an output valued at 29,242,000 dollars. Other industries are car construction and repair by railway companies showing an output worth 2,394,000 dollars; lumber and timber working, and flour and grist milling with an output of 1,082,000 dollars.

The lower course of the Colorado river is the only navigable waterway of the State. In 1915 there were 2,359 miles of steam railway, the principal lines being the Southern Pacific, the Santa Fé Pacific, and the Santa Fé Prescott and Phoenix. There are 57 miles of electric railway.

In 1915 there were 3 savings banks in the State with 4,206 depositors, who had to their credit 1,906,367 dollars, making an average of 453.24 dollars to each depositor.

ARKANSAS.

Government.—The State was admitted into the Union on June 15, 1836. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 35 members, elected for four years, partially renewed every two years, and a House of Representatives of 100 members elected for two years. The Sessions are biennial and limited to 60 days unless extended by a two-thirds vote of each House. Senators and Representatives must be citizens, the former 25 years of age and the latter 21, and both must have resided in the State two years, and in the county or district one year next before election. The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and seven Representatives.

Governor.—Charles H. Brough (1917-19) (4,000 dollars).;

Secretary of State.—T. J. Torral.

The State is divided into 75 counties. The State Capital is Little Rock.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area 53,335 square miles (810 square miles being water). Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 1,739,723.

Years	Population
	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per Sq. Mile
1860	324,191	111,259	435,450	8.3
1890	819,094	309,117	1,128,211	21.5
1900	944,708	366,856	1,311,564	25.0
1910	1,131,858	442,891	1,574,449	30.0

In 1910 the population by birth and sex was :—

	White		Negro	Asiatic	Indian
	Native.	Foreign.
Male	575,813	10,607	223,323	68	215
Female	538,304	6,302	219,568	4	245
Total	1,114,117	16,909	442,891	72	460

Of the foreign born 5,813 were German.

The population in 1910 was 1,574,449 (810,025 males and 764,424 females).

Little Rock (capital) had a population estimated at 57,343 in 1916; Fort Smith, 28,638; Pine Bluff, 17,447; Hot Springs, 17,238. Of the total population in 1910, 12·9 per cent. was urban.

The most numerous religious bodies in the State are Baptist, Methodist, Roman Catholic, Disciples of Christ, and Presbyterian, in the order named.

The State has a full public school system under which separate schools are provided for white and black children. No child under 14 can be employed in a manufacturing establishment unless he attends school 12 weeks each year and can read and write English.

In 1914 the public schools had 10,361 teachers and 635,462 enrolled pupils; 2 public normal schools had 19 teachers and 173 students. Total expenditure on education (1914), 5,833,009 dollars. The University of Arkansas, founded in 1872 at Fayetteville, had, in 1913, 142 professors and 842 students. There are a large Baptist college (Onachita College at Arkadelphia, founded in 1886) with 31 professors and 358 students, a Presbyterian college (Arkansas College, founded in 1872 at Batesville) with 10 professors and 140 students, and a Methodist Episcopal college (Hendria College, founded in 1884 at Conway) with 12 professors and 220 students. Philander Smith College, established in 1877, at Little Rock (for coloured students) had 14 professors and 108 men and 136 women students.

Charity.—Within the State are 27 benevolent institutions (hospital homes, &c.). On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 534, being 33·9 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 1,307, being 83 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—The total receipts and expenditure for the year ending September 30, 1915, were :—

	Dollars.
Cash Balance, Oct. 1, 1914 . . .	2,242,019
Receipts, 1914-1915 . . .	3,798,270
Total . . .	6,040,289
Disbursements, 1914-1915 . . .	4,161,792
Balance, Sept. 30, 1915 . . .	1,878,497

The State debt on June 30, 1915, amounted to 1,202,641 dollars, consisting of 3 per cent. interest-bearing bonds. The assessed value of real and personal property was 449,113,260 dollars. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders, the State has a defaulted debt estimated at from 9,000,000 to 12,000,000 dollars.

The militia, or State Guard, with headquarters at Little Rock, consists of artillery and infantry; total strength (June 30, 1916), 81 officers and 834 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Arkansas is an agricultural State. In 1910 the total farm area was 14,891,356 acres, of which 7,698,343 was improved land. The value of all farm property was 400,089,303 dollars. In the north maize (45,135,000 bushels in 1916), wheat (2,040,000 bushels), oats, potatoes, hay and forage crops are grown; in the south, cotton and tobacco. For 1916 the cotton area was 2,635,000 acres, and the yield 1,145,000 bales. In the north-west, fruits, especially apples and peaches, are grown. The cultivation of roses (for perfumes) is pursued locally. Live stock on January 1, 1917, comprised 275,000 horses, 250,000 mules, 402,000 milch cows, 550,000 other cattle, 124,000 sheep, and 1,575,000 swine. The wool clip in 1915 yielded 406,000 pounds of wool. The national forests in Arkansas in 1915 had an area of 1,169,379 acres.

The State has a large coal area, the output from which in 1914 was 1,836,540 short tons of coal, valued at 3,158,168 dollars. Manganese ores and lead are found. Arkansas produces whetstones (from nevaculite). It also produces bauxite (for aluminium); the phosphate rock deposits are little worked. The quarries yield limestone, sandstone, granite, and slate, besides asphalt, mineral waters, and natural gas. Value of total mineral output in 1913, 6,780,760 dollars; in 1914, 5,785,199 dollars.

Of the industries the cutting and working of timber is the most important, (1,697 establishments) the State having a forest area of 25,600,000 acres. Arkansas, according to the census of manufactures of 1910, has 2,925 manufacturing establishments employing 3,293 salaried officials, and 44,982 wage-earners. Their united capital amounted to 70,174,000 dollars, the cost of materials used in a year to 34,935,000 dollars, and the value of output in a year 74,916,000 dollars. Statistics of 6 leading industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 490.

The foreign trade of the State is carried on through the port of New Orleans, cotton and lumber transported down the Mississippi being the chief exports. In 1912, 1,150 vessels of a tonnage of 2,210,208 entered the port and 1,207 of a tonnage of 2,508,448 cleared. The total imports at this port in 1912 amounted to 16,670,900*L.*, and the exports to 34,163,274*L.* In 1915 there were in the State 5,407 miles of railway and 134 miles of electric railway.

The bank clearings in New Orleans for three years were as follows: 1912, 1,031,673,000 dollars; in 1913, 1,002,063,000 dollars; and in 1914, 974,437,000 dollars.

CALIFORNIA.

Constitution and Government.—California, though unexplored and practically unknown to Europeans, was from its discovery down to 1846 politically associated with Mexico. On July 5, 1846, the American flag was hoisted at Monterey, and a proclamation was issued declaring California to be a portion of the United States, and on February 2, 1849, by the treaty of Guadalupe, the territory was formally ceded by Mexico to the United States, and was admitted to the Union September 9, 1850.

The State Legislature is composed of the Senate of forty members, elected for terms of four years—half the number being elected each two years—and the Assembly, eighty members, elected for two years. Regular sessions are held once in two years.

The qualifications for eligibility to the Senate or Assembly are citizenship of the State for three years and residence in the district for one year. Women have voted and been eligible for election on the same terms as men since 1911.

California is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 11 Representatives.

AREA AND POPULATION—RELIGION AND INSTRUCTION 493

Governor.—Hiram W. Johnson, 1915-19 (10,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—F. C. Jordan.

California is divided into fifty-eight counties, one of which—San Francisco—has a combined county and city government. In each county government the legislative authority is vested in a board of five members elected from districts. The seat of the State Government is at Sacramento.

Area and Population.—Area 158,297 square miles (2,645 square miles being water). Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 2,938,654.

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was as follows:

1870	555,975	4,272	560,247	3·6
1890	1,202,076	11,322	1,213,398	7·8
1900	1,474,008	11,045	1,485,053	9·5
1910	2,355,904	21,645	2,377,549	15·3

In 1910 the population by sex and race was :—

	White.	Negro.	Chinese.	Japanese.	Indian.
Male	1,232,990	11,303	33,003	35,116	8,356
Female	1,026,682	10,342	3,245	6,240	8,015
Total	2,259,672	21,645	36,248	41,356	16,371

Of the total population in 1910, 1,322,978 were males, and 1,054,571 were females ; and 61·8 per cent. was urban.

There are about 25 Indian reservations in the State, their total area (1915) being 672 square miles, with a population of 15,034.

Three-fourths of the population of California are of American birth. Of the 586,432 persons of foreign birth in 1910, 76,305 were German, 52,475 Irish, 48,667 English, 13,694 Scotch, 12,676 Canadian, 17,390 French, 63,601 Italian, and 26,210 Swedish, with a sprinkling of Portuguese, Swiss, Russians, and Armenians.

In 1916 the estimated population of the larger cities was : San Francisco, 463,516 ; Los Angeles, 503,812 ; Oakland, 198,604 ; Sacramento, 66,895 ; Berkeley, 57,653 ; San Diego, 53,330. In 1915 the death-rate in cities was 14·1 and in rural districts 13·0 per 1,000 of the population.

Religion and Instruction.—In the matter of religious association all churches are represented in California, the Roman Catholic being much stronger than any other single church ; next are Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, and Congregationalists.

Education is compulsory for children 8-15 years of age for at least five months in the year. In the State elementary schools there were, in 1915-16, 423,562 enrolled pupils (221,388 boys and 202,174 girls), with 13,318 teachers. In 1915-16, the 280 public high schools had 3,999 teachers and 95,405 pupils (45,986 boys and 49,419 girls) ; eight State normal schools had 278 teachers and 4,902 students. In the same period 20,721 pupils (10,300 boys and 10,421 girls), with 543 teachers, were enrolled in the public kindergartens. The total expenditure for education was (1916) 36,332,967.37 dollars.

There are in California two great universities—the State University, or University of California, at Berkeley (established in 1868) and Leland Stanford Junior University. The former comprises the colleges of letters and science, commerce, mechanics, mining, civil engineering, chemistry and agriculture, as well as the Lick Astronomical Department. In 1915–16 the University had at Berkeley 760 professors and teachers with 11,188 students. Leland Stanford Junior University near Palo Alto was chartered in 1885, and opened its doors to students in 1891. An endowment, now amounting to 20,000,000 dollars in interest-bearing funds, besides large landed estates, was given by Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford in memory of their son. In 1916 it had 229 professors and 2,016 students. The University of Southern California at Los Angeles (Meth. Episcopal) had 410 instructors and 3,787 students (1916). There are several other prosperous colleges in the State.

California is the only State in the American Union having a comprehensive library system, at the head of which stands the State Library at Sacramento with about 275,000 volumes (including the Sutro Branch at San Francisco).

Charity.—In the State there are 153 benevolent institutions. On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 4,646, being 195.4 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 4,155, being 174.8 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—For two years ending June 30, 1916, the receipts and disbursements of the General Fund into which all moneys pass, not specifically appropriated to other funds, and from which the ordinary expenses of State Government are met (exclusive of those chargeable against the School Fund) were :—

	1914-15 Dollars	1915-16 Dollars
Cash in hand, July 1 . . .	3,627,753	3,235,803
Total Receipts . . .	17,622,102	23,670,787
Total . . .	21,249,855	26,906,590
Total Disbursements . . .	18,014,052	21,600,106
Cash in hand, June 30. . .	3,235,803	5,306,484

The assessed value of taxable property in 1916 was 3,421,268,223 dollars. The net bonded debt of the State amounted to 43,013,500 dollars on June 30, 1916.

The National Guard of California consists of 3 regiments of infantry, 4 troops of cavalry, a coast artillery corps, a medical department, 1 company of signalmen, and 11 divisions of Naval Militia. The number enrolled in the National Guard on Nov. 14, 1916, was 4,976 enlisted men and 352 officers, while the Naval Militia had 882 men and 68 officers.

The Mare Island Navy Yard, the most important of the Federal naval establishments on the Pacific coast, is situated in California about 25 miles north of San Francisco, and there are United States Army posts at San Francisco, Benicia, Monterey, and San Diego.

Agriculture and Forestry.—At the date of the last Federal census (1910) there were 88,197 farms, comprising 27,931,444 acres, of which 11,389,894 acres were improved. The value of farms was 1,614,694,584 dollars, and the value of the annual product 131,690,606 dollars. Total forest area (1915) is 19,866,203 acres. California is the only State in which the best European varieties of grapes are successfully cultivated, and this gives great importance to the wine product. Extending seven hundred miles from north to south, and being intersected by several ranges of mountains, California has almost every variety of climate, from the very wet to the very dry, and from the temperate to the semi-tropical. Irrigation is extensively practised, being necessary in the more arid districts and beneficial in a larger area.

The wheat industry has declined in relative importance, while horticulture has made rapid strides. The cereal crops in 1916 were maize, 2,048,000 bushels; wheat, 5,600,000 bushels; oats, 6,500,000 bushels; barley, 33,320,000 bushels. Apples, pears, peaches, figs, apricots, plums, grapes, oranges, lemons, and other fruits are grown in vast quantities. The dry wine production in the year 1915 was about 21,571,000 gallons; sweet wine, about 16,868,374 gallons. Olives, honey, hops, walnuts, and almonds are also largely produced.

The beet sugar production in 1915 was 390,686,000 pounds, and the total value of dairy products was 7,675,468*l*. On January 1, 1917, the farm animals were 468,000 horses, 70,000 mules, 591,000 milch cows, 1,636,000 other cattle, 2,524,000 sheep, and 994,000 swine. The wool clip (1915) produced 11,590,000 pounds of wool. There are 9 ostrich farms in the State.

Mining, Manufactures, etc.—Since the discovery of gold in 1848, California has produced 1,500,000,000 dollars' worth of gold, and the output, which had fallen off very greatly, shows a tendency again to increase. In 1914 the gold output was 999,113 fine ounces, valued at 20,653,496 dollars. In the same year the silver output amounted to 1,471,859 fine ounces, valued at 813,938 dollars. Other mining products were copper, 30,507,692 pounds (4,057,523 dollars), and 1,757 short tons of lead (154,631 dollars). The output of quicksilver in 1913 was 15,591 flasks (of 75 pounds net), valued at 627,228 dollars. The asphalt output of the State was 259,972 short tons, valued at 2,057,725 dollars. California produces more petroleum than any other State of the Union; in 1914 the output reached 99,775,327 barrels, valued at 48,066,096 dollars. Other mineral products were granite and stone, &c., valued at 4,610,781 dollars; Portland cement, 5,004,633 barrels, valued at 6,698,905 dollars; the clay products of California (1914) were valued at 4,461,681 dollars. From California comes nearly all the borax produced in the United States. The output in 1914 was 62,400 short tons, valued at 1,464,400 dollars. Other mineral products are pyrite, 71,272 long tons (235,129 dollars); salt, 1,100,443 barrels (856,861 dollars); mineral waters sold, 2,282,569 gallons (497,923 dollars); magnesite, 11,293 short tons, value 124,223 dollars. Bismuth, asbestos, manganese, lithium, tungsten, chromium, infusorial earth, ochre, and a great variety of precious stones are found in the State. The value of all the minerals produced in 1913 was 100,791,369 dollars; in 1914, 101,087,140 dollars.

In California in 1910 there were 7,659 manufacturing establishments with an aggregate capital of 537,134,000 dollars, employing 18,203 salaried officials and 115,296 wage-earners, using materials costing 325,238,000 dollars, and giving an output worth 529,761,000 dollars. Statistics of the more important industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 494.

The lack of an abundant supply of coal for fuel has been a drawback to manufacturing progress, but this is being overcome through the abundance and cheapness of petroleum, which has taken the place of coal in practically all industrial establishments. At the same time there has been a great development of long-distance electric-power transmission. California has great numbers of torrential mountain streams, which are utilised to generate electricity, which is transmitted a hundred or a hundred and fifty miles to the coast cities.

The coast and river fisheries are important, giving employment to 5,000 persons. A year's catch is thirty to forty million pounds, worth about 4,000,000 dollars. Salmon is the most valuable variety of fish taken, but as many as one hundred and thirty different varieties of fish are found in the markets of San Francisco.

Commerce and Transportation.—The chief commercial port of California is San Francisco, through which in 1915 the imports amounted to the value of 16,667,627*l.*, and the exports to 16,102,478*l.* Among the domestic exports are dairy products and eggs, hops, and lumber. In 1915 5,717 vessels of an aggregate tonnage amounting to 7,486,683 tons entered the port and 912 vessels of 7,649,181 tons cleared. The trade with China, Japan, and the Australasian Islands is conducted by several lines of steamers, British, German, and Japanese, and there is keen competition for the Pacific trade.

Railways have been built in California to the extent of 8,450 miles (1915) for steam roads and about 3,232 miles for electric railways. San Francisco is now the terminus of four trans-continental railways.

In June, 1915, there were 130 savings banks in the State, with 984,105 depositors who had to their credit 467,839,359 dollars, being 475·39 dollars to each depositor.

British Consul-General at San Francisco.—A. C. Ross, C.B.

British Consul.—Wellesley Moore.

There are British Vice-Consuls at San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego.

Government.—The State was admitted into the Union on Aug. 1, 1876. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 35 members elected for four years, one-half retiring every two years, and of a House of Representatives of 65 members elected for two years. Sessions are biennial. Eligible to either House are all citizens of the United States male and female 25 years of age and 12 months resident in the district for which they seek election. Qualified as electors are all persons male and female (except criminals and insane) 21 years of age who are citizens of the United States, and have resided in the State for 12 months immediately preceding the election.

Governor.—Julius C. Gunter, 1917-18 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—James A. Pulliam.

The State sends to the Federal Congress two Senators and 4 Representatives.

The State is divided into 63 counties. The State Capital is Denver. The Indian reservations had an area in 1915 of 618 square miles.

Area and Population.—Area 103,948 square miles, of which 290 square miles is water. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 962,060.

CONNECTICUT.

Government.—Connecticut has been an organised commonwealth since 1637. In 1639 a written constitution was adopted which, it is claimed, was the first in the history of the world formed by a social compact. This was confirmed by a charter from Charles II. in 1662, and replaced in 1818 by a State Constitution, framed that year by a constitutional convention. Connecticut was one of the thirteen original States of the Union.

The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. All male citizens (with necessary exceptions) 21 years of age, resident in the State for a year and in the town for six months preceding the election, have the right of suffrage provided that they can read the Constitution in English. The Senate at present consists of 35 members, the House of Representatives of 258 members. Members of each House are elected for the term of two years, and each receives 300 dollars for that term. Legislative sessions are biennial.

Governor:—Marcus H. Holcomb, 1917–19 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary:—Frederick L. Perry.

The State is represented in the Federal Congress by two Senators and five Representatives. For local administration the State is divided into eight counties, which are sub-divided into towns within which are cities and boroughs. The State Capital is Hartford.

Area, Population, and Instruction.—Area 5,004 square miles, of which 145 square miles is water area. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 1,244,479.

DELAWARE.

Government.—Delaware is one of the thirteen original States of the Union. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 17 members elected for four years and a House of Representatives of 35 members elected for two years. Senators must be 27 years of age, and Representatives 24; both must be citizens who have resided three years in the State, and one year in the electoral district immediately preceding the election.

With necessary exceptions all citizens, registered as voters, who have resided in the State one year, in the county three months, and in the district 30 days next preceding the election have the right to vote. But no person of 21 years of age has the right to vote unless he is able to read English and to write his name; United States soldiers and sailors merely stationed in the State are not considered resident.

Delaware is represented in Congress by two Senators and one Representative.

Governor.—John G. Townsend, 1917–21. (4,000 dollars.)

Secretary of State.—George H. Hall.

The State capital is Dover (population 3,720 in 1910). Delaware is divided into three counties.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area 2,370 square miles, of which 405 square miles is water. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 213,380.

Years	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per sq. mile

Female . .	83,715	15,170	—	2	98,887
Total . .	171,102	31,181	34	5	202,322

The foreign-born (1910) numbered 17,420, of whom 2,893 were Irish, 2,572 German, 1,555 English, and 2,893 Italian.

The largest city in the State is Wilmington, with an estimated population of 94,265 in 1916. Other towns (1915), Dover, 3,720; Milford, 2,603. Of the total population in 1910, 48·0 per cent. was urban.

The most numerous denominations of the State are, Methodist, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and Baptist.

The State has free public schools and compulsory school attendance, separate schools being provided for white and coloured children. In 1915, the 412 public schools had 722 teachers (124 male and 598 female), and 25,022 enrolled pupils (13,024 boys and 11,998 girls). Total expenditure on education (1915), 174,315 dollars. The State has two normal schools, agricultural and mechanical colleges and at Newark, Delaware College, founded in 1834, having, in 1916, 43 professors and 312 students. A college for coloured students at Dover has 6 professors and 136 students.

Charity.—The State has a hospital and an industrial school for girls. It grants assistance to indigent soldiers and sailors, and contributes to institutions for the support and training of the deaf, dumb, and blind outside the State.

In each county the sole charge of the poor and of almshouses is in the hands of trustees of the poor. They appoint the overseer of their almshouse, who must provide employment for the inmates. County liability for support of paupers is determined by settlement, which is obtained in various ways (by the applicant having held public office for a year, having paid poor taxes for any two years, having paid a rent of at least 50 dollars for a year, &c.). Parents and grand-parents are liable for support of pauper children, and vice versa. There is a penalty for bringing paupers into a county.

Finance, Defence.—For the year 1915 the aggregate receipts and disbursements of the State General Fund were :—

	1915 Dollars.
Balance in January, 1915 . . . . .	24,128

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The District of Columbia is the seat of Government of the United States, and consists of an area of about 70 square miles which was ceded by the State of Maryland to the United States as a site for the National Capital. It was established under the authority and direction of Acts of Congress approved July 16, 1790, and March 3, 1791, which were passed to give effect to a clause in the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States, giving Congress the power :—

‘To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased, by the consent of the legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings.’

The authority of the United States over it became vested on the first Monday of December, 1800.

The local affairs of the District have been managed by a number of distinct forms of government. From its inception until June, 1802, they were administered by Commissioners appointed by the President of the United States ; from that date until July 1, 1871, the local government consisted of a Mayor, and Boards of Aldermen and Common Council, similar to those in other cities. A territorial form of government was established in the District on June 30, 1871, with a Governor and Legislative Assembly and a Board of Public Works as its main features, and continued until June 20, 1874, when it was succeeded by a temporary board of three Commissioners appointed by the President of the United States, which in turn was supplanted on July 1, 1878, by the present form of local government.

This government is a municipal corporation, and is administered by a board of three Commissioners having in general equal powers and duties. Two of these Commissioners are appointed from civil life by the President of the United States, and confirmed by the Senate of the United States, for a term of three years each. The other Commissioner is detailed from time to time by the President of the United States from the Engineer Corps of the United States Army. This Commissioner is selected from among the captains or officers of higher grade having served at least fifteen years in the Corps of Engineers of the Army of the United States. The Commissioners are in a general way vested with jurisdiction covering all the ordinary features of municipal government. Congress has, by sundry statutes, empowered them to make and enforce reasonable and usual police regulations for the protection of lives, health, quiet, &c., of all persons, and the protection of all property within the District, and other regulation of a municipal nature. They have also been constituted a "Public Utilities Commission."

Secretary to the Board of Commissioners.—Daniel J. Donovan.

The area of the District of Columbia originally was about ten miles square, but by the retrocession to the State of Virginia, in the year 1846, of the portion derived from that State, was reduced to 69,245 square miles, 60.01 of which are land.

The population in 1800 numbered 14,093; in 1820, 33,039; in 1840, 43,712; in 1860, 75,080; in 1880, 177,624; in 1900, 278,718; in 1910, 331,069; in 1914, 353,378, of whom 101,339 were of the negro race or of negro descent, generically denominated 'colored.' Estimated population on July 1, 1917, 365,000.

A portion of the District of Columbia embracing 6,654 acres is known as the City of Washington. But that name is, and has been since June 30, 1871, a geographical distinction only, as the territory it includes is not a municipality separate from the rest of the District, but is subject to the same government in every respect.

The most numerous religious bodies are: Roman Catholic, Baptist, Methodist, Protestant Episcopal, and Presbyterian.

The public schools of the District in 1916 had 1,214 white teachers and 41,082 white pupils, and 573 negro teachers and 18,444 negro or colored pupils. Total number of pupils, 59,526. There were 7 public high schools with 301 teachers and 6,908 pupils; and 26 private schools with 2,206 pupils. For the instruction of teachers there were 2 public normal schools. Total expenditure on education (1916), 3,520,237 dollars.

Superior education is given in Georgetown University, an institution under the management of the Jesuit Order, founded in 1795; it has 199 professors and 1,415 pupils: the George Washington University, non-sectarian, founded in 1821, has 234 professors and 1,973 students; the Howard University, principally engaged in the higher education of negroes, was founded in 1867, and has 115 professors and 1,500 pupils; the Catholic University, a post-graduate institution, was founded in 1884, and has 80 professors and 578 students.

On June 30, 1915, the almshouse of the District contained 293 pauper inmates.

The revenues of the District are derived from the general real property tax, taxes on corporations and companies, and licences for various businesses.

In 1916 the finance of the District of Columbia was as follows :—

	Dollars.
Balance, July 1, 1915 . . .	1,204,609
Receipts to July 1, 1916 . . .	16,201,401
Total . . .	17,406,010
Disbursements, 1916 . . .	14,183,619
Unexpended Balance, July 1, 1916. .	3,222,391

The net debt at the end of the year amounted to 5,469,799 dollars.

In 1916 the assessed valuation of the real property within the municipality amounted to 394,209,904 dollars; and of personal property to 52,564,563 dollars; total 446,774,467 dollars.

The District of Columbia has a militia force organised under an Act of Congress of March 1, 1889. It consists of cavalry, artillery, and infantry, with a total strength on June 30, 1916, of 2,452 officers and enlisted men, a naval force of 12 officers and 212 men.

The District has considerable industries, the products of which are mainly for local consumption. The United States census of manufactures in 1914 showed that (excluding government works) the capital invested in such industries amounted to 40,810,200 dollars; the salaried officials, superintendents, managers and clerks numbered 2,011; and the average number of wage earners employed during the year was 8,877; the raw material used cost 12,239,000 dollars, and the output was valued at 28,978,000 dollars.

On June 30, 1916, there were in the District 40 national banks, trust companies and savings banks. Their aggregate resources and liabilities balanced at 135,923,900 dollars. Their paid-in capital stock stood at 18,659,000 dollars; surplus funds at 10,503,000 dollars; individual deposits at 82,285,000 dollars; United States deposits at 3,868,000 dollars; national bank notes outstanding, 6,221,000 dollars; and loans and discounts at 67,432,000 dollars.

Within the District are 412 miles of electric street railway track.

FLORIDA.

Government.—On March 27, 1513, Florida was discovered by Juan Ponce de Leon, a Spanish soldier and adventurer, who landing on Easter Sunday (Pascua Florida or Feast of Flowers) called the place Florida. Florida was admitted into the Union in March 3, 1845. The present constitution dates from 1886. The State Legislature consists of a Senate of 32 members, and House of Representatives with 75 members. Sessions are held biennially, and are limited to 60 days. Senators are elected for four years, Representatives for two, the Senate being renewed by one-half very two years.

Governor.—Sidney J. Catts, 1917-21 (6,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—H. C. Crawford.

The State Capital is Tallahassee (population 5,018 in 1910). The State is divided into 52 counties.

Area, Population, Religion, Instruction.—Area 58,666 square miles, of which 3,805 square miles is water. The Indian reservations had an area in 1915 of 36 square miles, and a population of 578.

Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 893,493. Population in census years as follows:—

Years	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per sq. mile
1880	142,803	126,690	269,493	4.9
1900	297,812	230,730	528,542	9.6
1910	443,950	308,669	752,619	13.7
1915	559,787	360,394	921,618	15.7

<sup>1</sup> Including Indians and Asiatics.

In 1915 the population by sex and birth was as follows:—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indians	Total
Male . . .	291,684	187,295	---	---	478,979
Female . . .	268,103	173,099	---	---	441,202

Of the total, the foreign-born (1910) numbered 33,842, of whom 1,896 were from the West Indies, 2,917 from England, 2,442 from Germany, 4,538 from Italy, 1,698 from Canada, and 4,183 from Spain. The largest cities in the State are Jacksonville, with an estimated population of 76,101 in 1916 (census 1915, 66,850); Tampa, 53,886 (census 1915, 48,160); Pensacola, 26,272 (census 1915, 23,219); Key West, 21,724 (census 1915, 18,495). Of the total population in 1915, 44.2 per cent. was urban.

Of the church members of the State 41.6 per cent. are Baptist, and 37.2 per cent. Methodist. Others are chiefly Roman Catholics, Protestant Episcopalians, and Presbyterians.

Attendance at school is not compulsory. There are no provisions as to religious instruction in public schools. Separate schools are provided for white and coloured children.

In 1915 the 2,784 public elementary schools had 4,882 teachers (3,808 women) and 170,505 enrolled pupils. In 101 public high schools there were 322 teachers (192 women) and 7,769 pupils in 1915. Total expenditure on education (1915), 2,769,325 dollars. The State provides higher education in a University of the State of Florida at Gainesville (founded 1884) with (1916) 60 professors and 810 students, and a State College for Women (founded at Tallahassee in 1905), with 550 students; Rollins College at Winter Park (founded 1885) has 25 professors and 175 students. There is also the John B. Stetson (Baptist) University at De Land (founded in 1887), with 37 professors and 462 students.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 207, being 27.5 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 1836, being 243.9 per 100,000 of the population. Number of convicts in 1915, 1,082.

Finance, Defence.—For the year 1915 the receipts and disbursements amounted to the following sums :—

	Dollars
Balance Jan. 1, 1915 . . . . .	1,522,769
Receipts in 1915 . . . . .	3,382,806
Total . . . . .	4,905,575
Disbursements in 1915 . . . . .	3,655,525
Balance Jan. 1, 1916 . . . . .	1,250,050

In 1915 the public debt of the State consisted of refunding bonds to the amount of 601,567 dollars at three per cent. interest, all of which were held by State educational funds. The assessed value of real property for 1915 is 201,874,538 dollars ; for personal property, 47,022,648 dollars ; for railroads, 43,666,068 dollars, making a total for 1915 of 292,563,254 dollars.

The militia, called the Florida State troops, with its headquarters at Tallahassee, consists of infantry and artillery, with a total strength (June 30, 1916) of 85 officers and 1,181 men. The Federal authorities have naval stations at Key West and Pensacola.

Production and Industry.—Florida is largely a peninsula stretching from north to south, between the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico. The surface is generally level. No elevation exceeds 301 feet above the level of the sea. The climate is semi-tropical, but liable at times to severe frost which destroys the fruit crops. Agriculture is pursued generally in all parts of the State. In 1910 there were 50,016 farms, with a total acreage of 5,253,538, of which 1,805,408 acres were improved. Total value of all farm property in 1910, 143,183,183 dollars. The chief products are pineapples and oranges, the former fruit being grown almost nowhere else in the United States. Other crops are tobacco, 3,025,000 pounds in 1916 ; rice, 18,000 bushels in 1916 ; besides maize, oats, peas, and peanuts. In 1914 the cotton area was 195,000 acres, and the yield 75,000 bales. On January 1, 1917, the State had 60,000 horses, 31,000 mules, 119,000 sheep, 1,100,000 pigs, 141,000 milch cows, and 865,000 other cattle. Forests of valuable timber cover three-fourths of the State, and large quantities of pitch-pine are exported as well as oak timber for ship-building. Tar, turpentine, and rosin are prepared in increasing quantities. The total forest area on June 30, 1915, was 299,166 acres.

The chief mineral product is phosphate rock, 2,138,891 long tons (9,354,744 dollars) in 1914. Fullers' earth, lime, and mineral waters are also produced. The whole mineral output in 1913 was valued at 10,508,016 dollars ; in 1914, 8,497,688 dollars.

Florida, with its long coast line, has extensive fisheries, which, though not fully developed, are more important than those of any other Gulf State. The chief fishery products are shad, red snappers, mullet, turtles, and sponges, of which Florida has almost a monopoly. Pensacola is said to be the most important fresh fish market on the Gulf. From this port tar, resin, and turpentine are exported to the value of over 500,000*l.* sterling annually, and also cotton (1,806,000*l.*), tobacco, and phosphate produced in other States.

The manufacturing industries of Florida increased the value of their output from 50,298,290 dollars in 1905 to 72,890,000 dollars in 1910. The statistics for the chief industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 508.

The tobacco industries are prosperous, and Key West and Tampa compete with Cuba in the manufacture of fine cigars. In 1910 the output of spirit of turpentine was 13,809,785 gallons, and of rosin 1,555,749 barrels. In 1913-14 there were 5,795 industrial establishments in the State, in which 7,706,149 dollars were invested as capital.

The State has facilities for transportation both by land and water. A large trade is carried on through Pensacola, where the domestic exports were largely cottons; other merchandise being forest products, phosphate, tobacco, wheat, flour, &c. The harbour channel is now 30 feet deep at low tide. At Jacksonville harbour improvements are being carried out. In 1915 there were 5,251 miles of steam railway, and 193 miles of electric railway. The Atlantic Coast railway and the Louisville and Nashville railway run through the State. The Florida East Coast Railway extension to Key West was opened January 22nd, 1912. The U.S. Government is deepening the channel at Key West and making other improvements.

In 1915 there were 4 savings banks in the State, with 7,917 depositors who had to their credit 1,410,561 dollars, being 95.99 dollars to each depositor.

GEORGIA.

Government.—The colony of Georgia (so named from George II.) was founded in 1733. Georgia entered the Union as one of the thirteen original States.

The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 44 members and a House of Representatives of 184 members. Both Senators and Representatives are elected for two years. Legislative Sessions are annual and limited to 50 days. There is manhood suffrage, but residence and United States citizenship are required. The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and 11 Representatives.

Governor.—Hugh M. Dorsey, 1917-1919 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary.—Philip Cook.

Georgia is divided into 146 counties. The State Capital is Atlanta.

Area and Population.—Area 59,265 square miles, of which 540 square miles are water. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 2,856,065.

Years	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per sq. mile
1800	102,261	60,425	162,686	2.8
1880	817,047	725,133	1,542,180	26.1
1900	1,181,518	1,034,813	2,216,331	37.6
1910	1,432,234	1,176,987	2,609,121	44.4

In 1910 the population by sex and birth was :—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	724,488	580,263	218	50	1,305,019
Female . . .	707,314	596,724	19	45	1,304,102
Total . . .	1,431,802	1,176,987	237	95	2,609,121

Of the total population (1910) 15,072 were foreign-born, of whom 3,029 were from Germany, 1,655 from Ireland, 1,650 from England, and 3,224 from Russia. The largest cities in the State are Atlanta (capital) with estimated population (1916) of 190,558 ; Savannah, 68,805 ; Augusta, 50,245 ; Macon, 45,757 ; and Columbus, 25,950. Of the total population in 1910, 20·6 per cent. was urban.

Religion, Instruction.—Baptists and Methodists predominate, Baptists having more than half of the religious membership of the State.

No law making education compulsory has been passed. At the head of the State school system is a State School Commissioner elected by the people for two years. There is a county school Supervisor in each county. In 1915-16 the 7,000 public elementary schools had 615,044 enrolled pupils and 14,927 teachers, while the 500 public high schools had 40,000 pupils and 1,200 teachers. Three public normal schools had 150 teachers and 2,000 pupils in 1915. Total expenditure for education (1916), 6,500,000 dollars.

For higher education the more important State institutions are as follow :—

Begun	Institutions	Professors (1916)	Students (1916)
1801	University of Georgia, Athens . . .	63	701
1888	Georgia School of Technology . . .	24	409
1872	North Georgia Agricultural College . . .	14	210

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 813, being 31·2 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 4,994, being 191·4 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—The amounts received and disbursed in the year 1915 are stated as follows :—

	1915 Dollars
Balance, January 1, 1915 . . . . .	787,455
Receipts in 1915 . . . . .	6,384,875
Total, 1915 . . . . .	7,172,330
Disbursements, 1915 . . . . .	6,330,346

Balances, January 1, 1916 . . . . . 841,984

In January, 1915, the bonded debt of the State amounted to 6,534,202 dollars, including an unfunded debt of 90,202 dollars on which interest at seven per cent. per annum was paid to the University trustees. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders the State has a defaulted debt estimated at 13,000,000 dollars. The assessed valuation of real and personal property in 1912 amounted to 842,358,342 dollars.

The State militia, called the Georgia State Troops or the Georgia Volunteers, have their headquarters at Atlanta. They consist of Cavalry, Artillery, and Infantry, with a total strength on June 30, 1916, of 225 officers and 2,289 men. Georgia has also a Naval militia with 3 officers and 44 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—In 1910 there were 291,027 farms in the State, having an area of 26,953,413 acres, of which 12,298,017 acres were improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1910 was 580,546,381 dollars; 37 per cent. of the farms are operated by negroes, and 86 per cent. of negro farms are rented. The negro farmers raise little but cotton, in the production of which Georgia ranks second among the States, while it is the largest producer of sea-island cotton. For 1916 the cotton yield was 1,845,000 bales as against 1,909,000 bales in 1915. In the northern part of the State the cultivation of cereals is of importance, corn being grown on five times the area of other cereals. The yield of corn (maize) in the State in 1916 was 62,000,000 bushels. Oats and wheat are also grown, while rice is an important product of coast counties (16,000 bushels in 1916). The growth of sugar cane is increasing. Forests of pines, &c., cover 42,000 sq. miles. On January 1, 1917, the farm animals were 127,000 horses, 324,000 mules, 418,000 milch cows, 686,000 other cattle, 150,000 sheep, 2,585,000 swine.

The fisheries of the State are of some importance, especially the oyster and shad fisheries.

The State has considerable mineral resources, gold, silver, coal, iron, and manganese ores, iron pyrites, bauxite, graphite, lime, ochre, infusorial earth, natural cement, talc and soapstone, marble and other quarries, and mineral springs being worked. In 1914 the output of gold (from quartz and placer workings) amounted to 787 fine oz. (16,270 dollars), and of silver to 76 oz. (37 dollars). In 1914 coal was extracted to the amount of 168,498 short tons (239,462 dollars); stone to the value of 2,238,789 for granite, marble, and limestone. The marble of Georgia has a high reputation all over the States. The clay-working industries (bricks, tiles, pottery) in 1914 gave an output valued at 2,263,034 dollars. In 1914, 166,222 long tons of iron ore were extracted. The total mineral output in 1913, including iron ore but not pig iron, was valued at 6,525,792 dollars; in 1914, 5,695,084 dollars.

In 1910 Georgia had 4,792 manufacturing establishments with a total capital of 202,778,000 dollars, employing 118,036 persons (salaried and wage-earning), using material costing 116,970,000 dollars, and giving an output worth 202,863,000 dollars.

The chief manufacturing industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-Book for 1916, p. 511.

In 1909 there were 153 cotton mills, 36,355 looms and 1,791,334 spindles.

The means of transportation by sea and land are ample. The principal port is Savannah, which has 8 miles of river frontage, and which, by harbour improvements, is to be made accessible to vessels of large tonnage. The river is being deepened, and now has a mean low water depth of 26 feet, and a depth of 32 at high tide on the bar. From this port in 1913 the imports amounted to 1,056,7077. and the exports to 20,139,9487., chiefly cotton, cotton seed, and meal and cake of cotton seed, besides turpentine and lumber.

The railways in the State have a length (1915) of 7,427 miles, besides 485 miles of electric railway.

In 1915, Georgia had 22 savings banks with 43,331 depositors who had to their credit 11,015,503 dollars, being 254·22 dollars to each depositor.

British Consul at Savannah.—J. A. Donnelly.

There is a British Vice-Consul at Brunswick, Ga.

The Militia or National Guard of Idaho consists of a regiment of infantry containing 63 officers and 901 men on June 30, 1916.

Production and Industry.—A great part of the State is naturally arid, but extensive irrigation works have been carried out irrigating 3,266,386 acres, and there are now being constructed works to cost 18,811,000 dollars for the irrigation of 480,000 acres in the State. In 1910 the number of farms was 30,807, with a total area of 5,283,604 acres, of which 2,778,740 acres were improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1910, 305,317,185 dollars. The most important crop is wheat, to which, in 1916, 634,000 acres were devoted, the yield amounting to 15,071,000 bushels. Other crops in 1916 were oats, 13,330,000 bushels; barley, 7,410,000 bushels; besides potatoes and hay. Fruit and vegetables are also grown. There is an active live-stock industry, the number of horses on January 1, 1917, being 239,000; mules, 4,000; sheep, 3,195,000; milch cows, 130,000; other cattle, 418,000. The wool clip (1915) was 15,286,000 pounds. The State contains (1915) 17,868,826 acres of national forest.

The State has rich deposits of gold, silver, and other metals. About 7,000 miners are employed. In 1914 the output of gold amounted to 55,743 fine ounces of the value of 1,152,315 dollars; of silver, to 12,749,516 fine ounces of the value of 6,901,172 dollars; copper, 6,445,187 pounds (857,210 dollars); lead, 174,263 short tons (13,592,517 dollars); zinc, 21,006 short tons (2,142,634 dollars). Coal is mined, but not to a great extent; in 1914 the output was only 2,267 short tons (5,731 dollars). Iron, nickel, cobalt, mica, phosphate rock, antimony, tungsten, granite, sandstone, limestone and lime, pumice, and salt are worked more or less. Total value of mineral output in 1913, 24,565,826 dollars; in 1914, 24,913,223 dollars.

Besides the agricultural and mining industries the State has manufactures of considerable importance. In 1910 there were together 725 industrial establishments, employing a total of 9,909 persons, including 8,220 wage-earners, with a total capital of 32,477,000 dollars, cost of material being 9,920,000 dollars and value of output 22,400,000 dollars. The chief of these industries are the working of lumber and timber, (capital, 17,872,000 dollars; wage-earners, 5,212; cost of material, 3,345,000 dollars and value of product, 10,689,000 dollars), and flour and grist milling (capital, 2,038,000 dollars; wage-earners, 125; cost of material, 2,025,000 dollars, and value of product, 2,480,000 dollars). Within the State there are 260 lumber mills; one at Potlatch is said to be the largest in the world and can cut 750,000 feet daily. Idaho has also 46 flour mills.

The State has (1915) 2,791 miles of railway, besides 180 miles of electric railway track. The principal railways crossing the State are the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, and the Oregon Short Line. In 1915 (May 5), the Celilo Canal, on the Oregon side of the Columbia River, was opened and Idaho now has a seaport, Lewiston. Vessels can pass from the Pacific to Lewiston, a distance of 480 miles.

In 1915, there was 1 savings bank in the State with 2,113 depositors who had to their credit 183,414 dollars, being 86·80 dollars to each depositor.

Most of the white population are descended from the early French settlers. In 1910 the foreign-born numbered 51,782, of whom 20,233 were Italian (39·1 per cent.), 8,918 German, 5,302 French, 3,753 Irish, and 2,056 English. The largest city in the State is New Orleans with an estimated population of 371,747 in 1916. Other cities are Shreveport, 35,230; Baton Rouge (Capital), 17,176. Of the total population in 1910, 30·0 per cent. was urban.

Most of the Southern States are strenuously Protestant, but over 61 per cent. of the population of Louisiana are Roman Catholic. Of Protestants in the State, Baptists and Methodists are the most numerous, then Protestant Episcopalians and Presbyterians.

According to the State constitution no funds raised for the support of the public schools of the State shall be appropriated to or used for the support of any private or sectarian school. City school systems are under separate organization. In 1914-15 the elementary public schools (2,281 for white children and 1,152 for coloured) had 5,981 white and 1,252 coloured teachers and 213,201 white and 91,272 coloured enrolled pupils; 114 public high schools had 457 teachers and 17,408 pupils. The two public normal schools had 73 teachers and 1,626 students in 1915. Superior instruction is given in the Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College. The university was opened in 1860, and the college in 1874; on June 1, 1877, they were by law united into one and the same institution with its seat at Baton Rouge. In 1916 it had 96 professors and 1,669 students. Tulane University (founded in 1834) in New Orleans had, in 1916, 312 professors and 2,725 students. This university has State support to the extent of the remission of certain taxes. The Roman Catholics have Jefferson College at Convent with 19 professors and 180 students, and a University (Loyola University, founded 1904) at New Orleans with 120 professors and 305 students. The New Orleans University (established 1874) is for coloured persons. It had 23 instructors and 567 enrolled students in 1916. There is an Industrial Institute at Ruston and another at Lafayette. The State has also an institution for the deaf and dumb and another for the blind, both at Baton Rouge.

Louisiana has 56 benevolent institutions, most of which have been provided by private persons or ecclesiastical bodies. They comprise ten hospitals (four public), 25 orphanages, 17 homes for adults (two public), and three schools for the deaf and blind (two public).

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 187, being 11·3 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions, 2,400, being 144·9 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—For the year 1915 the receipts for all funds (including transfers and balances from former periods) and the disbursements were :—

	Dollars
Receipts, 1915 . . . .	8,735,237
Disbursements, 1915 . . . .	9,898,580

The bonded and floating debt of the State up to March 1, 1915, amounted to 10,991,500 dollars. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders the State has a defaulted debt estimated at 6 million dollars. The assessed valuation of property in 1915 amounted to 580,000,000 dollars.

The militia or State National Guard, with headquarters at Baton Rouge, consists of infantry, artillery, and cavalry, with a mounted signal corps, and had a total strength of 63 officers and 1,119 enlisted men on June 30, 1916. The naval militia has 22 officers and 315 enlisted men.

Production, Industry.—The surface of the State is chiefly a great plain sloping from north and north-east to the Mississippi delta. The State is divided into two parts, the uplands and the alluvial and swamp regions of the coast. A delta occupies about one-third of the total area. Louisiana surpasses the other States in extent of navigable waterways—3,782 miles. The Gulf coast line is 1,250 miles in length. The climate is semi-tropical, the summers being long and hot, the winters more severe than in corresponding latitudes. Agriculture is the leading industry.

In 1910 the State had 120,546 farms with an area of 10,439,481 acres, of which 5,276,016 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 301,220,988 dollars. The products and manufactures of Louisiana are very various. The chief crops in 1916 were corn, 2,134,000 acres, producing 44,814,000 bushels; rice grown on 443,300 acres, yielding 20,392,000 bushels; cane sugar, 503,525 acres, producing 656,913,708 lbs. For 1916 the cotton area was 1,203,000 acres, and the yield 440,000 bales. Oats, potatoes, sugar, rice, and tobacco are also grown, but not extensively. On January 1, 1917, the State contained 194,000 horses, 240,000 sheep, 1,584,000 swine, and 274,000 milch cows.

Louisiana has valuable fisheries. Oyster reefs extend almost continuously along the coast, and the oyster fisheries are the most valuable south of Virginia, the area suitable to planting and growing oysters being over 7,000 sq. miles.

Rich sulphur mines are found in Louisiana, and wells for the extraction of sulphur by means of hot water and air at the surface are in operation. In 1914 the petroleum output was 14,309,435 barrels (valued at 12,886,897 dollars). Another mineral worked is rock salt. Total mineral output in 1913, valued at 21,011,828 dollars; in 1914 at 21,896,025 dollars.

The manufacturing industries are chiefly those associated with the products of the State: sugar, lumber, cotton-seed, rice. In 1910 there were 2,516 manufacturing establishments which employed altogether 8,103 clerks, &c., and 76,165 wage-earners. The material used cost 134,865,000 dollars, and the output was valued at 223,949,000 dollars. The statistics (1910 census) of the more important industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 531.

Brewing, confectionery, printing, and other works are also prosperous.

A large international trade is carried on through the port of New Orleans, where in 1913 the imports amounted to 16,619,611 $\frac{1}{2}$ , and the exports to 35,615,714 $\frac{1}{2}$ . The exports consisted of cotton and cotton-seed products, wheat, flour, rice, and other produce.

The State has ample facilities for traffic, having, besides 24,900 miles of public roads, the Mississippi and other waterways, with 4,794 miles of navigable water. In 1915 the railways in the State had a length of 5,728 miles, besides 328 miles of electric railway track. The principal lines are operated by the Illinois Central, Queen and Crescent, Louisville and Nashville, Texas and Pacific, and the Southern Pacific systems. The telegraph systems had a mileage of pole, 1,080 miles; wire, 19,182 miles; cable, 66,362 miles. The telephone companies had mileage: pole, 3,125 miles; wire, 30,321 miles; cable, 6,250 miles.

In 1915, there were 11 savings banks in the State with 69,085 depositors having to their credit 17,066,502 dollars, which is 247.03 dollars to each depositor. The bank clearings at New Orleans in 1915 amounted to 898,763,000 dollars.

The foreign-born population numbered 110,133, of whom 40,905 were English Canadian, 35,013 French Canadian, 7,890 Irish and 5,645 English. Within the State, especially in the north, there is a strong French and French-speaking element.

The largest city in the State is Portland with an estimated population of 63,867 in 1916. Other cities and towns (with population in 1916) are : Lewiston, 27,809; Bangor, 26,659; Biddeford, 17,665; Auburn, 16,398; Augusta, 14,170; Bath, 9,396; Waterville, 12,702. Of the total population in 1910, 55.9 per cent. was urban.

The largest religious body is Roman Catholic; then come Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodists, and Protestant Episcopalians.

Education is free for pupils from 5 to 21 years of age, and compulsory from 5 to 14. Cities and towns have elective school attendance committees. In 1916 the 4,696 public elementary schools had 530 male and 5,473 female teachers and 133,036 enrolled pupils. The 195 public high schools had 255 male and 454 female teachers and 14,650 pupils. For the training of teachers in 1916 there were five public Normal Schools with 79 teachers and 699 students. The University of Maine, founded in 1868 at Orono, has 155 professors and teachers and 1,269 students. It is endowed by and receives large appropriations from the State. Bowdoin College, founded in 1794 at Brunswick, has 89 professors and 457 students. Bates College at Lewiston has 32 professors and 472 students, and Colby College at Waterville has 30 professors and 440 students.

Public schools are mainly supported by appropriations from the towns or cities and from the State, and by the income from school funds. Total expenditure on education in 1916, 4,108,483 dollars.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 945, being 127·3 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions, 730, being 98·3 per 100,000 of the population.

The bonded debt in 1916 amounted to 2,502,932 dollars.

In 1916 the assessed value of real property amounted to 401,299,430 dollars, and of personal property to 97,208,419 dollars.

The National Guard of Maine contains 1,809 enlisted men (coast artillery corps and infantry) and 138 officers (Oct. 24, 1916). The Naval Militia has 17 officers and 146 men.

Production, Commerce, Railways.—The products of Maine are derived chiefly from agriculture, forestry, quarrying, and fisheries. The State has, besides other attractions, excellent hunting and fishing, and is a favourite summer resort. The soil is not generally fertile, an important exception being that of the Aroostook valley, which is well adapted for the growing of fruit and vegetables. In 1910 the State contained 60,016 farms with a total acreage of 6,296,859 acres, of which 2,360,657 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 199,271,998 dollars. The chief crops are oats (1916), 6,120,000 bushels; maize, 645,000 bushels; buckwheat, potatoes, and hay. On January 1, 1917, the farm animals comprised 109,000 horses, 162,000 milch cows, 110,000 other cattle, 157,000 sheep, and 100,000 swine. The wool clip in 1915 amounted to 932,000 pounds of wool.

The commercial mineral products of Maine are, considering the size and population of the State, few in number and of minor importance. Only in one mineral, feldspar, has Maine ranked first during the last 3 years. The output in 1914 was 30,063 short tons; in 1913, 36,248 short tons.

In 1914 the quarries yielded granite to the value of 1,723,032 dollars; slate, 277,419 dollars. In the State there are mineral springs, which in 1913 yielded 1,082,631 gallons, valued at 333,234 dollars. The value of the total mineral output in 1914 was estimated at 3,975,890 dollars; in 1913 at 4,429,584 dollars.

In the State are large granite works, cotton mills, paper mills, manufactures of clothing, &c. In 1910, according to the census of manufactures of that year, the State had 3,546 manufacturing establishments employing all together 4,860 salaried officials and 79,955 wage-earners. Their aggregate capital amounted to 202,260,000 dollars; the cost of raw materials in a year to 97,101,000 dollars, and the value of a year's output to 176,029,000 dollars. Statistics of some of the leading industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 535.

The principal seaport is Portland, through which in 1907 merchandise to the value of 1,272,863 dollars was imported, and merchandise to the value of 11,681,196 dollars exported. The exports were meat products, cattle, wheat and maize.

In 1915 there were 2,301 miles of railway and 518 miles of electric railway within the State. The railways are connected with the Canadian railway systems.

In December, 1915, there were 48 savings banks in the State, with 238,300 depositors, having to their credit 106,523,164 dollars, being 447.01 dollars to each depositor.

At Portland there is a British vice-consul.

Total . . . . .	1,062,639	232,250	402	55	1,295,346

Of the total population 104,174 were foreign born, of whom 36,652 were from Germany (35·2 per cent.), 9,701 from Ireland, 27,532 from Russia and Russian Poland, and 5,197 from England. In 1913, 41,693 immigrants arrived at the Port of Baltimore, the largest number (24,965) coming from Russia.

The largest city in the State and also the chief manufacturing and commercial centre, is Baltimore, with an estimated population in 1916 of 589,621. Other cities, with estimated population in 1916, are Cumberland, 26,074 ; Hagerstown, 25,679 ; Frederick 11,112 ; Annapolis (Capital), 8,760. Of the total population in 1910, 50·8 per cent. was urban. Over two-fifths of the population of the State live within the corporate limits of the City of Baltimore.

The prevailing forms of religion are Protestant, but Roman Catholics have 35·3 per cent. of the Church membership in the State.

Education is compulsory for children 8 to 12 years of age in the entire State since September 1, 1916.

In 1915, there were in the 2,476 public elementary and high schools of the State, 6,222 teachers (924 males and 5,298 females), of whom 974 (222 males and 752 females) were coloured, and 220,480 enrolled pupils, of whom 51,242 were coloured. The State had 4 normal schools, with 27 teachers and 469 pupils in 1915. The total expenditure on education in 1915 was 5,613,949 dollars.

The most important institution for higher education is Johns Hopkins University, organised in 1876. It is non-sectarian, and in 1913 had 275 instructors and 2,500 students. Its hospital with educational features is famous. Goucher College, formerly the Woman's College of Baltimore, founded in 1888, has 45 instructors and 613 students. Other institutions are the Peabody Institute for the Education of Music, the Maryland Institute School of Art and Design, Walter's Art Gallery, Maryland University, Maryland Agricultural College with 42 professors and 315 students ; the Princess Anne Academy for Coloured Youths, with 4 teachers and 47 students.

The Enoch Pratt Free Library has 11 branches, and a recent donation made by Andrew Carnegie of 500,000 dollars provides for 20 additional branches.

For charitable purposes the State contains (besides almshouses and asylums for the insane) 117 institutions nearly all provided by private or ecclesiastical charity. They comprise 32 hospitals (one public), 10 dispensaries (two public), 38 orphanages, three day nurseries, 30 homes for adults, and four schools for the deaf and blind (two public).

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 1,681, being 129.8 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 2,146, being 165.7 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—For the year ending September 30, 1915, the total receipts and disbursements were as follows:—

	Dollars.
Balance, Sept. 30, 1914 . . . . .	1,076,962
Receipts, 1914-15 . . . . .	11,015,497
Total . . . . .	12,092,459
Disbursements, 1914-15 . . . . .	11,263,751
Balance, Sept. 30, 1915 . . . . .	828,708

On September 30, 1915, the gross debt of the State amounted to 22,785,880 dollars, and the net debt to 15,075,296 dollars. In 1915 the assessed valuation of real and personal property amounted to 1,093,619,356 dollars.

The Militia or National Guard consists of infantry, cavalry, a signal corps, and a hospital corps; total, 168 officers and 2,824 enlisted men (on June 30, 1916). The naval militia has 21 officers and 188 enlisted men. The Federal authorities have a navy recruiting rendezvous and a navy pay office at Baltimore. The United States Naval Academy, for the education of boys intended for the Federal naval service, is at Annapolis.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is an important industry in the State, about 82 per cent. of the area being in farms mostly worked by their owners. In 1910 there were 48,923 farms with an area of 5,057,140 acres, of which 3,354,767 acres was improved land. The total value of farm property in 1910 was 286,167,028 dollars. The chief crops are wheat (640,000 acres, producing 10,240,000 bushels in 1916), maize (27,300,000 bushels, valued at 24,297,000 dollars), hay, potatoes (43,000 acres, 4,085,000 bushels, valued at 5,433,000 dollars in 1917), vegetables and fruit. In 1916 the yield of tobacco was 19,635,000 pounds, valued at 3,142,000 dollars. Maryland canned 36.4 per cent. of the tomatoes put up in the United States in 1915. The dairy output in 1910 was worth 4½ million dollars; the poultry products, 3,650,000 dollars. The flour mills in 1910 gave an output of 1,015,866 barrels of wheat-flour, besides corn meal, feed, and offal. The farm animals in the State on January 1, 1917, were: horses, 169,000; mules, 25,000; milch cows, 183,000; other cattle, 125,000; sheep, 223,000; swine, 859,000. The wool clip in 1915 yielded 749,000 pounds of wool.

Of mining industries in the State the most important is coal mining, which, in 1914, gave an output of 4,133,547 short tons, valued at 5,234,796 dollars. Second in importance is clay working, the output of which was valued at 1,846,500 dollars. Quarrying is also of importance, the value of the output of stone of various sorts amounting to 1,110,506 dollars in 1914. Other products were sand, talc, slate, lime, and natural rock cement. The total mineral output in 1914 was valued at 10,587,564 dollars; in 1913 at 1,292,723 dollars.

The fisheries of the State are valuable, especially the oyster fisheries, which yield more than any other State in the Union. Other fishery products are shad, bass, perch, and various shell-fish.

According to the Census report of 1915, Maryland had 4,799 manufactories, capital employed 295,934,000 dollars; persons engaged in manufactories 131,333; proprietors and firm members 5,014; salaried employees 14,801; average number of wage-earners 111,518; salaries 18,008,000 dollars; wages 53,821,000 dollars; cost of material 238,982,000 dollars; value of products 377,764,000; an increase over 1910 of 19.7 per cent.

Maryland ranks 27th among the States in population, 41st in land area, 8th in manufacturing. In canning and manufacturing of fertilizers it ranks 1st, in the production of tobacco 8th, in iron and shipbuilding 2nd, in the manufacturing of clothing 3rd, in iron and steel 10th, and in cotton goods 13th.

The State has ample facilities for traffic both by sea and land, having a network of roads nearly 1,000 miles in extent (1915), railways with (1915) 1,433 miles of line in the State and 675 miles of electric railway, while 30 steamboat lines enter the port of Baltimore, which is one of the best ports on the Atlantic coast. The whole shipping of the port in 1913, which included 1,639 vessels with a total tonnage of 2,973,052 tons employed in the coast-wise trade, was 2,357 vessels of 4,621,016 tons. The value of the imports in 1913 was 35,533,514 dollars (7,315,517*l.*), and of the exports, 117,269,378 dollars (24,129,501*l.*). In 1913, Baltimore occupied the second place in the United States as regards the exports of grain, and the first place in the coal export.

The construction of a Chesapeake and Delaware ship canal by the Federal Government is progressing. The Inter-coastal commission has recommended its purchase at a cost of 2,500,000 dollars (514,400*l.*), and that it be increased to a width of 250 feet on the surface and a depth of 25 feet. It further recommended that the canal be continued from Norfolk to North Carolina by the purchase of the existing Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal, linking the Elizabeth River near Norfolk with Currituck Sound in North Carolina. This canal is to have a depth of 12 feet. The entire section, from the Delaware to Beaufort, is estimated to be fully completed within four years after construction has been begun. At Locust Point, Baltimore, the United States Government will erect a new immigrant station.

There were 141 State banks and trust companies in the State on December 31, 1915, including 15 branches with resources of 157,655,891 dollars; 19 saving institutions with 106,405,307 dollars resources. The total amount of deposits in all the banks of Maryland on December 31st, 1915, was 166,473,063 dollars.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Constitution and Government.—In 1614, the Plymouth Company undertook exploring expeditions to New England, and obtained a Royal Charter granting sovereign powers over the region lying to the north of Virginia. It is supposed that the coast of Massachusetts was visited by the Norsemen as early as the year 1,000, but the first permanent settlement within the borders of the present state was made at Plymouth in December, 1620, by the Pilgrims from Holland, who were separatists from the English Church. This was the nucleus of the Plymouth Colony. In 1628 another company of Puritans settled at Salem, and from that beginning the Massachusetts Bay Colony was formed. In 1630 Boston was settled. In 1629 the whole region called New England was formed into a province. By a special Charter the Government was divided between the colony of Plymouth and that of Massachusetts Bay, but in 1692 they were re-united, and thenceforward acted together both in peace and war. In the struggle which ended in the separation of the American colonies from the mother country, Massachusetts took the foremost part, and became one of the thirteen original States of the Union.

There is a legislative body consisting of a Senate and a House of Representatives, styled collectively the General Court of Massachusetts. The Senate consists of 40 members elected annually by popular vote, the State being divided into 40 senatorial districts each of which returns one senator. The House of Representatives consists of 240 members, elected in 165 districts, each of which returns one, two, or three representatives according to population. There is an annual session of the Legislature.

Male citizens of the United States who can read and write may vote in all State elections, provided they are not paupers or under guardianship, and provided they have lived one year in the State and six months in the election district or precinct.

The State sends 2 Senators and 16 Representatives to the Federal Congress.

Governor.—Samuel W. McCall, 1917 (salary, 10,000 dollars).

Secretary of the Commonwealth.—Albert P. Langtry, 1917.

There are 14 counties in the State, varying largely in population, and there are 37 cities and 317 towns. The State Capital is Boston.

Area and Population.—Area 8,266 square miles (227 square miles being water.) The population as determined by the Decennial Census of Massachusetts on April 1, 1915, was 3,693,310, showing an increase of 9·7 per cent. since the Federal Census in 1910.

The population at the date of each of the Federal Censuses was as follows :—

	6,585,802,021

For the financial year ending January 31, 1916, the actual receipts of the city of Boston were 46,037,996 dollars, and the actual expenditures were 44,297,711 dollars, while the net funded debt of the city, including the Cochituate Water Debt and the Suffolk County Debt for which the city is responsible, was 84,422,478 dollars.

The military force of the State is the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, composed of the land forces (the Massachusetts National Guard) with an authorised strength of 7,306 ; and the naval forces (the Massachusetts Naval Militia), with an authorised strength of 891. On March 1, 1916, the actual strength of the National Guard was 432 officers and 6,043 men. On March 1, 1916, the Naval Battalion comprised 51 officers and 742 enlisted men.

Production, Industry, Commerce.—In 1910 the number of farms in Massachusetts (a farm being defined for census purposes as 'any tract of land of three or more acres used for agricultural purposes, and also any tract containing less than three acres which produced at least 250 dollars worth of farm products in the year 1909') was 36,917, with an area of 2,875,941 acres, of which 1,164,501 acres was improved land. The value of all farm property (including land valued at 105,532,616 dollars) in the State in 1910 was 226,474,025 dollars. Of the 36,917 farms in the State approximately 87 per cent. were operated by the owners, 5 per cent. by managers, and 8 per cent. by tenants. The total value of the agricultural products of the State during the year 1909, was 31,948,095 dollars, representing an increase of 38 per cent. over the corresponding total for the year 1899. The principal crops in 1916 with their values were: Hay and forage, 749,000 tons, valued at 14,231,989 dollars ; potatoes, 2,275,000 bushels, valued at 3,981,000 dollars ; maize, 1,764,600 bushels, valued at 2,117,000 dollars ; tobacco, 12,118,000 pounds, valued at 3,030,000 dollars. On Jan. 1, 1917, there were in the State 59,000 horses, 160,000 milch cows, 88,000 other cattle, 25,000 sheep, and 112,000 pigs.

In the last half of the nineteenth century so many industrial enterprises came into existence that Massachusetts has been quite transformed from an agricultural into a manufacturing community. At present nearly three-fourths of the population dwell in the cities or closely settled places.

The census of manufactures in the State in 1914 showed that the total capital invested in manufactures was 1,548,960,733 dollars, employing on the average 606,698 persons, who earned 341,309,517 dollars, using raw material valued at 931,383,793 dollars, and turned out products worth 1,641,373,044 dollars (in 1905, 1,124,092,051 dollars).

Condensed statistics of the more important industries are given in the following table (Massachusetts Statistics of Manufactures, 1914) :—

There is very little mining within the State. The principal minerals, as in most of the New England States, are from the stone quarries (3,438,556 dollars in 1914) and the clay pits (1,681,557 dollars in 1914). There are large stone quarries at Quincy, Rockport, Worcester, and Milford. The total value of all mineral products in 1914 was 6,292,833 dollars; in 1913, 7,044,529 dollars.

A large foreign trade is carried on through the Massachusetts Customs District (i.e., Boston and eight minor ports) by eighteen Trans-Atlantic steamship lines. In the calendar year 1915 the imports were valued at 170,433,648 dollars and the exports (including foreign, trans-shipped) at 119,498,929 dollars. The principal commodities imported, with valuation, were: Wool, 54,300,172 dollars; hides and skins, 24,341,331 dollars; fibres and vegetable grasses, and manufactures of, 19,032,031 dollars; cotton, and manufactures of, 20,489,960 dollars; and sugar and molasses, 15,115,904 dollars. The principal exports, with valuation, were: Leather, and manufactures of, 31,503,422 dollars; meat and dairy products, 25,909,356 dollars; cotton, and manufactures of, 11,115,416 dollars; iron, steel, and manufactures of, 10,454,724 dollars; and breadstuffs, 11,144,372 dollars.

In 1915 the vessels engaged in foreign trade which entered the Massa- chusetts District had a tonnage of 2,270,520; and those which cleared

1,527,027. The tonnage of vessels engaged in the coasting trade and entering the port of Boston was 12,885,509.

The total number of immigrant aliens from Trans-Atlantic ports admitted at the port of Boston during the year 1915, arriving for the first time and intending to remain permanently, was 9,483 (only one-fourth the total for 1914), classified as follows:—South Italians 4,051; Portuguese, 3,402; Germans, 621; Greeks, 486; North Italians, 274; English, 208; Jews, 67; all others, 374. Of the total number (9,483) 5,144, or 54.24 per cent., gave their destination as Massachusetts.

On June 30, 1916, there were 2,128 miles of main and branch steam railroads in the State. The 3 principal railroads, the Boston and Albany (New York Central lessee), the Boston and Maine, and the New York, New Haven and Hartford, each having a terminus in Boston, have operated about 95 per cent. of the railroad mileage and conducted over 98 per cent. of the entire passenger and freight business as expressed in gross revenue from those sources. On June 30, 1916, the total length of electric railways (main and second track, surface and elevated) within the State was 2,857 miles. The elevated track is confined to Boston and Cambridge.

In September, 1915, there were 169 National banks in operation in the State, of which 13 were in Boston. The total assets of the 169 National banks amounted to 611,989,333 dollars. On October 31, 1915, there were in operation in the State 195 savings-banks with assets of 1,005,591,642 dollars and 179 co-operative banks with assets of 101,543,318 dollars and 77 trust companies having aggregate assets of 563,595,111 dollars. For many years there have been no State banks, strictly so called, in Massachusetts. The total clearings of the Boston Clearing House during the calendar year 1915 amounted to 8,256,935,555 dollars.

MICHIGAN.

Government.—Michigan was admitted into the Union on January 26, 1837. According to the revised constitution adopted in 1908 the legislative authority is vested in a Senate of 32 members elected by the counties or groups of counties for 2 years, and a House of Representatives of 100 members, the electoral districts being re-arranged according to population every 10 years. Electors are male citizens over 21 years of age resident in the State for 6 months next preceding the election, and resident at the time of the election in the district, county, or township for which the election is held.

The State is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 13 Representatives.

Governor.—Albert E. Sleeper, 1917–19 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Coleman C. Vaughan.

For local government the State is organised in counties, cities, townships, and villages. There are 83 counties, each of which is a corporate body with a Board of Supervisors as its administrative authority. Cities must have each a population of not less than 3,000, but a few which have been long incorporated have a smaller population. Cities hereafter incorporated must have at least 2,000 inhabitants and 500 persons per square mile. Villages in the legal sense have a population of at least 300 within an area of a square mile. The State Capital is Lansing.

Area, Population, Education.—Area, 57,980 square miles, of which 500 square miles is water. This is exclusive of 16,653 square miles of Lake Superior, 12,922 square miles of Lake Michigan, 9,925 square miles of Lake Huron, and 460 square miles of Lakes St. Clair and Erie. The total length of Michigan coast line is 1,620 miles.

Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 3,054,854.

Of the total population in 1910, 47·2 per cent. was urban.

The death-rate per 1,000 of population in the State was 13·3 in 1913; 12·8 in 1914; and 12·8 in 1915.

The more important religious bodies are the Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Methodist, Lutheran, Baptist, Presbyterian, and Congregational.

Education is compulsory for the school term for children from 7 to 16 years of age. The total net expenditure for graded and ungraded public schools, for the fiscal year 1914-15, was 24,432,130 dollars; for the University, State colleges, normal and State schools, 3,251,303 dollars. Total, 27,683,433 dollars. In 1915 the public schools had 598,159 enrolled pupils and 20,161 teachers. The State had 4 normal schools with 228 teachers and 7,259 pupils in 1915. The highest education provided by the State is given in the University of Michigan, founded in 1841 at Ann Arbor; in 1915 it had 524 professors and teachers and 7,214 students. There is a State Agricultural College at Lansing, founded in 1857; it had, in 1915, 168 professors and 1,506 students. There is a College of Mines at Houghton, founded in 1886; in 1915 it had 23 instructors and 112 students.

Each of the 83 counties has 3 Superintendents of the poor (except Wayne County, which has 8), appointed by the Board of supervisors, and 80 counties have infirmaries. Either indoor or outdoor relief may be given; adult dependent persons and dependent children suffering from curable disease or deformity are sent to the University Hospital at Ann Arbor. The Legislature of 1915 authorized the creation of a Commission to investigate the existing system of public care and relief of poor persons in the State of Michigan, the laws governing the same, and the administration of such laws. This Commission is to report to the 1917 Legislature. The whole number of poor persons maintained in the infirmaries during the year ending September 30, 1915, was 8,810, of whom 7,111 were males and 1,699 females. The average number of persons maintained the entire period was 3,400·15. The number of persons temporarily relieved outside the infirmaries was 66,815. The number of permanent indigent persons maintained outside the infirmaries was 3,519, the number of persons supported at public institutions 1,311, and the whole number of different persons who received assistance in any form during the period was 80,455. The whole amount expended in the care and support of the poor is reported at 2,278,633 dollars. There are 14 charitable institutions, 3 penal, and 2 juvenile reformatory institutions maintained by the State; there are also 42 licensed child-placing agencies, 47 licensed maternity hospitals, 350 licensed boarding homes for children, and 27 private institutions for the aged and defective.

The State has no bonded debt.

In 1916 the total assessed valuation of the State as equalised by the State Board of Equalization amounted to 2,800,000,000 dollars.

The Michigan National Guard had on August 1, 1916, 220 officers and 3,430 enlisted men. The Naval Brigade of the State comprised 42 officers and 519 men.

Production and Industry.—The State is largely agricultural. In 1910 it contained 206,960 farms with a total area of 18,940,614 acres, of which 12,832,078 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 1,088,858,379 dollars. In 1916 the chief crops were oats, 42,690,000 bushels; corn, 45,375,000 bushels; wheat, 13,600,000 bushels; hay, 4,372,000 tons; potatoes, 15,360,000 bushels. Sugar beets are also cultivated. On January 1, 1917, there were in the State 1,834,000 sheep, 680,000 horses, 865,000 milch cows, 720,000 other cattle, and 1,345,000 swine. In 1915 the wool clip yielded 8,073,000 pounds of wool.

Michigan ranks sixth among the States in production of mineral wealth. The total output of ore in 1914 amounted to 8,533,280 long tons (18,722,358 dollars). Copper mining is carried on in the Lake Superior region; the yield of copper amounted in 1914 to 164,344,058 pounds (21,857,759 dollars); silver, in 1914, was produced to the amount of 413,500 fine ounces (228,665 dollars); salt (1914), 11,670,976 barrels (3,299,005 dollars); coal, 1,283,030 short tons (2,559,786 dollars). The output of the clay-working industries (bricks, tiles, &c.) in 1914 was valued at 2,700,066 dollars; of Portland cement (1914), 4,218,429 barrels (4,064,781 dollars). Graphite, asbestos, grindstones, gypsum, sandstone, limestone, mineral waters, and (in small quantity) petroleum are worked. The mineral output in 1913 was valued at 72,143,211 dollars; in 1914, 57,732,447 dollars.

The industries of the State are concerned chiefly with lumber, timber, agricultural products, metal-working, and the manufacture of automobiles, furniture, stoves, and machinery. In 1915, the number of workshops and manufacturing establishments inspected was 14,359, with an aggregate daily wage paid all employees of 1,116,428·80 dollars, 15,842 superintendents and 452,105 employees. Statistics (census 1910) of some of the more important industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 549.

For the fiscal year ending July 31, 1916, there were manufactured in Michigan 1,038,417 automobiles, 1,015,964 of which number were pleasure cars and 22,453 were commercial vehicles. Michigan manufactures about 75 per cent. of the entire output of motor vehicles in the United States. Detroit holds fifth place as a manufacturing city.

Other industrial products are butter and cheese, beet sugar, chemicals, various forms of iron and steel work, and malt liquors. Slaughtering and meat-packing have also considerable importance. The annual fish catch for the Great Lakes is estimated at over 50,500,000 lbs.

In 1915 there were 8,680 miles of railway in operation, besides 971 miles of electric railway, exclusive of city lines. During 1915 a tonnage of 56,399,147 net tons with 71,290,304 short tons of freight passed through the St. Mary's Falls Ship Canal. This canal is located at Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, and serves as a gateway between the lakes; it is the largest ship canal in the world.

On June 30, 1916, there were 491 State banks and trust companies, and 106 national banks in Michigan, with, estimated, 2,000,000 depositors having to their credit 598,388,700.76 dollars.

Male. . .	1,606,556	80,489	768		1,687,813
Female . .	1,528,376	76,963	183		1,605,522
Total . .	3,134,932	157,452	688	313	3,293,335

The foreign-born population in 1910 numbered 228,896, of whom 88,224 were German (38·5 per cent.), 23,290 Irish, 13,751 English, 7,961 Canadian, 6,141 Swiss, 21,401 Russian, 5,654 Swedish.

The largest cities in the State, with estimated population in 1916, are :—

Cities	Pop.	Cities	Pop.	Cities	Pop.
St. Louis .	757,309	Joplin .	33,216	Jefferson(Cap.)	13,484
Kansas City .	297,847	Hannibal .	21,836	Moberly .	12,752
St. Joseph .	85,236	Sedalia .	19,449	Columbia .	12,530
Springfield .	40,341	Webb City .	13,821

Of the total population in 1910, 42·5 per cent. was urban.

The strongest religious bodies in the State are Catholic, Baptist, and Methodist, after which (in order of importance), come Disciples of Christ, Presbyterians, Lutherans, Episcopalians, and Congregationalists.

School attendance is compulsory on children from 8 to 14 years of age for not less than three-fourths the school term. In 1915 the 9,792 public elementary schools had 17,226 male and female teachers and 659,690 male and female enrolled pupils; 600 public high schools had 2,600 male and female teachers and 51,665 male and female pupils. There are 5 public normal schools. Total expenditure for public schools in 1915, 19,700,626 dollars. For superior instruction there are many universities and colleges, the more important being as follows (1916) :—

Opened	Institutions	Professors	Students
1847	Univ. of Missouri, Columbia (State) . . . . .	268	3,930
1857	Washington Univ., St. Louis (non-sect.) . . . . .	231	2,019

On January 1, 1915, the bonded debt of the State amounted to 7,308,339 dollars (interest being payable to State funds). The assessed value of real property (1914) was 1,279,855,544 dollars; of personal property, 378,731,840 dollars; of railway, bridge, telephone and telegraph property, assessed by State board, 198,297,761 dollars, making a total of 1,856,885,145 dollars.

The militia, or National Guard, consists of infantry and artillery with a total strength of 207 officers and 3,746 men on June 30, 1916; the naval militia had 19 officers and 234 men.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is the chief occupation in the State. In 1910 the number of farms was 277,244, with a farm area of 34,591,248 acres, of which 24,581,000 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 2,052,917,488 dollars. The chief crops are cereals. In 1916 the maize crop amounted to 132,112,000 bushels, wheat to 16,575,000 bushels, and oats 32,250,000 bushels. Potatoes and sorghum are grown throughout the State. In the south-eastern lowlands the important product is cotton, the area under which (1916) was 132,000 acres, and the yield 62,000 bales, valued at 5,644,000 dollars. In 1916, 5,000 acres were under flax, yielding 35,000 bushels of flax-seed. The acreage in 1916 under tobacco was 3,200, from which the crop was 3,040,000 pounds, valued at 456,000 dollars. There are many orchards, and small fruit is grown. Stock-raising is important, especially the raising of hogs, of which, on January 1, 1917, there were 4,280,000 in the State; there were also 845,000 milch cows, 1,600,000 other cattle, 1,370,000 sheep, and 1,040,000 horses. The wool clip in 1915 yielded 7,035,000 pounds of wool.

Missouri leads all the other States in the production of zinc and lead. The productive coal-fields of Missouri have an area of about 14,000 square miles, and employ 11,104 miners. The output in 1914 amounted to 3,935,980 short tons, valued at 6,802,325 dollars. The output of red and brown hematite iron ore was 36,304 long tons, valued at 75,696 dollars. The output of zinc was 105,994 short tons (10,811,388 dollars). The output of lead in 1914 was 192,612 short tons, valued at 15,023,736 dollars. The lead ores at Mine La Motte, Missouri, contain cobalt and nickel. Barytes in 1914 was produced to the amount of 33,317 short tons, valued at 112,231 dollars. The output of limestone, sandstone, and granite was valued at 2,294,103 dollars; of bricks, tiles, and pottery, at 6,077,284 dollars. Other products are Portland cement (output in 1914, 4,706,389 barrels, valued at 4,485,744 dollars), grindstones, pig-iron, copper, blue and white lead. The mineral products of the State in 1913, were valued at 54,001,088 dollars; and in 1914 at 48,597,593 dollars.

Missouri has prosperous manufacturing industries, the more important of which depend on agriculture and forestry. In 1910 there were 8,375 industrial establishments; the capital invested in all the industries of the State amounted to 443,343,000 dollars; the number of persons employed in them (including proprietors, clerks, and wage-earners) was 185,705, and the year's output was valued at 574,111,000 dollars. The chief industries, with their capital, their wage-earners, and their output in 1910, are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 558.

St. Louis and Kansas City are important centres of the traffic in grain and live stock. In 1914, 6,715,029 bushels of wheat (4,137,995 bushels in 1913) were exported from St. Louis.

In the State there were in 1915, 8,274 miles of railway, besides 1,113 miles of electric railway track. The northern portion of the State is better supplied with railways than the southern. The principal lines in the State are the Missouri Pacific, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé; the St. Louis and San Francisco; and the St. Louis South Western. St. Louis is the terminal for the larger river steamers, and there is a heavy traffic between it and the Gulf of Mexico. The market for the grain and animal produce of the Western States is largely reached via Missouri.

There is a British Vice-Consul at Kansas City and another at St. Louis.

The assessed valuation of all kinds of property in 1915 was 439,785,918 dollars.

The National Guard (infantry) on June 30, 1916, consisted of 50 officers and 734 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Montana has considerable undeveloped agricultural and mineral resources, and opportunity is offered to prospective settlers of acquiring land and becoming permanent residents. In 1910 there were 26,214 farms with an area of 13,545,603 acres, of which 3,640,309 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 85,663,187 dollars. Large irrigation projects are being constructed by the United States Government, and many private enterprises are being successfully carried out. The total forest area in 1915 was 16,104,734 acres.

The chief crop is wheat, amounting in 1916 to 28,655,000 bushels, and worth 46,134,000 dollars; oats, 25,080,000 bushels, value 11,788,000 dollars; barley, 2,660,000 bushels, value 2,022,000 dollars; flax seed, 3,088,000 bushels, value 7,658,000 dollars; potatoes, 4,875,000 bushels, value 5,850,000 dollars; hay, 1,402,000 tons, value 15,422,000 dollars. Fruit is now very widely cultivated in the State; there were over 2,000,000 fruit-bearing trees in 1914. The raising of sheep, cattle, &c., is a very important industry. Montana has more sheep and produces more wool than any other State in the Union. The wool clip in 1915 yielded 28,682,000 pounds of wool. On January 1, 1917, there were 3,744,000 sheep; horses, 452,000; milch cows, 148,000; other cattle, 983,000; swine, 269,000.

Montana has great mineral resources. In 1914 the production of coal amounted to 2,805,173 short tons, valued at 4,913,191 dollars; of copper, 233,229,640 pounds (31,019,542 dollars); of lead, 4,828 short tons; of gold, 199,204 fine ozs., valued at 4,117,911 dollars; of silver, 12,016,450 fine ozs., of the value of 6,645,102 dollars. Other products are iron ore, zinc, of the value of 5,690,608 dollars; tungsten, grindstones, corundum, mineral waters, and sapphires. In 1913, the total value of mineral output was 69,307,056 dollars; in 1914 it was 54,244,889 dollars.

• The manufacturing industries of the State are prosperous. In 1909 there were 677 manufacturing establishments. The salaried officials numbered 1,380. Their wage-earners, 11,655. The wages paid amounted to 10,901,000 dollars; the salaries paid, to 2,054,000 dollars; the cost of materials used, to 49,180,000 dollars; the value of output, to 73,272,000 dollars; value added by manufacture, to 24,092,000 dollars. By far the most important of the industries is the smelting and refining of copper, but details of copper and some other works are necessarily withheld. Details of other industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 561.

In 1915 there were 6,427 miles of railway in the State, besides 107 miles of electric street or elevated railway. The telegraph lines had a length of 9,556 miles, and the telephone lines 5,384 miles.

In the year ending June 30, 1915, there were 5 savings banks in the State, with 9,548 depositors, who had to their credit 3,448,061 dollars, being 361.12 dollars to each contributor.

NEBRASKA.

The Nebraska region was first reached by white men from Mexico under the Spanish general Coronado in 1541. It was explored by French fur traders in the period 1700-1800, and claimed by France, Spain and England in the early colonial period, ceded by France to Spain in 1763, retroceded to France in 1801, and sold by Napoleon to the United States as part of the Louisiana purchase in 1803. Fort Atkinson on the Missouri River, the farthest western post of the United States, was established in 1819, abandoned in 1827. Bellevue, the present oldest continuous settlement, was established by French fur traders about 1820. The creation of Nebraska territory was part of the programme of the United States government in 1844 as a step in establishing a military highway to hold Oregon, then in controversy with Great Britain. On May 30, 1854, Nebraska became a territory and on March 1, 1867, a State. "Arbor Day," now a world-wide institution observed with planting of trees, originated in Nebraska on January 4, 1872.

Government.—The Legislature consists of a Senate of 33 members and a House of Representatives of 100 members. The Legislators are elected for two years. The franchise extends not only to citizens but also to aliens who, thirty days before the election, have declared their intention of becoming citizens. Voters must have resided in the State for six months, in the county for 40 days, in the precinct for ten days next before the election. The present constitution was adopted in 1875. Important amendments adopted in 1912 provide for legislation through the initiative and referendum, for a State Board of Control over sixteen State institutions, for biennial instead of annual elections, and permit cities of more than 5,000 inhabitants to frame their own charters. An amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquor, except for mechanical, medicinal, and sacramental purposes, was adopted at the election Nov. 7, 1916, by the vote of 146,574 for, and 117,152 against.

Nebraska is represented in Congress by two Senators and six Representatives.

Governor.—Keith Neville, 1917–19 (2,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—C. W. Pool.

There are 93 counties in the State. The State Capital is Lincoln.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area 77,510 square miles, of which 702 square miles is water. The population in decennial census years from 1860 was:—

Years	Population	Per sq. mile	Years	Population	Per sq. mile
1860	28,841	0.38	1900	1,066,300 <sup>1</sup>	13.9
1880	452,402	5.9	1910	1,192,214	15.5

Estimated population in 1917, 1,277,750.

In 1910 the population by sex and birth was:—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	621,042	4,259	704	1777	627,782

Total . . .	1,180,293	7,689	730	3,502	1,192,214

The foreign-born population in 1910 numbered 175,865, of whom 57,302 were German, 23,219 Swedish, 13,674 Danish, 8,124 Irish, 8,009 English, 7,335 Canadian, and 13,020 Russian. The largest cities in the State are, Omaha with a population of 165,470 in 1916; Lincoln (capital), 46,515. Of the total population in 1910, 26.1 per cent. was urban.

The most numerous religious bodies in the State are, in order of numbers, Roman Catholic, Methodist, Lutheran, Disciples, Presbyterian, Baptist, and Congregational.

In Nebraska in 1910 only 1.9 per cent. of the population over ten years of age were illiterate. School attendance is compulsory for children from 7 to 15 years of age for not less than 12 weeks in school term. The 572 graded schools and 7,014 district schools, in 1915, had 12,327 teachers and 290,875 enrolled pupils. There were, in 1914, 367 public high schools with 1,121 teachers and 22,553 pupils. There are 4 State normal schools with 118 teachers and 3,804 students and 2 private normal schools. Total expenditure on education (1915), 10,121,558 dollars. Higher instruction is provided in academic institutions, of which the more important are (1916):—

Opened	Institution	Professors, &c.	Students
1871	Univ. of Nebraska, Lincoln (State) . . .	190	4,826
1878	Creighton Univ., Omaha (R.C.) . . .	150	1,245
1887	Nebraska Wesleyan Univ. (M.E.) . . .	36	875
1889	Cotner University, Bethany (Disciples) . .	27	325

A grant of 3,000,000 acres of public lands for permanent endowment of her schools was made by the Federal Government. Of this 1,661,405 acres are still held by the State. Further sale of this land, with some minor exceptions, is forbidden, Nebraska being the only State which has adopted the policy. The total value of the permanent school endowment is 21,564,714 dollars.

On January 1, 1910, the almshouses had 551 pauper inmates, being 46·2 per 100,000 of the population. In Nebraska, during 1914-15, the United States military pensioners numbered 13,113, and the total amount was 2,902,869 dollars.

Finance, Defence.—For the biennium ending November 30, 1916, the receipts and disbursements of the State funds were :—

	Dollars
Balance, December 1, 1914 . . . . .	746,109
Receipts 1914-16 . . . . .	14,120,267
Total . . . . .	14,866,376
Disbursements, 1914-16 . . . . .	13,577,702
Balance, November 30, 1916 . . . . .	1,288,674

The State has no debt. In 1916 the assessed valuation of real and personal property (under a law requiring the assessed value to be 20% of the actual value) amounted to 500,827,276 dollars.

The militia, or National Guard, with its headquarters at Lincoln, consists of cavalry, artillery, and infantry; total strength on January 1, 1917, 130 officers and 1,600 enlisted men, practically all of whom are on the Mexican border.

Production and Industry.—Nebraska is one of the most important agricultural States, being third in the production of corn, and fourth in the production of wheat; second in the production of alfalfa and first in poultry and eggs. In 1910 it contained 129,678 farms with a total area of 38,622,021 acres, of which 24,382,577 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 2,079,818,647 dollars. The Federal irrigation district in Western Nebraska embraces 300,000 acres, two-thirds of which is already under water. The principal crops are cereals, hay, potatoes, and apples. In 1916 the yield of maize was 192,400,000 bushels; wheat, 68,550,000 bushels; oats, 79,875,462 bushels. Beet-sugar is also produced, 125,000,000 pounds being the estimate for 1916. The live-stock industry is pursued on a large scale. On January 1, 1917, the State contained 1,018,000 horses, 112,000 mules, 676,000 milch cows, 2,349,000 other cattle, 381,000 sheep, and 4,309,000 swine. From 240,000 sheep in 1915 the wool clip yielded 1,776,000 pounds of wool.

Nebraska has some quarries and some mines (silica). Limestone and sandstone were quarried in 1914 to the value of 303,680 dollars, and the output of bricks and tiles was valued at 640,955 dollars. Total mineral output in 1913, 1,433,718 dollars; in 1914, 1,166,787 dollars.

The most important manufacturing industries are associated with the pastoral and agricultural produce of the State. In 1910 there were 2,500 manufacturing establishments in the State; their aggregate capital amounted to 99,901,000 dollars; the persons owning or working them (proprietors, firm members, clerks, &c., and wage-earners) numbered 31,966; the material used cost 151,081,000 dollars, and the output was valued at 199,019,000 dollars. The chief of these industries is slaughtering and meat-packing, which has its centre at South Omaha. Statistics of four industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 564.

Other industries are printing and publishing, brewing, soap and candle making, brick and tile work, smelting, sugar manufacture, &c.

In 1915 there were 8,314 miles of railway in the State, besides the 222 miles of electric railway track. Omaha is a centre whence 9 trunk lines of railway radiate. Commercial navigation of the Missouri river, which was abandoned for 35 years, has been resumed, steamboats and barges carrying grain and live stock ply between Omaha and Sioux City every week.

In September, 1916, there were 834 State banks and 193 National banks in the State, with total resources of 388,746,557 dollars.

There is a British Vice-Consul at Omaha.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Government.—New Hampshire was one of the thirteen original States of the Union. The sense of the people as to the calling of a convention for the revision of the Constitution must be taken every seven years. If a convention is held the amendments to the Constitution which it proposes must be laid before the towns, and approved by two-thirds of the qualified voters present and voting on the subject. The Legislature consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate consists of 24 members, elected for two years. The House of Representatives consists of from 390 to 409 members, the number varying slightly with each session, as representation is on the basis of population. Electors are all male citizens 21 years of age, resident six months in the place to be represented, duly registered and not under sentence for crime or paupers.

Governor.—Henry W. Keyes, 1917–19 (3,000 dollars.)

Secretary of State.—Edwin C. Bean.

Besides, there are 26 Indian schools with 2,291 pupils, and 141 teachers (maintained by the Federal Government). Three public normal schools had 33 teachers and about 800 students. Total expenditure on education (1914), 1,346,402 dollars. For special and higher instruction there are various institutions; a College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, founded in 1890, with 43 professors and 287 students, a School of Mines, founded at Socorro in 1895, with 8 professors and 34 students, a Military Institute, an Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, an Orphans' School, and a Reform School. At Albuquerque is the University of New Mexico, founded in 1891; it has 25 professors and 222 students. The State schools are maintained by funds assigned by the State Government, and by the proceeds of the school tax levied by the commissioners of each county, municipality and district.

Finance, Defence.—For the year ending November 30, 1915, the revenue and expenditure were as follows:—

	Dollars
Balance, December 1, 1914 . . . . .	870,485
Receipts for year . . . . .	1,946,290
Total . . . . .	2,816,775
Disbursements for year . . . . .	1,384,824
Balance, December 1, 1915 . . . . .	431,951

The total bonded indebtedness of the State on June 30, 1915, was 1,028,252 dollars.

The National Guard of the State contains 867 enlisted men and 67 officers on June 30, 1916; the unorganised militia available is estimated at 55,000. In the State are 8 military reservations with a total area of about 187,400 acres. Battery target range in Capitan mountains 6,687·95 acres.

Production and Industry.—New Mexico produces cereals, vegetables, fruit, and cotton. The principal crops in 1916 were: maize, 2,625,000 bushels; wheat, 2,104,000 bushels; potatoes, 816,000 bushels. Irrigation, which is indispensable over wide tracks of fertile country, is extending, in 1911 the irrigated area had reached 750,000. The Rio Grande project provides for reservoir construction for the irrigation of 180,000 acres in New Mexico and Texas. Private enterprise also is devoted largely to reservoir and canal construction. In 1910 there were 35,676 farms with an area of 11,270,021 acres, of which 1,467,191 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 159,447,990 dollars. The farm animals on January 1, 1917, comprised 250,000 horses, 85,000 milch cows, 1,145,000 other cattle, 3,300,000 sheep, and 101,000 swine. In 1915 the wool clip amounted to 13,620,000 pounds of wool. The national forest area (1915) covers 8,469,511 acres, and there are about 4,000,000 acres of heavily forested country in private ownership.

The State has valuable mineral resources. In 1914 the metallic output comprised gold, 56,681 fine ounces (1,171,696 dollars); silver, 1,777,445 fine ounces (982,927 dollars); copper, 59,307,925 pounds (7,887,954 dollars); lead, 882 short tons (68,782 dollars); zinc, 9,202 short tons (938,573 dollars). In the same year 3,877,689 short tons of coal were produced, valued at 6,230,871 dollars. The quarries yielded granite, sandstone, limestone, and marble to the value of 418,305 dollars. Turquoise is profitably worked in four localities within the State; the sands contain traces of platinum; gypsum is produced in small quantities, as is also mica. The total mineral output of the State in 1913 was valued at 17,862,369 dollars; in 1914, at 18,072,919 dollars.

The manufactured output of New Mexico in 1910 amounted to the value of 7,978,000 dollars, of which nearly half was for car construction and repair by railway companies. The industries next in importance are lumber and timber work, and flour and grist milling. There are also woollen mills and cement works. The aggregate capital of all industries was 7,743,000 dollars; the number of wage-earners was 4,143, earning in a year 2,591,000 dollars, and the cost of materials used was 3,261,000 dollars.

In 1915 there were 3,038 miles of railway and 10 miles of electric railway track within the State.

In 1915 there were 13 savings banks in the State, with 7,614 depositors who had to their credit 1,707,555 dollars, being 224.27 dollars to each depositor.

NEW YORK STATE.

Constitution and Government.—From 1609 to 1664 the region now called New York was under the sway of the Dutch; then it came under the rule of the English, who governed the country till the outbreak of the War of Independence. Between July 9, 1776, and April 20, 1777, a Convention framed a Constitution under which New York was transformed into an independent State, afterwards, in 1788, entering the Union as one of the 13 original States.

The legislative authority is vested in a Senate of 51 members elected every two years, and an Assembly of 150 members elected annually. There are annual sessions.

The right of suffrage resides in every citizen 21 years of age, who has been a citizen for 90 days, and has resided in the State for a year preceding the election. A voter must also have resided four months in the county, and 30 days in the election district.

The question whether there shall be a Convention to revise the Constitution has to be submitted to the people every 20 years, beginning with 1916, 'and also at such times as the Legislature may by law provide.' Under this clause the question was submitted to the people April 7, 1914, and decided in the affirmative. The Convention was held in Albany, April 6 to September 10, 1915, the revised Constitution was submitted to the people, November 2, 1915, and defeated.

The State is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 43 Representatives.

Governor.—Charles S. Whitman, 1916–18 (10,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Francis M. Hugo.

The seat of the State executive is at Albany.

For local government the State is divided into 62 counties.

Cities are in 3 classes, the first class having each over 175,000 inhabitants and the third under 50,000. Each is incorporated by charter, under special legislation. The government of New York City is vested in a board of Aldermen, elected for 2 years. Its members are the President, elected by the city; the presidents of the 5 city boroughs (Bronx, Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond); 73 aldermen, one elected in each of the 73 districts. The chief executive officer is the Mayor, elected for 4 years; he appoints all the heads of departments, except the Comptroller, who is elected by the city.

Area, Population.—Area 49,204 square miles (1,550 square miles being water). Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 10,273,375. Population in census years :—

Of the total population in 1915, 74·8 per cent. was urban.

In 1913 the death-rate in cities was 14·8 per 1,000 of population, in rural districts 15·5; in the whole State, 15·6.

The chief churches are Roman Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Protestant Episcopal, and Baptist.

Education.—Education is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 16. Instruction in physical training and kindred subjects of all pupils above 8 years of age in the elementary and secondary schools of the State is made compulsory by an amendment of 1916 to the Education Law. An amendment to the Military Law also makes compulsory the military training of all boys between the ages of 16 and 19 who are pupils in a public or private school or in a college, for at least three hours a week during the school year and in the case of boys who are not pupils for a period not exceeding this, between September of each year and the ensuing 15th day of June.

In 1914-15 the children enrolled in the 11,990 elementary schools numbered 724,088 boys and 700,996 girls, a total of 1,425,084; the number of teachers was 3,345 males and 41,868 women, a total of 45,213. There were 776 public high schools with 153,956 pupils (70,507 boys and 83,449 girls), and 6,702 teachers (2,430 men and 4,272 women). There were 10 public normal schools with 289 teachers, and 3,248 students (215 men and 3,033 women), in the normal departments, also 2,136 males and 2,420 females in other departments, making a total enrolment in normal schools of 7,804. Total expenditure on education in 1915, 97,579,268 dollars. There were 126 universities, colleges, professional and technical schools with 5,650 professors and teachers and 52,606 students.

The University of the State of New York is governed by a Board of Regents, whose members are at all times three more than the existing judicial districts of the State—at present 9 districts and 12 Regents. The University is the State Education Department. The Regents elect by ballot the President of the University and the Commissioner of Education.

The output of the flour and grist mills in 1910 was of the value of 69,802,278 dollars. The material used in the year comprised wheat, 6,671,722 barrels, valued at 85,530,639 dollars; corn, 2,090,587 barrels, valued at 5,967,943 dollars; rye, 226,992 barrels valued at 970,797 dollars; buckwheat, 66,632,357 pounds, valued at 1,724,854 dollars; barley, 1,580,356 pounds, valued at 25,587 dollars.

In 1915 there were 2,121 newspapers, &c., of which 207 were dailies, 49 semi-weekly, 1,062 weekly, 661 monthly, and 46 quarterly. In English, 1,753 were published; and of the foreign languages, 60 were in German, 27 in Italian, 19 in Yiddish, 11 in Polish, 11 in Spanish, 5 each in Swedish, Croatian, French, 7 in Bohemian, 4 each in Hungarian and Russian; 8 in Syrian (Arabic), 1 in Danish, and 1 in Norwegian. In 1910, 1,080 publications, with an aggregate circulation of 10,116,760 copies per issue, were devoted to politics and family news; 135 with a circulation of 4,037,905 were religious in character; and 112 with a circulation of 12,664,213 were devoted to general literature.

New York City now ranks as the first shipping port of the world. The imports, including specie and bullion, during the fiscal year of 1915 amounted to the value of 1,975,807,621 dollars, and the exports, including specie and bullion, to the value of 1,280,233,603 dollars. The exports consist largely of grain, flour, cotton, tobacco, apples, and other fruits, preserved provisions, cattle, and frozen meat. Most of the great railway lines which bring merchandise from the west have their terminals on the New Jersey side of the harbour, but there are ample facilities for the transfer of goods to the docks on the eastern side by means of lighters and of barges which carry the loaded cars across. At New York in 1915 the tonnage movement in the foreign trade was: entered, 12,647,606 tons; cleared, 12,162,374 tons.

In 1915 the bank clearings in New York amounted to 90,842,707,724 dollars.

In New York State there were in 1915 8,534 miles of railway track. The canals of the State, used for commercial purposes, have a length of 638 miles, of which the Erie canal has 361 miles. The State Barge Canal to connect New York City with Buffalo by means of a deep water route of 790 miles, having a minimum depth of 12 feet, is nearing completion. It will have a capacity of 20,000,000 tons per season.

In the year ending June 30, 1915, there were 140 savings banks in the State, with total resources of 1,974,046,375 dollars, 3,199,307 depositors who had 1,774,221,482 dollars to their credit, being 554.56 dollars to each depositor.

British Consul-General at New York.—Charles Clive Bayley.

There are four Vice-consuls.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Government.—North Carolina is one of the thirteen original States of the Union. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 50 members, and a House of Representatives of 120 members, elected for two years.

All male citizens of the United States, resident in the State two years, and in the county six months next before the election, and registered, have a vote. For registration, the requirement is payment of poll-tax and ability to read and write any section of the Constitution in the English language (Art. vi. Sec. 4).

The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and ten Representatives.

Governor.—Thomas W. Bickett, 1917–21 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—J. Bryan Grimes.

North Carolina is divided into 100 counties. The State Capital is Raleigh.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 52,426 square miles, of which 3,686 square miles is water. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 2,402,738.

Years	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per sq. mile
1820	419,200	219,629	638,829	13.2
1900	1,269,341	624,469	1,893,810	38.9
1910	1,508,444	697,843	2,206,287	45.3

<sup>1</sup> Including Indians and Asiatics.

In 1910 the population by sex and birth was:—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male	754,852	339,581	4,043		1,098,476
Female	745,659	358,262	3,890		1,107,811
Total	1,500,511	697,843	82	7,851	2,206,287

Of the total in 1910, 6,092 were foreign-born, 1,074 being German, and 940 English. Urban population formed 14.4 per cent. of the whole. Cities (with estimated population in 1916) are: Charlotte, 39,823; Winston-Salem, 31,115; Wilmington, 29,892; Durham, 25,061; Asheville, 20,823; Raleigh (capital), 20,127; Greensboro, 19,577.

About half of the church members are Baptist, and three-fifths Methodist. The others are mostly Presbyterian, Lutheran, or Protestant Episcopal.

School attendance is compulsory. Separate schools are provided for white and for coloured children. In 1915 the 7,922 public elementary schools of the State had 13,875 teachers, and 606,350 enrolled pupils. There were 214 public high schools with 434 teachers and 8,986 pupils in 1915. Teachers are trained in 7 public normal schools, with 105 teachers and 1,862 students in 1915. Total expenditure in 1914, 5,566,992 dollars.

Higher instruction is given in 15 university and college institutions, the more important of which are the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (founded in 1795) in 1915 with 65 professors and 1,157 students; and the Agricultural and Mechanical College at West Raleigh (founded in 1889) with 63 professors and 723 pupils. Higher education for young women is given in the State Normal and Industrial College (Greensboro) which, in 1915-16, had 64 professors and 702 students. There are large sectarian colleges, and also schools and colleges for coloured youths.

Charity.—Within the State there are (apart from almshouses and asylums for the insane, &c.) 57 benevolent institutions, six of which are public, the rest having been provided by private associations or religious bodies. They comprise 37 hospitals, one dispensary, 18 orphanages (two public), one day nursery, eight homes mainly for adults (one public), and two schools for the deaf and blind (both public). In all the almshouses in 1911 there were 1,393 pauper inmates (600 coloured).

Finance, Defence.—The State had receipts and disbursements in the year ending November 30, 1916, as follows:—

	Dollars
Balance, December 1, 1915 . . . . .	224,623
Receipts, 1915-16 . . . . .	5,227,230
Total . . . . .	5,451,453
Disbursements, 1915-16 . . . . .	5,002,607
Balance, December 1, 1916 . . . . .	448,846

In 1916 the outstanding debt amounted to 8,673,500 dollars. The State owns stock in railway and turnpike companies which can more than cover the State debt. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders the State has a defaulted debt estimated at 13,000,000 dollars. The State declares these bonds to have been fraudulently and corruptly issued during reconstruction days.

The militia, or National Guard, consisting of artillery and infantry, had, on June 30, 1916, a total strength of 208 officers and 2,846 enlisted men. The naval militia has 24 officers and 132 men.

Production and Industry.—The chief occupation of the inhabitants of the State is agriculture. In 1910 the State had 253,725 farms, while the area of the farm land was 22,439,129 acres, of which 8,813,056 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 537,716,210 dollars. Wheat and maize are grown, the yield of the former in 1916 having been 9,975,000 bushels, and of the latter, 53,650,000 bushels. The chief crop, however, is cotton, of which the area for 1916 was 1,432,000 acres, and the yield 646,000 bales (of 500 pounds, gross weight). Another important product is tobacco, grown on 320,000 acres, which yielded in 1916, 176,000,000 pounds, valued at 35,200,000 dollars. Other products are peanuts, potatoes, oats, and rye. The rice crop in 1916 amounted to 6,000 bushels. Stock-raising is not important, but there is a growing dairy industry. On January 1, 1917, the farm animals were 185,000 horses, 200,000 mules, 315,000 milch cows, 364,000 other cattle, 140,000 sheep, and 1,550,000 swine.

In the eastern portion of the State there are shad and oyster fisheries, both valuable.

Minerals in some variety, but not in large quantities, are found in the State, the chief being mica (195,270 dollars in 1914), bismuth, talc, and soapstone barytes, graphite, coal, phosphate rock, gold (6,334 fine ozs. value 131,141 dollars in 1914), silver (1,524 ozs., 843 dollars in 1914). The quarries, in 1914, yielded granite, limestone, and sandstone to the value of 1,407,671 dollars. Monazite and zircon, used in the manufacture of incandescent light mantles, are also found. The clay products of the State (bricks, pottery, &c.) in 1914 were of the value of 1,460,790 dollars. The total value of the mineral products in 1913 was put at 3,739,696 dollars; in 1914, 3,519,245 dollars.

The prosperity of North Carolina is associated chiefly with cotton, tobacco, and lumber, but within the State a variety of other industries are pursued. The value of the output of all manufactures in the State in 1910 was put at 216,656,000 dollars. Statistics of six manufacturing industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 584.

The chief sea-port is Wilmington, the exports from which, in 1915, amounted to the value of 11,308,535 dollars, nearly all for cotton grown in North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama, and shipped mostly to Bremen, Liverpool, and Ghent. Harbour improvements are in progress.

The State has several navigable rivers; in 1915 it contained 5,565 miles of steam railway, and 289 miles of electric railway track. The chief railway lines are the Atlantic coast line, the Seaboard Air line, the Southern railway, and the Norfolk and Southern railway, the latter being formed by the union of about half-a-dozen independent lines.

In 1915 there were 28 savings banks in the State, with 52,697 depositors who had to their credit 9,693,543 dollars, being 183·94 dollars to each depositor.

There is a British Vice-Consul at Wilmington.

The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 1,902,694,589 dollars. The chief crops are cereals, hay, potatoes, fruits and vegetables, besides tobacco. The maize crop in 1916 amounted to 115,762,000 bushels, and the wheat crop to 20,250,000 bushels; oats, 48,076,000 bushels. The area under tobacco (100,000 acres in 1916) yielded 95,000,000 pounds. Beet sugar to the amount of 32,100 short tons was produced in 1915. Horse-rearing, cattle-breeding, and dairy farming are important. On January 1, 1917, the live-stock in the State was 892,000 horses, 26,000 mules, 950,000 milch cows, and 863,000 other cattle 2,944,000 sheep, and 3,527,000 swine. The wool clip in 1915 yielded 14,350,000 pounds of wool. The farm products and live-stock industries give rise to the manufacture of butter and cheese, and the meat-packing industries.

Ohio has also extensive mineral resources. The two leading products are coal and manufactures from clay. In 1914 the output of coal amounted to 18,843,115 short tons, valued at 21,250,642 dollars. With coal is associated petroleum, the output of which amounted to 8,536,352 barrels (of 42 gallons), valued at 13,372,729 dollars. At the same time natural gas was produced in the State to the value of 14,667,790 dollars. From quarries sandstone and limestone were produced to the value of 5,655,713 dollars. Portland cement was manufactured to the amount of 1,951,472 barrels, valued at 1,942,927 dollars. Another product of the State is salt, of which, in 1914, 5,482,836 barrels were extracted, valued at 1,320,554 dollars. The output of the clay-working industries (bricks, tiles, pottery) amounted to the value of 37,166,768 dollars; the output of lime was valued at 1,880,836 dollars; other mineral products were grindstones, pulpstones, oilstones, and scythestones, besides mineral waters. Value of total mineral output, excluding 5,226,925 long tons of pig iron (70,331,114, dollars), in 1914 was 101,661,384 dollars; in 1913, 121,795,892 dollars.

In 1910 the capital invested in manufacturing industries in the State was 866,898,083 dollars; the amount paid in salaries and wages was 228,984,923 dollars; the raw material used cost 529,893,658 dollars, and the value of the output was 960,799,991 dollars. The value of the corresponding output in 1900 was 748,670,855 dollars. The chief manufacturing industries, according to the census results for 1910, are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 590.

The railways of the State in 1915 had a length of 9,158 miles, besides 4,300 miles of electric railway track. Ohio has also facilities for traffic by water, and its most important city, Cleveland, has sprung up on the shore of Lake Erie.

In December, 1915, there were 3 savings banks in the State, with 115,241 depositors having to their credit 62,603,425 dollars, being 513.24 dollars to each depositor.

OKLAHOMA.

Government.--The State of Oklahoma, comprising the former Territory of Oklahoma and Indian Territory, was constituted on November 16, 1907, by Proclamation made by the United States President under the enabling act of June 16, 1906. The constitution provides for the initiative and the referendum, 8 per cent. of the legal voters having the right to propose any legislative measure and 15 per cent. to propose amendments to the constitution by petition. The referendum may be ordered (except as to laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety) either by petition signed by 5 per cent. of the legal voters or by the Legislature. The referendum applies to municipalities as well as to the State. The control of railways and other public service corporations is vested in a commission of 3 members elected for six-year periods, from whose decision an appeal lies only to the Supreme Court, no other court having power to interfere with its duties.

The Legislature consists of a Senate of 44 members who are elected for 4 years, and a House of Representatives elected for 2 years, and consisting of not less than 99 nor more than 102 members. Qualified as electors are (with necessary exceptions) all citizens resident six months in the State, 60 days in the county or town, 30 days in the precinct. Indians, to be qualified as voters, must have severed tribal relations.

Governor.—R. L. Williams, 1915–19 (4,500 dollars).

Secretary.—J. L. Lyon.

The State is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 8 members of the House of Representatives. The State capital is Oklahoma City.

Area and Population.—Area, 70,057 square miles, of which 643 square miles is water. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 2,202,081.

[For the history of the relations between the Indians and the Federal Government see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1907, p. 593.]

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was :—

Year	White	Coloured	Total	Per square mile
1900	670,204	120,187	790,391 <sup>1</sup>	10·3 <sup>1</sup>
1910	1,444,531	212,624	1,657,155	23·9

<sup>1</sup> Including Indian territory.

In 1910 the population by sex and race was :—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . . . .	771,770	71,937	37,871		881,578
Female. . . . .	672,761	65,675	37,141		775,577
Total . . . . .	1,444,531	137,612	187	74,825	1,657,155

In 1910, 40,442 were foreign born, of whom 10,090 were Germans, 5,807 Russians, 2,564 Italians, 3,889 Austrians, 2,981 English, 2,871 Canadians, and 1,218 Scotch:

Of the total population in 1910, 19·3 per cent. was urban. The most important cities are Oklahoma City (estimated population in 1916, 92,943), Muskogee (44,218), Tulsa (30,575), Enid (30,307), McAlester (18,504), Shawnee (18,138), Cushing, new oil city, (15,000), Chickasha (15,447), Guthrie (12,035), Ardmore (10,462).

Religion, Education.—The chief religious bodies are Methodist, Baptist, Roman Catholic, Disciples (Christians), and Presbyterians.

The State has a school system embracing elementary and high public schools, normal schools, and also colleges for superior instruction. Separate schools have to be provided for whites and negroes, all children not negroes being classed as white. In 1916 there were in the State public elementary schools 473,702 white and 41,791 negro pupils and 12,721 teachers; 588 public high schools with 27,040 enrolled pupils and 1,467 teachers in 1916. There were in 1915 6 normal schools with 125 teachers and 4,660 students. Total expenditure on education (1916) 9,564,342 dollars. The University (founded at Norman in 1892) had, in 1916, 98 professors and 1,970 students; the Agricultural and Mechanical College (founded in 1891 at Stillwater) had 71 professors and 1,116 students; while the coloured Agricultural and Normal University (founded 1897 at Langston), with 27 instructors, has 823 students.

Oklahoma has 3 hospitals, 6 orphanages, and 2 homes for adults and children, a school for the deaf and one for the blind.

Finance, Defence.—Income and expenditure for the year ending June 30, 1916:—

	Dollars
Balance in hand, 1 July, 1915 . . . . .	1,055,196
Receipts, 1915-16 . . . . .	6,261,512
Total . . . . .	7,316,708
Disbursements, 1915-16 . . . . .	5,393,927
Balance in hand, 1 July, 1916 . . . . .	1,922,781

In 1916 the State debt amounted to 4,367,000 dollars. The assessed value of real property was 700,588,415 dollars and of personal property 932,108,158 dollars.

The militia, called the Oklahoma National Guard, with its headquarters at Oklahoma City, consists of infantry, cavalry, hospital corps, signal corps, and engineer corps: total strength 70 officers and 966 enlisted men (June 30, 1916).

Production and Industry.—Oklahoma is mainly agricultural. In 1910 it had 190,192 farms with a total area of 28,859,358 acres, of which 17,551,337 acres were improved land. The total value of all farm property was 918,198,882 dollars. The yield of maize in 1916 was 53,325,000 bushels; of wheat, 29,585,000 bushels; of oats, 15,080,000 bushels. Other products are potatoes, hay, sorghum, fruits, and cotton. The cotton crop for 1916 on 2,593,000 acres amounted to 835,000 bales, valued at 75,882,000 dollars. Flax is also widely grown. The western part is devoted to stock-raising. On January 1, 1917, the stock comprised 535,000 milch cows, and 1,222,000 other cattle; 1,372,000 hogs, 104,000 sheep, 743,000 horses, and 276,000 mules.

Oklahoma has become an important mineral State in the last few years principally because of the increase in the production of petroleum, which followed the discovery of oil in 1904. In that year 1,400,000 barrels were produced; in 1914 it was 73,631,724 barrels, valued at 57,253,187 dollars. Natural gas is also obtained; in 1914 to the value of 8,050,039 dollars. Coal was obtained (1914) to the amount of 3,988,613 short tons, value 8,204,015 dollars. Lead and zinc are also worked. The value of the mineral output in 1913 was 80,168,820 dollars; in 1914, 78,744,447 dollars. The lead mining industry has quadrupled since September, 1914.

There are few manufacturing industries, flour and grist-milling, cotton ginning, the manufacture of cotton-seed oil and oil cake being the more important. In 1910 the State had a total of 2,310 industrial establishments, employing 13,143 wage-earners, with a total capital of 38,873,000 dollars, the cost of material being 34,153,000 dollars, and the value of the output 53,682,000 dollars. Statistics of leading industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 593.

In 1915 Oklahoma had 6,405 miles of steam railway besides 301 miles of electric railway. The principal lines are the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé; the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf; and the St. Louis and San Francisco; the Missouri, Kansas and Texas; the St. Louis and San Francisco; and the Santa Fé Pacific Railways.

OREGON.

Government.—Oregon was admitted into the Union on February 14, 1859. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Senate of 30 members, chosen for four years (half their number retiring every two years), and a House of 60 Representatives, elected for two years.

The Constitution was amended in 1902, under the terms of which amendment the people reserve to themselves the power to propose laws and amendments to the Constitution and to enact or reject the same at the polls independent of the Legislative Assembly, and also reserve the power at their own option to approve or reject at the polls any Act of the Legislative Assembly. This is known as the initiative and referendum. Not more than eight per cent. of the legal voters are required to propose any measure to be voted upon by the people at the next ensuing general election. Measures thus initiated are enacted or rejected at the polls independently of the Legislative Assembly. Under the referendum, any Bill passed by the Legislative Assembly, except such as are for the preservation of the public peace, health, and safety, may, by petition signed by five per cent. of the legal voters, be referred to the people to be voted on for approval or rejection at the next ensuing general election.

At the General Election held November, 1912, suffrage was extended to women and "every citizen of the United States of the age of 21 years and upwards who shall have resided in the State during the 6 months immediately preceding such election shall be entitled to vote."

The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and three Representatives.

Governor :—James Withycombe, 1915-1919. (5,000 dollars.)

Secretary of State.—Ben. W. Olcott.

The State Capital is Salem. There are 35 counties in the State.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 96,699 square miles, 1,092 square miles being water. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 835,741.

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was :—

Years	Population	Per sq. mile	Years	Population	Per sq. mile
1880	174,768	1·80	1900	413,536	4·40
1890	317,704	3·40	1910	672,765	7·00

In 1910 the population by sex and race was :—

	White.	Negro.	Asiatic.	Indian.	Total.
Male . . .	370,345	907	13,013 3,170		384,265
Female . . .	284,745	585			288,500
Total . . .	655,090	1,492	11,093	5,090	672,765

The foreign-born in 1910 numbered 113,136, of whom 17,958 were German, 12,409 Canadian, 7,998 English, 10,999 Swedish, 4,995 Irish, 5,538 Italian, 3,555 Greeks, and 6,843 Norwegian. The Indian reservations in 1915 comprised 1,889 square miles with a population of 6,481 Indians.

Of the total population in 1910, 45.6 per cent. was urban. The largest town is Portland, with an estimated population of 295,463 in 1916; Salem, 20,278 in 1916; Medford, 14,118; Eugene, 13,572; Astoria, 10,263.

The chief religious bodies in the State are (in order of strength) Catholic, Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Disciples of Christ, and Congregational denominations.

School attendance is compulsory for the full school term for children 9 to 15 years of age. For school year ending June 30, 1916, the 2,519 public schools had 6,173 teachers and 142,365 enrolled pupils, 175 standard 4 year-high schools had 1,050 teachers and 24,000 pupils; and the public normal school had, in 1916, 19 teachers and 441 pupils. Total expenditure on public school education (1916) 7,551,397 dollars. The State supports an Agricultural College at Corvallis, founded in 1870, which has 162 professors in 1915-16 and 2,435 students, and a University, known as the University of Oregon, organised at Eugene in 1876. In 1915 it had 117 professors and 1,661 students. There are also Methodist, Presbyterian, Catholic, Congregational, and Baptist Colleges.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 48, being 2.9 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 1,668, being 100.7 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—The receipts and disbursements of the General Fund of the State, for the year ending September 30, 1916:—

	Dollars
Balance, October 1, 1915 . . . . .	834,400
Receipts, 1915-16 . . . . .	5,907,036
Total . . . . .	6,741,436
Disbursements, 1915-16 . . . . .	5,602,635
Balance, Sept. 30, 1916 . . . . .	1,138,801

The State has no bonded debt. In 1915 the assessed value of taxable property, as equalised, was 934,495,032 dollars.

On June 30, 1916, the Organised Militia, known as the Oregon National Guard, consisted of 96 officers and 1,595 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—Oregon is one of the semi-arid States. In the river valley west of the Cascades there is a good rainfall and almost every variety of crop common to the temperate zone is grown. East of the Cascades lack of rainfall has been to some extent compensated for by irrigation by private companies as well as by State enterprise. Oregon has one-sixth of the standing timber of the United States; in 1915 the forest area was 13,259,992 acres. In 1910 there were 45,502 farms with an acreage of 11,685,110, of which 4,274,803 acres were improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 59,461,828 dollars; in 1912, it was 631,317,255 dollars. The leading crops are wheat (19,550,000 bushels in 1916), hay (1,955,000 tons), and potatoes (825,000 bushels). Oats, barley, and flax-seed are grown to some extent. Sugar beet and hops are important crops. Fruits are grown, especially plums, apples, pears, strawberries, and cherries. There is an active live-stock industry. Horses on January 1, 1917, numbered 286,000; milch cows, 222,000; other cattle 577,000; sheep,

2,484,000; swine, 315,000. In 1915 the wool clip yielded 15,600,000 pounds. The salmon, sturgeon, halibut, and oyster fisheries are abundant.

The State has not risen to much importance as a mining State, although it possesses various mineral resources. In 1914 the output of gold amounted to 76,987 fine ounces, valued at 1,591,461 dollars; of silver 142,552 fine ounces, valued at 78,831 dollars; of copper, 43,330 pounds (6,716 dollars). The output of coal was 51,558 short tons, valued at 143,556 dollars. Granite and other building stones were extracted to the value of 435,066 dollars. Other minerals are occasional gems, cobalt, lead, gypsum, and platinum. The total mineral output in 1913 was valued at 3,563,919 dollars; in 1914, at 3,331,132 dollars.

In 1910 the manufacturing industries of Oregon had 2,246 establishments with an aggregate capital of 89,082,000 dollars; they employed 3,473 salaried officials and 28,750 wage-earners; the cost of the raw material used was 50,552,000 dollars, and the value of the output, 93,005,000 dollars. These industries are associated with the forest, agricultural, pastoral, and fishery products of the State.

Statistics of the more important industries for 1910 are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 596.

Oregon has good water facilities in the Pacific Ocean, the Columbia river, the Willamette river, and the Snake river. The Dalles and Celilo Canal, recently completed, opens the Columbia and Snake rivers to river navigation to a length of 570 miles from the ocean. Large ocean-going vessels can navigate the Columbia as far as Portland. Rivers and harbours are constantly dredged and improved. The value of imports at Portland in 1914 was 3,890,222 dollars, and of exports, 19,961,656 dollars. In 1915 the State had a total railway mileage of 3,114, besides 733 miles of electric railway track. The principal lines are the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company and the Southern Pacific and the so-called 'Hill lines.'

In September, 1916, there were 261 banks in the State, with total deposits of 140,049,599 dollars; of this amount 26,599,467 dollars was in savings deposits, including postal savings accounts; demand deposits amounted to 96,928,966 dollars; time deposits, 16,521,164 dollars.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Government.—Pennsylvania is one of the thirteen original States in the Union. The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. Every male citizen 21 years of age, resident in the State for one year, and in the election district for two months preceding the election, is entitled to vote, provided that he has paid a State or County tax within two years and at least one month before the election. The Senate consists of 50 members chosen for four years, 25 Senators being elected at each General Assembly election. The House of Representatives consists of 206 members chosen for two years.

The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and 36 Representatives.

Governor.—M. G. Brumbaugh, 1915–1919 (10,000 dollars.)

Secretary of the Commonwealth.—Cyrus E. Woods.

For local administration the State is organised in counties, cities, boroughs, and townships. There are 67 counties. The State Capital is Harrisburg.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 45,126 square miles, of which 294 square miles is water area (excluding 891 square miles of Lake Erie). Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 8,522,017.

Years	Population		Years	Population
	Total	Per sq. m.		Total	Per sq. m.
1820	1,049,458	23·3	1900	6,302,115	140·6

Wilkesbare .	76,776	Altoona .	58,659	Williamsport	33,809
Erie .	75,195	Lancaster	50,853	Easton .	30,530

Of the total population in 1910, 60·4 per cent. was urban.

The chief religious bodies in the State are Roman Catholic, Methodist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, and Reformed bodies.

School attendance is compulsory for children 8 to 16 years of age for the full school term, but in rural districts this may be reduced to 70 per cent. of the term. In the year 1915 the 39,306 public schools (elementary and secondary) had 8,917 male and 32,366 female teachers and 737,933 male and 724,004 female enrolled pupils. In 13 public Normal Schools in 1916 there were 171 male and 220 female teachers with 2,133 male and 5,789 female pupils.

Total expenditure on public school education (1916) 46,844,448 dollars. The Pennsylvania State College devotes special attention to modern industrial pursuits and to agriculture. In connection with the college there is an Agricultural Experiment Station which receives from the United States Government an appropriation of 15,000 dollars a year.

The more important academic institutions (July 1, 1916) within the State are as follows :—

Begun	Institutions.	Professors	Students
1740	University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia (non-sect.)	606	8,069
1787	University of Pittsburg (non-sect.)	367	3,957

Charity.—There are two State Penitentiaries, at Philadelphia (Eastern) and at Pittsburg (Western). In Centre County a new State Penitentiary has been constructed. It is considered a model for such institutions. In it all electrocutions will take place. In 1915 the General Assembly ordered the consolidation of the Eastern and Western Penitentiaries. Their inmates will be transferred to the new State Penitentiary. There are 30 State Institutions of which 4 are in state of construction (10 general hospitals, 8 insane, 3 feeble-minded and epileptic, 3 reformatories, 1 home for soldiers and sailors, 2 penitentiaries, 2 deaf and dumb); 1 inebriate); and 7 semi-State institutions (1 insane, 1 feeble-minded and epileptic, 2 blind, 1 reform school, 2 deaf and dumb). There are 198 private hospitals, of which 156 receive State aid, 16 sanatoria of which 5 receive State aid, and 300 homes, of which 109 receive State aid. Of the State-aided homes 48 are for children, 5 for women and children, 11 for males, 29 for females, and 18 for men and women. In these homes there were 19,462 inmates. There are 20 county insane asylums subject to State supervision. On January 1, 1916, there were 17,802 inmates of almshouses, and 5,756 inmates of county jails.

Finance, Defence.—For the year ending Nov. 30, 1916, the receipts, payments, and balances were :—

	Dollars
Balance, December 1, 1915	4,617,202
Receipts, December 1, 1915, to Nov. 30, 1916	36,663,039
Total	41,280,241
Expenditures, December 1, 1915, to Nov. 30, 1916	35,489,553
Balance, Nov. 30, 1916	5,790,688

On Dec. 1, 1916, the outstanding bonds of the State amounted to 651,110 dollars which are covered by a sinking fund of 651,110 dollars. On Dec. 31, 1916, the assessed value of real property amounted to 6,257,996,218 dollars, and the taxable value of personal property amounted to 1,506,172,805 dollars.

The militia, known as the National Guard of Pennsylvania, consists of cavalry, artillery, and infantry. On July 1, 1916, it had a total strength of 763 officers and 14,573 enlisted men. The naval militia consisted of 16 officers and 156 men.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture, market gardening, fruit growing, horticulture and forestry are pursued within the State. In 1916 there were 216,500 farms; the farm area was 18,586,832 acres, of which 12,673,519 acres were improved. In 1916 the total value of all farm property was 1,375,000,000 dollars. In 1916 the yield of wheat was 26,500,000 bushels; oats, 36,523,000 bushels; tobacco, 49,329,000 pounds; maize, 53,043,000 bushels; rye, 4,655,000 bushels; buckwheat, 5,427,500 bushels; potatoes, 18,862,000 bushels; hay, 5,241,270 tons. In 1916 the wool clip amounted to 3,972,150 pounds, valued at 1,390,250 dollars. On January 1, 1917, the farm animals in Pennsylvania were 596,000 horses, 48,000 mules, 980,000 milch cows, 664,000 other cattle, 835,000 sheep, and 1,174,000 swine.

Pennsylvania so far exceeds all the rest of the States in the value of its mineral products as to stand almost alone. This is due principally to the State's leadership in the production of coal. In 1915, 177,390 workers were employed in and about the anthracite coal mines, and 187,734 in and about the bituminous coal mines. In 1915 the output of anthracite coal was 89,377,706 short tons, and of bituminous coal, 157,420,068 short tons. In 1914 the yield of crude petroleum was 8,170,335 barrels (of 42 gallons), valued at 15,573,822 dollars. The value of natural gas produced in the State was 20,401,295 dollars. The output of iron ore (magnetite and hematite) was 400,062 long tons, valued at 399,639 dollars; and of pig-iron 12,871,349 long tons, valued at 197,726,314 dollars. Pennsylvania has important quarries, cement works, and brick and tile works. The output of such undertakings, in 1914, was as follows:—Granite, value 8,153,413 dollars; slate, 3,609,959 dollars; limestone, 2,740,238 dollars; sandstone, 2,937,957 dollars; Portland cement, 26,061,332 barrels (20,977,055 dollars); bricks, tiles, pottery, &c., 21,846,996 dollars. The output of coke was 20,258,393 short tons, valued at 42,447,886 dollars; Pittsburgh, having abundant supplies of coal, has become the principal iron-work centre. The value of the total mineral output of Pennsylvania (excluding pig-iron, of the value of 127,686,331 dollars, coke, and other products from coal) in 1913 was 506,341,809 dollars; in 1914, 452,374,085 dollars.

According to the census of manufactures in 1910, there were in Pennsylvania, 27,563 manufacturing establishments, with an aggregate capital amounting to 2,749,005,975 dollars, employing 94,885 salaried officials and 877,543 wage-earners. The salaries in the year amounted to 110,897,242 dollars, and the wages to 455,626,790 dollars. The cost of the raw material used was 1,582,559,988 dollars, and the value of the output was 2,626,742,034 dollars.

Statistics of the more important industries, or groups of industries (according to the census of manufactures of 1910), are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 600.

The textile manufactures are chiefly worsted goods, woollens, hosiery, carpets, silk goods, and cotton goods.

Pennsylvania, owing to the abundance of tanning substances, is the largest leather producing State in the Union; 60 per cent. of the glazed kid of the United States is made in Philadelphia. In 1910 the leather industry employed 16,532 workers, earning a total wage of 7,938,107 dollars. In 1910 there were cotton mills employing 16,293 workers, earning a total of 7,034,407 dollars.

The total value of imports at the port of Philadelphia during the year 1915 was 69,473,983 dollars, and of exports 132,437,556 dollars. Twenty-six steamship lines traded with the port. One hundred and forty-four American vessels in cargo from foreign ports with a tonnage of 224,526 tons entered, and 127 American vessels in cargo with a tonnage of 164,214 tons cleared for foreign ports. Six hundred and thirty-four foreign vessels in cargo with a tonnage of 1,184,356 tons, and 283 foreign vessels in ballast with a tonnage of 644,775 tons entered from foreign ports, and 746 foreign vessels in cargo with a tonnage of 1,564,505 tons, and 145 foreign vessels in ballast with a tonnage of 180,607 tons cleared for foreign ports. Four thousand one hundred and forty-two vessels, including steamships, ships, barks, brigs, schooners and barges arrived, coastwise, and 4,165 vessels sailed coastwise. Of the total value of imports for 1915, 33,300,813 dollars were dutiable. The import duties received at Philadelphia during 1915 amounted to 11,587,759 dollars. In 1914 Philadelphia exported 54,994 tons of anthracite coal valued at 255,166 dollars, and 646,551 tons of bituminous coal valued at 1,868,050 dollars. In 1915 Pennsylvania contained 12,954 miles of steam railway, and 4,533 miles of electric railway track.

RHODE ISLAND.

Constitution and Government.—The earliest settlers in the region which now forms the State of Rhode Island were colonists from Massachusetts who had been driven forth on account of their non-acceptance of the prevailing religious beliefs. The first of the settlements was made in 1636; and their numbers and importance quickly increased, settlers of every creed being welcomed. In 1647 a patent was granted for the government of the settlements, and on July 8, 1663, a charter was executed recognising the settlers as forming a body corporate and politic by the name of the English colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations. On May 29, 1790, the State accepted the Federal Constitution and entered the Union as one of the 13 original States. The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate has 39 members, besides the Governor who is ex-officio President, and the Lieutenant-Governor who is ex-officio a Senator. The House of Representatives consists of 100 members. Every male citizen, 21 years of age, who has resided in the State for 2 years, and is duly registered, is qualified to vote for any State officer.

Governor.—R. L. Beeckman, 1917–19 (3,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—J. Fred Parker.

The State is represented in the Federal Congress by 2 Senators and 3 Representatives.

The State is divided into 5 counties and 39 cities and towns. The State Capital is Providence.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Government.—South Dakota was admitted into the Union on February 22, 1889. Full rights of suffrage are enjoyed by all male persons over 21 years of age who are, or who propose to become, citizens of the United States, and who have resided in the United States for one year, in South Dakota for six months, in the county for thirty days, and in the election precinct for ten days, immediately preceding any election.

Legislative power is vested in a Senate and a House of Representatives; but to the people is reserved the right that not less than 5 per cent. of the electors may (1) propose measures which the legislature shall enact and submit to a vote of the general body of electors; (2) demand a referendum in respect of laws enacted by the legislature, before such laws take effect, save in cases of urgency. The Senate consists of not less than 25 and not more than 45 members, and the House of Representatives of not less than 75, nor more than 135 members.

Amendments to the Constitution must be sanctioned by the direct vote of the people, at the first general election after such amendments have been approved by a majority of the members elected to each House of the legislature.

Governor.—Peter Norbeck, 1917–19 (3,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Frank M. Rood.

The State sends two Senators and three Representatives to the Federal Congress. For purposes of local government the State is divided into 63 organised counties, which are subdivided into townships and municipal corporations. The State Capital is Pierre.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Land area, 77,615 square miles, of which 747 square miles is water area. The area of the Indian reservations in 1915 was 985 square miles, having a population of 21,082 Indians.

Production and Industry.—Texas is one of the most important agricultural States of the Union. In 1910 it had 417,770 farms with an area of 112,435,067 acres of farmland, of which 27,360,666 acres was improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1911 was 2,218,645,164 dollars. In the arid region of Texas and New Mexico an area of 160,000 acres is to be reclaimed under the Federal Reclamation Act. There are at present 2,950,488 acres of irigable lands in Texas, of which 536,234 acres were actually irrigated in 1914. The chief crops in 1916 were (in bushels) maize, 131,100,000 ; wheat, 13,200,000 ; oats, 42,750,000 ; rice, 10,575,000 ; potatoes, 2,000,000. The yield of cotton in 1916 covered 11,517,000 acres and yielded 3,775,000 bales, valued at 350,796,000 dollars. Other products are tobacco (140,000 pounds in 1916), cane-sugar, sorghum, vegetables, and fruits (especially peaches). The State has a very great live-stock industry ; on January 1, 1917, it contained 1,156,000 horses, 760,000 mules, 1,175,000 milch cows, 5,482,000 other cattle, 2,328,000 sheep, and 3,229,000 swine. The wool clip in 1915 amounted to 9,280,000 pounds of wool.

Texas ranks second among the States in the production of quicksilver. Coal is also of great importance. The coal mines of Texas in 1914 yielded an output of 2,323,773 short tons, valued at 3,922,459 dollars. The production of petroleum was 20,068,184 barrels (of 42 gallons), valued at 14,942,848 dollars. Natural gas was produced to the value of 2,469,770 dollars. Other minerals worked were salt (334,979 barrels, valued at 251,493 dollars), cement (value 2,686,653 dollars), gypsum, granite, sandstone, limestone. The clay products (chiefly bricks) amounted to the value of 2,280,987 dollars. The asphalt production amounted to 608,132 dollars. The value of the mineral output (including some gold and silver, coal products, lead, zinc, and sulphur) amounted in 1913 to 31,666,910 dollars ; in 1914 to 30,363,426 dollars.

In 1910 there were in the State 4,588 manufacturing establishments with an aggregate capital of 216,876,000 dollars, 9,849 salaried officers, and 70,230 wage-earners. The cost of material used in the year was 178,179,000 dollars, and the value of the output was 272,896,000 dollars. Statistics of some industries (1910 census) are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 616.

Other important industries are printing and publishing (aggregate output 11,587,000 dollars in 1910), bakery and confectionery, planing-mill work, cotton manufactures, copper-work, ice manufacture, and lead smelting and refining.

A large trade passes through the port of Galveston, where in 1913 the imports from abroad were valued at 7,820,638 dollars and the exports to foreign countries at 281,457,858 dollars. The exports comprise cotton, grain, flour, meat products, &c., the produce of many States and Territories. Galveston is by far the most important outlet for the cotton grown in the United States, and as a commercial port it is now second only to New York. A permanent causeway over 2 miles in length, to connect Galveston with the mainland, was opened to traffic in May, 1912. The level of the town has been raised so as to protect it from storms. The United States has constructed an immigration station at a cost of 70,000 dollars. The railways in the State (June 30, 1915) have a total mileage of 15,831 miles, of which 284 miles were constructed during the fiscal year 1913-14. The principal north-south lines are the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, International and Great Northern, Santa Fe, and the principal east-west lines are the Southern Pacific, Texas Pacific and the Houston and Texas Central. There are 977 miles of electric inter-urban railway in active operation in Texas and 472 miles are under construction or proposed. There are also 91 miles of inter-urban lines operated by gasoline power.

There are 1,047 miles of navigable water in the rivers of Texas over which there was moved 1,867,158 short tons of traffic in the calendar year 1910. The long coast line with its good harbour facilitates traffic by sea.

British Consul at Galveston.—Alexander Spencer Perceval.

There is also a vice-consul at Galveston.

UTAH.

Constitution and Government.—Utah, which had been acquired by the United States during the Mexican war, was, in 1847, settled by Mormons, and on Sept. 9, 1850, organised as a Territory. It was admitted as a State into the Union on July 16, 1894.

The Legislature consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives; but the Constitution provides for the initiation of any desired legislation by the legal voters or such number of them as may be determined by law, and such voters may require any law passed by less than a two-thirds vote of each House of the Legislature to be submitted to the voters of the State before coming into effect.

The Senate (in part renewed every two years) consists of 18 members, elected for four years; the House of Representatives has 46 members elected for two years. Qualified as electors are all citizens, male or female, who, not being idiots, insane, or criminals have resided one year in the State, four months in the county, and 60 days in the precinct in which the election is held.

Governor.—Simon Bamberger, 1917–21 (6,000 dollars.)

Secretary of State.—Harden Bennion.

There are 28 counties in the State. The Capital is Salt Lake City.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 84,990 square miles, of which 2,806 square miles is water. The area of the Indian reservations in 1915 was 2,334 square miles, and the population, 1,794 Indians.

Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 434,083.

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was:—

Years	Pop.	Per sq. mile	Years	Pop.	Per sq. mile
1880	143,963	1·8	1900	276,749	3·4
1890	210,779	2·6	1910	373,351	4·5

In 1910 the population by sex and race was:—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . . .	192,118	691	4,054		196,863
Female . . . .	174,465	453	1,570		176,488
Total . . . .	366,583	1,144	2,501	3,123	373,351

Of the total in 1910, 65,882 were foreign-born, of whom 18,083 were English, 3,963 German, 4,039 Greek, 7,227 Swedes, 1,657 Irish. In 1914, 3,387 immigrants arriving at United States ports gave Utah as their destination. Of these 934 were Anglo-Saxon, 908 Latin, 136 Slav, 768 Greeks, and the others were Jews, Mongolians, or cosmopolitan.

Of the total population in 1910, 46·3 per cent. was urban. The largest city is Salt Lake City with an estimated population of 117,399 in 1916. Ogden in 1916 had 31,404 inhabitants, and Provo, 10,091.

Latter-day Saints form about 75 per cent. of the Church membership of the State. There are Catholics, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, Christian Scientists, and Congregationalists in small numbers.

In 1910 the percentage of illiterates in the population was only 2·5, the number being 6,821, of whom 3,636 were foreign-born. School attendance for 20 weeks annually (10 consecutive), in large cities 30 weeks (10 consecutive), is compulsory on children from 8 to 16 years of age. In 1916 the 642 public elementary schools had 2,713 teachers and 98,880 enrolled pupils; 44 public high schools had 429 teachers and 9,479 pupils. A State normal school had 853 pupils in 1916 and 34 teachers; it is maintained in connection with the university. The Latter-day Saints (or Mormons) also maintain a Church Teachers' Summer School, which in 1915 had 15 instructors and 234 students. The same church also has missionary correspondence schools, which in December, 1915, had two instructors and 148 correspondent students. The University of Utah was organised 1850, and had 99 instructors and 1,503 students in 1915. Utah has a school of arts and sciences and a State school of mines. The Utah agricultural college (founded in 1890) has 86 instructors and 1,196 students. Both of these institutions receive annual grants from the State. The Mormon Church maintains the Brigham Young University at Provo, organised in 1875, which in 1915 had 75 instructors and 1,263 students; the Brigham Young College at Logan, organised in 1878, which in 1915 had 49 instructors, and 847 students; the Latter-day Saints' University at Salt Lake City, organised in 1890, had 47 instructors and 1,280 students; also 7 academies scattered throughout the State having 81 instructors and 1,749 students. Total expenditure on education in 1914, 4,674,732 dollars.

Charity.—Apart from almshouses and asylums for imbeciles there are 13 benevolent institutions within the State. Eight of these are hospitals, one of which belongs to the Federal Government, one to Salt Lake City, and one to Salt Lake County. The State has an institution for the deaf, the dumb, and the blind, with 146 inmates in 1915; an industrial school with 141 juveniles under its control, and a mental hospital with 536 patients in 1915. There are three orphanages and various other charitable institutions (including seven hospitals) provided by private associations or religious bodies. On January 1, 1916, the almshouses had 219 pauper inmates. In 1915 the counties spent 196,311 dollars for relief of indigents.

Finance, Defence.—For 12 months, ending November 30, 1916, the revenue and expenditure were :—

	Dollars
Cash on hand, Nov. 30, 1915 . . . . .	877,924
Receipts, 1915-16 . . . . .	5,152,135
Total . . . . .	6,030,059
Total disbursements, 1915-16 . . . . .	4,645,345
Cash on hand, December 1, 1916 . . . . .	1,384,714

The assessed valuation, 1916, amounted to 301,479,559 dollars. The bonded debt of the State on November 30, 1916, amounted to 2,860,000 dollars.

By the State Statistician the total value of all property in 1915 was estimated at 674,290,211 dollars.

The National Guard, with headquarters at Salt Lake City, consists of cavalry, artillery and infantry, with signal and hospital corps. Total strength (December 31, 1916), 32 officers and 546 men.

Production and Industry.—The area of unappropriated and unsurveyed lands within the State on June 30, 1915, was 28,076,285 acres, of which 13,545,799 acres were surveyed and 19,818,442 acres unsurveyed. The State contains 7,449,160 acres of state forest in 1915. In 1910 it had 21,676 farms with a total area of 3,397,699 acres, of which 1,368,211 acres were improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 150,795,201 dollars.

In 1916 the chief crops were wheat, 6,900,000 bushels; oats, 4,480,000 bushels; potatoes, 3,600,000 bushels; hay (chiefly alfalfa), 845,000 tons. Maize, barley, and rye are also grown. The production of beet sugar in 1915 amounted to 85,200 short tons. Much attention is paid to vegetables and fruit trees. There is a considerable live-stock industry. On January 1, 1917, the numbers were: horses and mules 140,000, milch cows 91,000, other cattle 408,000, sheep 2,089,000, swine 101,000. The wool clip (1915) yielded 16,000,000 pounds of wool, valued at 3,520,000 dollars.

The State is unique in the diversity of its metal production, particularly of precious and semi-precious metals, having valuable mines, chiefly gold, silver, copper, and coal. The output of gold in 1915 was 189,107 fine ounces, valued at 3,908,000 dollars; silver, 12,724,000 fine ounces (6,243,939 dollars); copper 182,589,000 pounds (31,579,191 dollars); lead, 219,098,000 pounds (10,166,147 dollars). Other products are manganese ores, gypsum, petroleum, sulphur. Zinc was obtained in 1915 to the amount of 22,643,000 pounds (3,325,362 dollars); coal 3,083,676 tons (5,858,994 dollars). Salt was collected, 68,000 tons (169,000 dollars). The total value of the mineral output in 1915 was 65,000,000 dollars; in 1914, 45,624,698 dollars.

In 1910 there were 749 manufacturing establishments employing 1,660 salaried officials and 11,785 wage earners. Their aggregate capital amounted to 52,627,000 dollars; cost of material in a year 41,266,000 dollars; value of output 61,989,000 dollars. The statistics of the more important industries in 1910 are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 619.

There are no navigable streams, but singularly good facilities for transportation. In 1915 the State had 2,299 miles of main line, the principal railways being the Denver and Rio Grande (762 miles), the Oregon Short Line (242), the Central Pacific (273), the Union Pacific (75), the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake railway (503), Western Pacific (122 miles).

There are also about 355 miles of electric railway.

In 1915, there were 12 savings banks in the State with 53,764 depositors who had to their credit 13,662,372 dollars, being 253.16 dollars to each depositor.

VERMONT.

Government.—Vermont was admitted into the Union as a State on February 18, 1791. The Constitution in force at the time of admission was that of 1786. In 1793 a new Constitution was adopted which, with amendments made in 1828, 1836, 1850, 1870, 1883, and 1913, is still in force. The State legislature consists of a Senate of 30 members and a House of Representatives of 246. Electors are all men of United States citizenship with certain residential qualifications.

The State sends two Senators and two Representatives to the United States Congress.

Governor.—Horace Graham, 1917–1919 (2,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—G. W. Bailey.

The seat of the State Executive is at Montpelier. The State is divided into fourteen counties.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 9,564 square miles, of which 440 square miles is water. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 363,699.

Years	Population		Years	Population
	Total	Per sq. mile		Total	Per sq. mile
1860	315,098	34.5	1900	343,641	37.7
1880	332,286	36.4	1910	355,956	39.0

The population in 1910 according to sex and race was:—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	181,372	1,173	23		182,568
Female . . .	172,926	448	14		173,388
Total . . .	354,298	1,621	11	26	355,956

The State contains a very high proportion of English. In 1910 the foreign-born population numbered 49,861, of whom 14,643 were Canadian French, 11,415 Canadian English, 4,938 Irish, 2,463 English, and 2,615 Scottish. The largest cities are Burlington, with an estimated population in 1916 of 21,617; Rutland, 14,831; Barre, 12,169. Of the population in 1910, 47·5 per cent. was urban.

The religious denominations are Roman Catholic, Congregational, Methodist, Baptist, and Protestant Episcopal, in the order given.

School attendance during the full school term is compulsory for children from 8 to 15 years of age. No child under 16 who has not completed the 9 year school course may be employed in any railway, factory, mine, or quarry work, or as messenger during school hours. In 1916 the 2,465 public schools had 2,992 teachers and 65,050 enrolled pupils. In the two public normal schools there were 23 teachers and 144 students. The University of Vermont (1800) had, in 1916, 110 instructors and 640 students; Middlebury College (1800) had 30 instructors and 372 students; Norwich University (1834) had 16 instructors and 195 students.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 383, being 107·6 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 395, being 111·0 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—The revenue and expenditure for the year ending June 30, 1916, were:—

	Dollars
Cash balance July 1, 1915 . . . . .	107,849
Receipts, 1915-16 . . . . .	3,960,725

Disbursements, 1915-16 . . . . .	3,824,579

Cash balance July 1, 1916 . . . . .	243,995
-------------------------------------	---------

The assessed value of real property in 1916 was 70,566,493,521 dollars, and of personal property, 58,951,971,201 dollars.

The militia, called the National Guard of Vermont, had, on June 30, 1916, 1,045 enlisted men (cavalry and infantry) and 78 officers.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is the most important occupation within the State. In 1910 the State contained 32,709 farms with a total area of 4,663,577 acres, of which 1,633,965 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 145,399,728 dollars. In 1916 the rural population was 52 per cent. of the total population. The chief agricultural crop is hay (1,666,000 tons in 1916), but cereals are still grown in large quantities; in 1915 the yield of oats was 2,560,000 bushels; of maize, 1,935,000 bushels; wheat, 25,000 bushels; and barley, 412,000 bushels. The production of potatoes in 1916 was 2,592,000 bushels; of tobacco, 160,000 pounds; apples, and maple sugar and syrup are important.

Cattle raising, especially of milk cows, is one of the chief agricultural pursuits. In 1910 Vermont had 430,314 cattle on farms, or nearly one-third of all the cattle in New England. The value of livestock on Vermont farms in 1910 was 22,642,766 dollars. Vermont leads all the States of the Union in pounds of butter per capita, pounds of butter per farm, pounds of butter per cow, and in ratio of dairy cows to population. On January 1, 1917, Vermont had 281,000 milch cows, 172,000 other cattle, 89,000 horses, 100,000 sheep, and 113,000 swine. In 1915 the wool clip from 83,000 sheep yielded 589,000 pounds of wool.

The forests of the State provide material for extensive timber and lumber trade, and flourishing wood pulp manufacture. Other industries are flour-milling, foundry and machine-shop work, and the manufacture of hosiery and other woollen goods. According to the returns of the Federal census of manufactures in 1910, there were in Vermont 1,958 manufacturing establishments with an aggregate capital of 73,470,000 dollars, paying wages to the annual amount of 17,272,000 dollars, using raw material costing 34,823,000 dollars, and giving an output valued at 68,310,000 dollars.

The statistics of the more important industries in 1910 are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 622.

The marble quarries, first opened in 1785, produce half of the marble of the United States. In 1914 the marble output of Vermont was valued at 3,490,971 dollars. The granite quarries in 1914 gave an output valued at 6,635,477 dollars; slate in 1915, 1,234,891 dollars. Fibrous talc was extracted worth 363,465 dollars. Metals occur only in small quantities. The total mineral output in 1913 was valued at 9,647,985 dollars; in 1914, at 8,665,867 dollars.

There are (1915) 1,073 miles of railway in the State chiefly managed by the Central of Vermont, Boston and Maine, and the Rutland. There are also electric railways with 125 miles of track. The lakes, rivers, and canals are also used for traffic with other States and with Canada.

On June 30, 1915, there were 20 mutual savings banks and 37 savings banks and trust companies in the State with 218,372 depositors having to their credit 95,469,725 dollars, being 437.18 dollars to each depositor.

VIRGINIA.

Constitution and Government.—The first English Charter for settlements in America was that granted by James I. in 1606 for the planting of colonies in Virginia. The State was one of the thirteen original States in the Union. On the outbreak of the civil war in 1861, Virginia, after long hesitation, decided to join the seceding States, a course objected to by the western portion of the State, which in 1863 was admitted into the Union as West Virginia.

The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Delegates, the former containing not more than 40 nor less than 33 members, and the latter not more than 100 nor less than 90. Senators are elected for 4 years. The Senate contains 40 members. The House of Delegates contains 100 members, elected for 2 years. Qualified as electors are (with few exceptions) all male citizens 21 years of age, resident in the State for 2 years and in the county, city, town, or precinct for which the election is held for 30 days, who have paid their State poll-taxes and registered.

The State sends to the Federal Congress 2 Senators and 10 Representatives.

Governor.—H. C. Stuart, Feb. 1914—Feb. 1918 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of Commonwealth.—B. O. James.

The State Capital is Richmond.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 42,627 square miles, of which 2,365 square miles is water area. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 2,192,019.

Years	Population		Years	Population
	Total	Per sq. mile		Total	Per sq. mile

Roanoke . . .	43,284	Petersburg .	25,582	Alexandria . .	17,846

The principal churches are Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, and Protestant Episcopal.

Elementary instruction is free, and the legislature may make it compulsory between the ages of 8 and 12. No child under 12 may be employed in any mining or manufacturing work. White and coloured children must not be taught in the same school.

In 1914 Virginia had public schools with 11,336 teachers (1,953 male and 9,383 female) with 427,937 enrolled pupils. In 1915 there were 5 public normal schools with 84 teachers and 956 students. Statistics of the more important institutions for higher instruction (for both sexes) are (1916):—

Founded	Name and Place of College	Professors, etc.	Students
1693	William and Mary Coll., Williamsburg (State)	19	242
1749	Washington and Lee University, Lexington	30	513
1825	University of Virginia, Charlottesville (State)	79	1,100
1865	Virginia Union University, Richmond (Bapt.)	18	320

Virginia has (1916) 5 schools of theology, with 241 students; 3 of law, with 473 students; 3 of medicine, with 488 students; 2 of dentistry, with 50 students; and 2 of pharmacy, with 76 students, besides many business schools, and schools for industrial and manual training.

Charity.—Besides almshouses and asylums for the insane, &c., there are within the State 115 benevolent institutions, most of which have been provided by private charity or by religious bodies. On November 1, 1913, the almshouses contained 4,514 pauper inmates.

Finance, Defence.—The revenue and expenditure for year ending September 30, 1915, are shown thus:—

	Dollars

Total . . . . .	9,062,386
Disbursements, 1914-15. . . . .	7,994,572
Balance, September 30, 1915 . . . . .	1,067,814

The bonded debt of the State amounts (October 1, 1915) to 24,123,139 dollars. The assessed valuation of property for 1914 was: Real estate, 630,081,358 dollars; personal, 374,503,484 dollars; total, 1,007,584,852 dollars. Besides this the assessment of the Public Service Corporations in 1915 amounted to 159,741,050 dollars.

The organised military force of the State, called the Virginia Volunteers, consists of infantry, artillery, and cavalry, with (on June 30, 1916) 197 officers and 2,808 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—In 1910 there were 184,018 farms in Virginia with an area of 19,495,636 acres, of which 9,870,058 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 625,065,383 dollars. In 1916 the chief crops were maize, 60,990,000 bushels; wheat, 16,250,000 bushels; oats, 5,750,000 bushels; potatoes, 16,250,000 bushels. The tobacco area was 190,000 acres, yielding 129,200,000 pounds of tobacco valued at 18,863,000 dollars. The cotton crop for 1916 covered 44,000 acres and yielded 29,000 bales. The manufacture of tobacco and of cigars, &c., is an important industry and the Virginia cotton mills consume much more cotton than the State produces.

The domestic animals on January 1, 1917, were 361,000 horses, 64,000 mules, 373,000 milch cows, 486,000 other cattle, 686,000 sheep, 1,023,000 swine. The wool clip in 1915 yielded 2,063,000 pounds of wool.

The State has valuable fisheries, especially of oysters.

Virginia has considerable mineral wealth. In 1914 the output comprised coal, 7,959,535 short tons (8,032,448 dollars); granite to the value of 2,152,378 dollars; lime, 763,775 dollars; claywork (1,472,348 dollars); pig iron, 197,981 long tons (2,481,197 dollars); manganese ores, 2,946 long tons (23,089 dollars); besides talc and soapstone, titanium, and other products. The value of the mineral output in 1913, including iron ore, but not pig-iron, was 17,178,580 dollars; in 1914, 16,406,347 dollars.

There are extensive ironworks in the State, and flour-milling, manufactures of paper and pulp, trunks and bags, glass, and many other articles are prosperous. According to the Federal census of manufactures in 1910 there were in the State 5,685 manufacturing establishments, with an aggregate capital of 216,892,000 dollars, employing 8,551 salaried officials and 105,676 wage-earners; wages amount annually to 38,154,000 dollars: the cost of raw materials used amounted to 125,583,000 dollars, and the value of the output was 219,794,000 dollars. Statistics of the more important industries for 1910 are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 625.

In 1915 there were 4,729 miles of steam railway in the State; and 602 miles of electric railway. The telegraph and telephone companies had 12,090 miles of line.

On June 30, 1915, there were in the State 20 savings banks, with 50,162 depositors, who had to their credit 10,556,642 dollars, being 210.45 dollars to each depositor.

There are British Vice-Consuls at Newport News, Norfolk, and Richmond.

WASHINGTON.

Government.—Washington, formerly part of Oregon, was created a Territory in 1853, and was admitted into the Union as a State on February 22, 1889. The Legislature consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives, the latter composed of not less than 63 nor more than 99 members (actually 97 in 1915), the number of Senators being not more than half nor less than one-third of that of members of the House of Representatives (actually 41 in 1915). The membership of both Houses is apportioned anew every 10 years according to the results of the Federal decennial census. Senators are elected for 4 years, half their number retiring every 2 years; members of the House of Representatives are elected for 2 years.

Qualified as voters are (with some exceptions) all male and, since general election of 1910, all female citizens 21 years of age who have lived in the State 1 year, in the county 90 days, in the city, town, ward, or precinct where they vote 30 days, and who can read and speak English.

Governor.—Ernest Lister, 1917–1921 (6,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—I. M. Howell.

To the United States Congress the State sends 2 Senators and (since 1911) 5 Representatives.

The State contains 39 counties. The State capital is Olympia.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 69,127 square miles, of which 2,291 square miles is water area. Estimated population on July 1, 1916, 1,534,221.

Years	Population	Per sq. mile	Years	Population	Per sq. mile
1880	75,116	1.1	1900	518,103	7.8
1890	357,232	5.3	1910	1,141,990	17.1

In 1910 the population by sex and birth was :—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total

The foreign born in 1910 numbered 256,241, of whom 19,430 were English, 10,180 Irish, 39,482 Canadian, 29,388 German, 32,199 Swedish, 10,961 Russian, 13,121 Italian, 3,447 Swiss, and 2,340 French. There are 18 Indian reservations with a total area (1915) of 3,373 square miles, the largest being The Colville, which contains 1,051,488 acres; and a total population (1915) of 11,423.

The principal cities are Seattle, with a population estimated on July 1, 1916, at 348,639 inhabitants; Tacoma, 112,770; Spokane, 150,323; Bellingham, 32,985; Everett, 35,485; Walla Walla, 25,136; North Yakima, 20,951; Aberdeen, 20,334; Vancouver, 13,180; and Hoquiam, 11,666. Olympia, the State capital, has about 10,000. Of the total population in 1910, 53.0 per cent. was urban.

The prevailing forms of religion in the State are Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Baptist, and Congregationalist. In the public schools formal religious teaching, or regular reading from the Bible, is not permitted, but moral training is given and moral principles inculcated. Education is given free, and compulsory for children from 8 to 16 years of age. In 1916, 3,404 public elementary schools were taught by 7,520 teachers and attended by 210,166 children; 518 public high schools had 1,775 teachers and 35,253 pupils in 1916. In 1916 three State normal schools had 130 teachers and 2,837 students. The total expenditure for the school year 1915–16, was 14,333,342 dollars.

The University of Washington, founded 1861, near Seattle, had, in 1916, 205 professors and teachers and 4,055 students; and the University of Puget Sound founded in 1903 at Tacoma had 23 professors and teachers and 394 students. The State College at Pullman for science and agriculture, founded 1892, had 138 professors or teachers and 1,527 students. Gonzaga College (R. C.), founded 1887, at Spokane, has 24 professors and 571 students; Whitman College (Cong.), founded 1866, at Walla Walla, has 25 professors and 250 students.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 564, being 49.4 per 100,000, and of prisoners in penal institutions 1,652, being 144.7 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—For the year ending September 30, 1916, the revenue and expenditure were as follows :—

	Dollars
Balance in hand, Oct. 1, 1915 . . . . .	4,842,465
Receipts, 1915 to 1916 . . . . .	12,476,533

The assessed valuation of real property in 1916 amounted to 701,686,312 dollars, and of personal property to 124,630,847 dollars. In 1916 the valuation was of railway roads, 138,652,569 dollars; electric railways, 19,446,483 dollars; telegraph, 369,580 dollars. The outstanding bonded debt was paid off in 1911.

The organised militia consists (June 30, 1916) of 90 officers and 1,358 enlisted men, consisting of infantry, cavalry, signal corps, and hospital corps and naval militia. The men enlist for 3 years, taking oath to volunteer immediately on call from the Federal Government.

The Federal Government has a large dry dock and naval dépôt at Bremerton, on Puget Sound. Garrisons of the regular army are maintained at Spokane, Seattle, Vancouver, and three coast defence points at the entrance to Puget Sound and one at Bremerton Navy Yard.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is successfully pursued in the State, not least in the arid region east of the Cascade Mountains, where there are extensive systems of irrigation.

In 1910 there were 56,192 farms with an acreage of 11,712,235, of which 6,373,311 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 637,543,411 dollars. The wheat yield in 1916 was 37,635,000 bushels; barley, 6,814,000 bushels; oats, 14,300,000 bushels; corn, 1,406,000 bushels. In Pacific coast region, as well as in the eastern counties, fruit of various sorts is produced in vast quantities. On January 1st, 1917, the domestic animals were 305,000 horses, 18,000 mules, 263,000 milch cows, 275,000 other cattle, 585,000 sheep, 283,000 swine. The wool clip in 1915 amounted to 3,818,000 pounds of wool. The fruit-growing area has doubled within the last two years, and fruit-canning has become an industry in the State. The timber wealth of the State has an area (1915) of 9,953,166 acres.

Coal is mined in large quantities, the output in 1914 having been 3,064,820 tons, valued at 6,751,511 dollars. In the same year there was an output of gold valued at 557,173 dollars; of silver, valued at 146,468 dollars; of copper, 778,728 pounds (103,571 dollars). The quarries yielded granite, sandstone, marble, and limestone to the value of 1,600,615 dollars. Clay products in 1914 amounted to the value of 1,809,491 dollars. Cement was produced to the amount of 2,303,433 dollars. Lead and zinc are worked; antimony, arsenic, molybdenum, tungsten, and platinum are found. The value of the mineral output in 1913 was 17,579,743 dollars; in 1914, 13,830,739 dollars.

In 1910 the manufacturing industries had 3,674 establishments with an aggregate capital of 222,261,000 dollars; they employed 7,734 salaried officials and 69,120 wage-earners; they used raw material costing 117,888,000 dollars, and gave an output valued at 220,746,421 dollars. They are connected chiefly with the products of the forests, agriculture, grazing, fisheries, and mining. The most important industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 628.

At the Puget Sound ports, including Seattle, Tacoma and Port Townsend, in the year 1916, the imports amounted to 135,580,910 dollars, and the exports to 162,935,344 dollars.

The railways within the State had, in 1915, 5,559 miles (main track), besides 1,156 miles of electric railway. The principal railways operating in the State are the Northern Pacific Railway Company and subsidiary companies, Great Northern Railway Company, Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company, the Bellingham and Northern Railway, the Columbia and Puget Sound Railroad Company, the Tacoma Eastern Railroad Company and the Spokane and British Columbia Railroad Company; the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railway; the Union Pacific, and the North Coast Railways each have a terminus at Seattle.

Steamers ply on the Columbia and other rivers. Several lines of steamers sail regularly to ports on the Pacific coast, to Japan and China, the Philippines, and other eastern countries, and to Europe. At the Puget Sound ports the traffic facilities, both railway and shipping, are being multiplied.

In the year ending June 30, 1915, there were in the State 16 savings banks with 58,327 depositors with 19,229,020 dollars to their credit, being 329 dollars to each depositor.

There are British Vice-Consuls at Port Townsend, Gray's Harbour, Port Angeles, Seattle and Tacoma.

WEST VIRGINIA

Government.—In 1862, after the State of Virginia, as a whole, had seceded from the Union, the electors of the western portion ratified an ordinance providing for the formation of a new State, and this new State was admitted into the Union on December 31, 1862, under the name of West Virginia.

The Legislature consists of the Senate and the House of Delegates. The right to vote is given to every citizen (with necessary exceptions) 21 years of age and resident in the State one year and in the county sixty days prior to the election. The Senate is composed of 30 members elected for a term of four years in such a manner that half the Senate is renewed biennially. The House of Delegates consists of 86 members elected biennially.

Governor.—John J. Cornwell, March 4, 1917—March 4, 1921 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Houston G. Young.

The State is represented in the Federal Congress by two Senators elected by the Legislature for 6 years, and five Representatives chosen for 2 years, for the election of whom the State is divided into five congressional districts.

For local administration the State is divided into 55 counties. The State Capital is Charleston.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 24,170 square miles, of which 148 square miles is water area. The estimated population on July 1, 1916, 1,386,038.

Year	Population		Year	Population
	Total	Per sq. mile		Total	Per sq. mile
1880	618,457	25.7	1900	958,800	39.9
1890	762,794	31.8	1910	1,221,119	50.8

In 1910 the population by sex and race was :—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	607,326	36,607	111		644,044
Female . . .	549,491	27,566	18		577,075
Total . . .	1,156,817	64,173	93	36	1,221,119

Of the total in 1910, 57,218 were born in foreign countries and of these 6,827 came from Germany, 2,292 from Ireland, 17,292 from Italy, and 3,511 from England. Urban population was 18.7 per cent. of the whole. In 1916 the estimated population of the principal cities was: Wheeling, 43,377; Huntington, 45,629; Charleston, 29,941; Parkersburg, 20,612.

The most numerous denominations are Methodists, Baptists, Roman Catholics, United Brethren and Presbyterians. Most of the denominations have colleges within the State.

Elementary education is free for all from 6 to 21 years of age, and school attendance for 20 weeks annually is compulsory for all children between the ages of 8 and 14 years. The public or free schools are non-sectarian. A rigid code of moral instruction is enforced, but no sectarian teaching is permitted. In 1915 the 6,920 public elementary schools had 293,574 enrolled pupils and 9,447 teachers, and 152 public high schools had 637 teachers and 11,296 pupils in 1915. The 6 public normal schools had 101 teachers and 2,464 students in 1915. Expenditure on education in 1915, 7,799,168 dollars.

The West Virginia University, founded in 1868, at Morgantown offers higher instruction free to all residents of the State, and at nominal fees to those from other States. In 1916 it had 113 professors and 1,185 students. Bethany College (1841), under the control of the Christian Church, has 27 instructors and 321 students. West Virginia Wesleyan College (1890), a Methodist institution, has 26 instructors and 527 students.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 808, being 66.2 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions, 1,475, being 120.8 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—The State Fund revenue and expenditure for the year ending June 30, 1914, were as follows :—

	Dollars
Balance, June 30, 1914 . . . . .	209,917
Receipts, 1913-14 . . . . .	6,134,897
Total . . . . .	6,344,814
Disbursements, 1914-15 . . . . .	6,307,798
Balance July 1, 1915 . . . . .	37,016

The Constitution provides that 'no debt shall be contracted by the State.' The State has, in fact, a large surplus remaining in its Treasury each year. On July 1, 1915, this amounted to 2,451,487 dollars.

The militia or National Guard consists of a General Staff, two Regiments of Infantry and a Medical Department. The total strength on June 30, 1916, was 106 officers and 1,505 enlisted men.

Production and Industry.—In 1910 the State had 96,685 farms with an area of 10,026,442 acres, of which 5,521,757 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 314,738,540 dollars. The chief agricultural products in 1916 were wheat, 4,640,000 bushels, Indian corn 22,112,000 bushels, oats, 3,220,000 bushels, hay, 1,276,000 tons, and potatoes, 4,224,000 bushels. The area under tobacco was 14,100 acres; the yield amounted to 12,690,000 pounds, valued at 1,904,000 dollars. Apples, peaches, plums, and grapes are grown. On January 1, 1916, the domestic animals were 196,000 horses, 12,000 mules, 245,000 milch cows, 369,000 other cattle, 715,000 sheep, and 380,000 swine. In 1915, the wool clip from 681,000 sheep produced 3,405,000 pounds of wool.

West Virginia has extensive mining and quarrying industries, besides great resources in petroleum and natural gas. The State ranks second for mineral production in the United States. The coal area extends over 17,280 square miles, and about 50,960 men are employed in coal mines. The output of coal in the State in 1914 amounted to 71,707,626 short tons, valued at 71,391,408 dollars. The output of crude petroleum amounted to 9,680,033 barrels (of 42 gallons), valued at 18,468,540 dollars. Of natural gas produced, the value amounted to 35,515,329 dollars. In the State there are iron-mines, but their output is not separately distinguished. The quarries yielded sandstone and limestone to the value of 921,208 dollars. The output of salt was 145,429 barrels (78,036 dollars). The value of the output of the clay-working industries was 5,761,411 dollars. The total mineral produce was valued at 143,640,633 dollars for 1913; and 134,071,803 dollars for 1914.

In the State there are important leather industries. According to the census of manufactures of 1910, there were in West Virginia 2,586 manufacturing establishments with an aggregate capital of 150,923,000 dollars, employing 4,971 salaried officials, and 63,893 wage-earners, wages in the year amounted to 33,000,000 dollars. The cost of the raw material used was 92,878,000 dollars, and the value of the output was 161,950,000 dollars. The statistics of the more important industries in 1910 are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 632.

In 1915 there were within the State 3,909 miles of railway, besides 633 miles of electric railway track. The more important railway systems are the Pennsylvania, the Baltimore and Ohio, the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Norfolk and Western, and the West Virginian Central and Pittsburg.

The coal-fields in the west are well opened up by the Ohio and its tributaries, which provide some of the cheapest means of coal carriage in the world.

On June 30, 1915, there were in the State 7 savings banks, with 27,608 depositors who had to their credit 5,016,024 dollars, being 181·68 dollars to each depositor.

WISCONSIN.

Government.—Wisconsin was admitted into the Union on May 29, 1848. The legislative power is vested in a Senate and Assembly. The Senate consists of 33 members elected for a term of four years, one-half (16 or 17 alternately) of the members being elected each two years. The Assembly consists of 100 members, elected for a term of two years, all of the members being elected at the same time.

All qualified electors in the district to be represented who have resided one year within the State, except members of Congress and office holders under the United States, are eligible to the Legislature. Wisconsin has universal suffrage for males over 21 years of age. There is no property or educational qualification.

Wisconsin is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 11 Representatives.

Governor.—E. L. Philipp, 1917–19 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Merlin Hull.

The State Capital is Madison; estimated population, 30,699 in 1916.

Area, Population, Education.—Area, 56,066 square miles, of which 810 square miles is water, exclusive of 2,378 square miles of Lake Superior and 7,500 square miles of Lake Michigan.

Madison . . . .	30,699	Beloit . . . .	18,072	Stevens Point .	8,692

Of the total population in 1910, 43 per cent. was urban.

The chief religious bodies are: Roman Catholic, Lutheran, Methodist, Congregationalist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Christian Science, Unitarian, and Seventh Day Adventist.

School attendance is compulsory for all children between 7 and 14 years of age, in cities for the entire school year, and in towns and villages for 6 months a year. Where industrial or continuation schools are established children between 14 and 17 who are regularly employed must attend such schools. In 1916 the 8,036 public elementary schools had 10,628 teachers, and 528,102 enrolled pupils; 353 public high schools had 2,533 teachers and 47,288 pupils in 1916. The 8 public normal schools had 1,254 teachers and 4,845 pupils in 1916.

The University of Wisconsin at Madison was begun in 1848. It has (1915) 711 professors and instructors and 7,596 students. Instruction by correspondence was introduced in 1911. Marquette University, Milwaukee, R. C. (1881), has 235 instructors and 1,397 students. There are 8 State Normal Schools for training of teachers, with (1915) 4,360 students and 309 instructors, besides a number of county training schools for teachers.

Expenditure on education in 1914, for elementary and secondary schools, 15,036,809 dollars; in 1915, for normal schools, 1,229,616 dollars; for the University of Wisconsin, 2,152,856 dollars.

Charity.—On June 30, 1914, the State had eleven charitable and penal institutions and the number of their inmates were: State prison, 739; reformatory, 231; industrial school for boys, 398; public school for dependent children, 167; school for the deaf, 172; school for the blind, 111; State tuberculosis sanatorium, 148; home for the feeble-minded, 1,079; two hospitals for the insane, 1,241; hospital for criminal insane, 43. For the year ending June 30, 1914, the cost of their maintenance was 1,115,444 dollars. The State expenditure in maintaining the chronic insane in county asylums was (in 1914) 641,851 dollars.

Finance, Defence.—For the year ended June 30, 1915, the receipts and disbursements (all funds) of the State Government were to the following amounts:—

	Dollars
Balance June 30, 1914 . . . . .	4,300,855
Receipts for year, 1914-15 . . . . .	19,431,931
Total . . . . .	23,732,786
Disbursements for year 1914-15 . . . . .	19,789,188
Balance June 30, 1915 . . . . .	3,943,598

The State has no bonded debt.

The militia of the State consists of three regiments, a separate battalion of infantry, a troop of cavalry, one battery of light artillery, one battery of naval militia, and hospital corps, aggregating (June 30, 1916) 192 commissioned officers and 3,247 enlisted men. The State naval militia contained 12 officers and 114 enlisted men.

Production. Industry, Communications.—Wisconsin is very largely an agricultural State. In 1910 the farms numbered 177,127 with a total area of 21,060,066 acres, of which 11,907,606 acres were improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 1,413,118,785 dollars. The chief crops are wheat, maize and other cereals, potatoes, sugar-beet, grasses, fruit and tobacco. The yield of maize in 1916 was 60,840,000 bushels; of wheat, 3,315,000 bushels; of oats, 81,400,000 bushels; of barley, 18,300,000 bushels, rye and buckwheat being also grown. The yield of potatoes was 13,630,000 bushels; of hay, 4,420,000 tons. The area under tobacco (1916) was 43,900 acres; the yield was 55,753,000 pounds. Fruits (large and small) are extensively cultivated. On January 1, 1917, the live-stock consisted of 715,000 horses, 3,717 mules, 1,750,000 milk cows, 1,340,000 other cattle, 645,000 sheep, and 2,060,000 swine. The wool clip in 1915 amounted to 3,960,000 pounds of wool.

Zinc is the chief mineral product. In 1914 the output of zinc was 31,113 short tons (3,173,526 dollars); iron ore to the value of 1,178,610 dollars; pig iron to the value of 3,350,199 dollars; granite, limestone, and sandstone to the value of 2,413,435 dollars; natural rock cement, graphite, mineral waters were also produced. The value of the total mineral output in 1913 was 12,452,480 dollars; in 1914, 11,022,643 dollars.

In 1910 there were 9,722 manufacturing establishments in the State with a total capital of 605,657,000 dollars. The number of wage-earners was 182,583, receiving 93,905,000 dollars in wages. The value of the products was 590,306,000 dollars. As compared with 1904, the number of establishments increased 14 per cent., capital increased 47 per cent., wage-earners, 21 per cent., wages paid 38 per cent., and value of products 44 per cent.

The statistics of the leading industries of the State during 1910 are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 635.

At the lake ports the shipments consist of grain and flour, coal, lumber, ore and (at Milwaukee and Racine) manufactured articles. There is, besides, at Milwaukee a heavy passenger traffic.

In 1915 there were 7,638 miles of railroads operated in the State besides 847 miles of electric railway track. The leading railway lines are the Chicago and North-western, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha and Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie.

There are in the State 75,700 miles of road of all classes, of which 12,000 miles are improved by gravel, macadam, or other surface.

On June 30, 1915, there were in the State 25 savings banks with 83,415 depositors who had 26,057,904 dollars to their credit, being 312.38 dollars to each depositor.

WYOMING.

Government.—Wyoming was admitted into the Union on July 10, 1890. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 27 members, elected for four years (about one-half retiring every two years), and a House of Representatives of 57 members elected for two years.

The suffrage extends to all citizens, male and female, who can read, and who are registered as voters and have resided in the State one year and in the county 60 days next preceding the election.

Governor.—John B. Kendrick, 1915–1919 (4,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Frank L. Houx.

The capital is Cheyenne.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 97,914 square miles, of which 320 square miles is water. Of the total, about 3,300 square miles are comprised within the Yellowstone National Park, which since 1872 has been reserved for public uses.

Population (State census) on April 5, 1915, 141,705.

The Federal census results since 1880 show the population to have been as follows :—

Years	Population	Per sq. mile	Years	Population	Per sq. mile
1880	20,789	0·2	1900	92,531	0·9
1890	62,555	0·6	1910	145,965	1·5

In 1915 the population according to sex and race was :—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . . .	79,968	380	831	949	82,128
Female. . . .	58,363	229	105	880	59,577
Total . . . .	138,331	609	936	1,829	141,705

In 1915 the foreign-born population numbered 23,575. In 1910 the foreign-born population numbered 29,020, of whom 2,638 were Germans, 2,985 English, 1,331 Canadians, 1,915 Greek, 1,359 Irish, 1,961 Italians, 1,812 Scotch, and 2,497 Swedish.

The Indian Reservation within the State has (1915) an area of 951 square miles, and a population of 1,705.

Of the total population in 1910, 29·6 per cent. was urban. The largest towns are Cheyenne (capital) with 9,661 inhabitants in 1915; Sheridan (1915) with 8,906, Rock Springs (1915) with 5,699, and Laramie (1915) with 4,962.

The religious bodies with the most numerous membership are the Roman Catholic, Mormon, Protestant Episcopal, Methodists, and Presbyterians.

In October, 1916, the 1,006 public schools had 253 male and 1,482 female teachers, and 32,630 enrolled pupils (16,560 boys and 16,070 girls); the 51 high schools had 240 teachers and 3,063 pupils (1,346 boys and 1,717 girls). Teachers are trained in the normal school which is carried on in connection with the University of Wyoming, at Laramie. This University was founded in 1867 and in 1914 had 75 professors and instructors and 573 students. Besides the normal school it comprehends an Agricultural College, a school of mines, a college of mechanical engineering, a school of commerce, a school of music, and a department for home economics.

Expenditure on education in 1916 was 2,121,096 dollars.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 19, being 13 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions, 287, being 196.6 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—The cash receipts and disbursements of the State (exclusive of trust funds) for the period October 1, 1914, to September 30, 1915, are given as follows :—

	Dollars
Balance, October 1, 1914 . . . .	943,489
Receipts for 1914-15 . . . .	1,376,574
Total . . . .	2,320,063
Disbursements 1914-15 . . . .	1,468,032

Balance, Sept. 30, 1915 . . . .	852,031
---------------------------------	---------

In 1915 the bonded debt amounted to 108,000 dollars, and the assessed value of real and personal property in the State in 1915 to 210,485,263 dollars (actual value).

The militia or National Guard had a strength of 579 enlisted men and 35 officers on October 30, 1916.

Production and Industry.—Wyoming is semi-arid and agriculture is carried on by irrigation and by "dry farming." Irrigation is being carried out on a large scale. In 1910 there were 10,987 farms with an area of 8,543,010 acres, of which 1,256,160 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 167,189,081 dollars. Such crops as are grown consist of vegetables, cereals, and fruits. About one half the State is well fitted for grazing and for sheep runs. The wool clip (1915) yielded 29,040,000 pounds of wool. The domestic animals on January 1st, 1917, were 191,000 horses, 55,000 milch cows and 825,000 other cattle, 4,381,000 sheep, and 69,000 swine.

In 1915, 8,385,288 acres in the State were covered with timber. The State has numerous fish hatcheries which stock the streams with trout.

Wyoming is largely a coal producing State. The output of coal in 1914 amounted to 6,475,293 short tons, valued at 10,033,747 dollars. In 1914 the production of copper was 17,421 pounds (2,317 dollars). Gold was produced in 1914 to the amount of 242 fine ounces (5,006 dollars), and gypsum to the value of 86,196 dollars. The quarries yield limestone and sandstone, besides phosphate rock. The output of petroleum was 3,560,375 barrels of the value of 1,679,192 dollars in 1914. The total mineral output in 1913 was valued at 13,682,091 dollars; in 1914 at 12,417,752 dollars.

Manufactures are mostly confined to production for local consumption. In 1910 (according to Federal census results), the State had 268 industrial establishments; the capital invested in manufacturing industries was 6,195,109 dollars, the wage-earners numbered 2,867, the materials used cost 2,608,189 dollars, and the output amounted to 6,249,078 dollars. The chief manufactured products were cars made or repaired, 2,336,678 dollars; lumber and timber products, 751,249 dollars; flour and grist, 746,299 dollars; butter, 268,862 dollars.

Wyoming has no navigable rivers. In 1915, the railways in the State had a length of 1,915 miles, the Union Pacific, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and the Chicago and North-Western railways being the principal lines. There are also 22 miles of electric railway.

The system of stage route transportation is still common.

On June 30, 1915, there were in the State 4 savings banks with 2,902 depositors having 1,161,991 dollars to their credit, being 399·44 dollars to each depositor.

OUTLYING TERRITORIES.

ALASKA TERRITORY.

Government.—Alaska was purchased by the United States from Russia under the treaty of March 30, 1867, the purchase price having been 7,200,000 dollars. The Governor is appointed by the President of the United States for 4 years, and is assisted by a Secretary, a Surveyor-General, and other officials.

By Act of Congress approved August 24, 1912, Alaska became a Territory, with a legislative assembly consisting of 8 senators and 16 representatives. Congress reserved to itself the right to legislate on certain subjects, so that the Territory is now governed conjointly by Congress at Washington and by its local legislative assembly. The first session of the legislature convened at Juneau, the capital, on March 3, 1913, and continued in session 60 days. Regular sessions are to be held biennially. Special sessions may be called by the governor.

Governor—John F. A. Strong, 1913-17 (7,000 dollars).

Area and Population.—The area of the territory is 590,884 square miles, and the census population from 1880 to 1910 is shown as follows:—

Year	Population	Per sq. mile	Year	Population	Per sq. mile
1880	33,426	0·05	1900	63,592	0·1
1890	32,052	0·05	1910	64,356	0·1

Of the population in 1900, 30,507 (27,307 male) were white; 29,536 natives (Indians, Eskimo, Aleuts, &c.); 3,116 Chinese; 265 Japanese; 158 Negroes.

In 1910, of the total population, 36,347 were whites, and the others Indian or other coloured. About 7,000 people, employed in mines, canneries, and railway construction, spend a few months a year in Alaska, but these are not included in the enumeration. In 1914 the population was estimated at 66,356, being 39,000 whites and 27,356 Indians and others.

The largest town is Juneau, the seat of Government, which had (1914) a population of 4,000; the second largest is Fairbanks with 3,000; other towns are Nome, 2,500; Skagway, 800; Sitka (160 whites, 900 natives,) Valdez, 1,100; Ketchikan, 1,000; Cordova, 800. There are altogether 16 incorporated towns.

Instruction, Justice.—In Alaska many religious missions are at work, representing very diverse denominations : Russian Orthodox, Roman Catholic, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, Congregational and others.

The territory is well supplied with schools; and 200,000 dollars have been appropriated to this service by the United States Government for 1914-15. There are in the schools for natives altogether (1912) about 70 schools, 97 teachers, with a total enrolment of 3,841. At the United States Indian Training School at Carlisle, Pa., there are about 80 Alaskan children (Indian, Eskimo, Thlinget, and Aleut). Schools for white children are maintained, both within and outside of the incorporated towns; there being 16 of the former and 30 of the latter.

For the administration of justice the territory is constituted as a judicial district with 4 subdivisions and 4 courts.

Finance.—In the territory of Alaska there is no provision for taxation of real or personal property, except in municipalities where real estate and personal property may be taxed 2 per cent. for municipal purposes only. The revenues are derived from licenses to conduct businesses, a long list of which, with the cost of the respective licences, is prescribed by law.

The following is a statement of revenues from Alaska under specified heads from 1869 to 1915 :—

Years	Internal revenue <sup>1</sup>	Customs	Public lands	Tax on Sealskins	Alaska fund <sup>2</sup> and agricultural experiment station	Miscellaneous	Total
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Total 1869 to 1911	290,242	1,081,430	472,622	9,555,559	1,173,510	1,919,062	14,792,465
1912 . . .	19,081	48,359	12,054	335,062	225,639	165,156	855,531
1913 . . .	17,081	48,220	9,173	130,649	205,907	205,005	616,626
1914 . . .	31,507	17,973	15,831	50,547	278,699	209,323	603,880
1915 . . .	43,124	7,400	16,218	—	228,170	—	868,722 <sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The territory of Alaska was attached to the District of Oregon December 27, 1872, and on September 1, 1883, Washington and Oregon were consolidated; again on September 1, 1902, Washington and Alaska were detached from the District of Oregon and made a separate district.

Production, Industry.—In some parts of the territory the climate during the brief summer is not unsuitable for agricultural operations. There are agricultural experimental stations which are giving valuable demonstrations. In 1910 there were 222 farms with a total area of 42,544 acres, of which 2,659 acres was improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1910 was 1,468,402 dollars. Reindeer have been introduced from Siberia. On June 30, 1914, there were 65 herds, comprising 57,872 reindeer in Alaska. Of these 4,113 are owned by the Government, 5,924 by missions, 10,007 by Lapps, and 37,828 by Eskimo and Indians.

There are considerable timber resources, mostly of the spruce hemlock and red and yellow cedar sort. The National forests in Alaska (January 1, 1915) have an area of 26,631,376 acres. In 1910 there were 152 industrial establishments, employing a total of 73,479 persons (3,099 wage-earners), having a capital of 13,060,116 dollars.

The chief industries are seal and salmon fisheries, and mining. The seal fisheries of the Pribilof Islands are under the charge of the Federal Department of Commerce and Labour.

The salmon fisheries are very valuable, and Government has provided for their preservation by securing legislative enactments for the construction and maintenance of hatcheries. The annual catch of salmon is valued at over 14,000,000 dollars. Halibut, cod, herring, and whales are also caught, the herring and whales for the manufacture of oil and manure. Total value of fish products in 1914, 21,242,975 dollars; in 1913, 15,739,068 dollars.

Gold is worked in South-East Alaska, where a low grade ore is found in the interior on the Yukon river; and at Nome and other places on the west coast. The output of gold in 1915 was valued at 16,900,000 dollars, of silver at 400,000 dollars, and of copper 83,850,000 pounds, valued at 14,400,000 dollars. From 1880, when gold first began to be mined in Alaska, until 1914, 11,817,650 fine ounces have been produced, valued at 244,292,540 dollars. Tin ore deposits near Cape Prince of Wales are of a high grade; two companies work them, but climatic conditions are unfavourable. Lead is produced; coal is worked; petroleum, gypsum, and marble are found. The total mineral output in 1914 was valued at 19,064,963 dollars; in 1915, total value of minerals, 32,854,229 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—The value of the domestic merchandise shipped from the United States to Alaska in the year 1915-16 amounted to 26,502,311 dollars; from Alaska to the United States 48,965,477 dollars, besides gold ore and bullion. In the year 1915, 792 vessels of 512,314 tons entered the ports of Alaska in domestic trade, and 817 of 515,413 tons cleared. The chief ports of shipment of the United States to Alaska are on Puget Sound.

There is a railway of 112 miles from Skagway to the town of White Horse (in the Canadian Yukon region); thence transport is by coach or, in summer, by steamer. The Tanana Mines Railway has 50 miles of line open, connecting Chena, Fairbanks, and Vault Creek. The Solomon River Railway has 60 miles of line open north from Dickson on Seward Peninsula. The Copper River and North Western Railway completed its line (standard gauge) from Cordova to Kennecott, a distance of 197 miles, in 1911. The Alaskan towns are connected with the United States and with Canada by telegraph. There are about 160 post-offices and good mail services in the territory.

HAWAII.

Government.—The Hawaiian or Sandwich Islands formed during the greater part of the nineteenth century an independent kingdom, but in 1893 the reigning Queen, Liliuokalani, was deposed and a provisional government formed; in 1894 a Republic was proclaimed, and in accordance with a resolution of Congress of July 7, 1898, the Islands were on August 12, 1898, formally annexed to the United States. On June 14, 1900, they were constituted as the Territory of Hawaii. The Organic Act has since been amended several times. There is a Legislature of two Houses, a Senate of 15 members elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 30 members elected for two years. Sessions, limited to 60 days, are held biennially. The Governor and Secretary are appointed for four years by the President of the United States.

Governor.—L. E. Pinkham, 1913–1917 (7,000 dollars).

Secretary.—Wade Warren Thayer.

The Territory is represented in Congress by a delegate elected biennially.

Area and Population.—The total area of the islands is 6,449 square miles. The principal islands of the group are Hawaii, 4,015; Maui, 728; Oahu, 593; Kauai, 547; Molokai, 261; Lanai, 139; Niihau, 97; Kahoolawe, 69. According to the census taken on April 15, 1910, the total population of the islands numbered 191,909, an increase of 37,908, or 24.61 per cent. since 1900. The average number of persons to the square mile in 1910 was 29.75. The Capital, Honolulu, in the Island of Oahu, had 68,000 (estimated) inhabitants on June 30, 1916.

Estimated population on June 30, 1916, 237,623.

The number of Hawaiians in the islands in 1910 was 26,041; part-Hawaiians 12,506. The estimated number on June 30, 1916, was 23,770 Hawaiians and 15,334 part-Hawaiians. There are 21,965 Chinese, 97,000 Japanese, 23,755 Portuguese, 16,898 Filipinos, 5,187 Porto Ricans, 3,577 Spanish, 16,042 Americans, British, German, and Russian, 5,254 all others.

Religion and Instruction.—Nearly all the natives are Christians. There is an Anglican bishop at Honolulu; also a Roman Catholic bishop, and ministers of various denominations. Schools are established all over the islands, the sum expended for public instruction for the year ending June 30, 1916, was 1,026,772 dollars, of which 127,271 dollars was for new buildings. Elementary education has always been free. The language in general use in schools is English. In 1916, there were 171 public schools with 804 teachers and 30,205 enrolled pupils; also 52 private schools with 328 teachers and 7,741 enrolled pupils. Of the pupils in public and private schools in 1916, 8,409 were Hawaiian or part-Hawaiian, 5,716 Portuguese, 19,157 Asiatics, 1,560 American, 150 British, and 264 German. In Hawaii there are, besides, a normal and training school, a reformatory industrial school for boys and one for girls; also a College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts.

Justice.—Hawaii has a supreme court, circuit courts, district courts and a land registration court. The circuit judges sit also as juvenile courts. The judges of the supreme and circuit courts are appointed by the United States President; the district magistrates by the governor of Hawaii. There is also a United States District Court, the judges of which are appointed by the President.

Finance, Defence.—Revenue is derived mainly from taxation of real and personal property, income and inheritance taxes, licences, land sales and leases, waterworks and road, school and poll taxes. For the year ending June 30, 1916, the receipts and disbursements were to the following amounts :—

	Dollars
Balance June 30, 1915 . . . .	464,040
Receipts for year 1915-16 . . . .	5,626,905
Total . . . . .	6,090,945
Disbursements for year 1915-16 . . . .	5,602,863
Balance June 30, 1916 . . . .	488,082

On June 30, 1916, the bonded debt amounted to 8,024,000 dollars. In 1916 the assessed value of property was 206,970,229 dollars, an increase of 30,269,007 dollars over the previous year.

In June, 1916, the Hawaiian National Guard contained 4,811 men. The Federal Government, with a view to the protection of the Pacific Coast and the control of the Panama Canal, has voted money for the construction of extensive military works at Pearl Harbour, about 7 miles from Honolulu, and at Honolulu and other places on the island of Oahu. The dredging of Pearl Harbour channel was completed during the year ending June 30, 1912, and the construction of the dry dock, naval station, and fortifications is well in hand.

Production and Commerce.—The islands are to a great extent mountainous and volcanic, but the soil is highly fertile and productive. In 1910 there were 4,320 farms with an acreage of 2,590,600, of which 305,053 acres were improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1910 was 93,363,229 dollars. Sugar and pine-apples are the staple industries, while coffee, honey, hides, sisal, bananas, rice, wool, tobacco, cotton, and rubber are also exported. In 1916 the sugar-crop amounted to over 592,763 tons, and the sugar cane area 115,419 acres. In 1917 the crop was estimated at 633,920 tons. The sugar plantations are extensively supplied with irrigation canals, and this system is coming into general use. In 1915 there were forest reserves aggregating 798,214 acres, and other reserves are contemplated. In 1910 the Territory had 500 industrial establishments, employing a total of 7,572 persons (5,904 being wage-earners), having a capital of 23,875,000 dollars, the cost of material being 25,629,000 dollars and the value of the output 47,404,000 dollars.

For the year ended June 30, 1916, the imports amounted to 34,098,210 dollars, and the exports to 64,670,852 dollars. The shipments of merchandise from the United States to Hawaii in 1915-16 amounted to 31,127,577 dollars, and those from Hawaii to the United States to 64,438,297 dollars, of which 52,516,283 dollars was for raw sugar, 1,901,812 dollars for refined sugar, 6,850,655 dollars for fruits, 343,829 dollars for coffee, and 132,296 dollars for rice. The imports from the United Kingdom in 1916 totalled £15,120, and the exports to the United Kingdom £26,247.

Shipping and Communications.—A considerable addition to the wharfrage accommodation of the port of Honolulu has now been made, and the harbour has been enlarged and dredged to a depth that will admit the largest steamers afloat. At Hilo Bay, on the east side of Hawaii Island, the construction of a breakwater has begun, Hilo being an important place for the shipment of sugar. At Kahului, the principal port on the Island of Maui, the construction of a breakwater has been completed and dredging of the harbour has begun. Many lighthouses have been constructed in recent years.

Ten lines of steamers connect the islands with the United States, Canada, Australia, the Philippines, China, and Japan. In the year 1916, 453 vessels of 1,437,395 tons entered, and 461 of 1,469,617 tons cleared at the ports of the islands. An inter-island steam navigation company with 16 small steamers provides communication between the different islands. There are about 920 miles of railway in the islands, and new lines are projected. There are telephones on the islands of Oahu, Maui, Hawaii, Kauai, and Molokai; total length 6,000 miles; nearly every family in Honolulu has its telephone. Honolulu is lighted by electricity and has lines of electric tramways. The Marconi system of wireless telegraphy is in operation between the islands for commercial purposes and for communication with vessels at sea and with the Pacific coast. The Poulsen system also operates between Hawaii and the Pacific coast. Hawaii is connected by cable with both shores of the Pacific.

PORTO RICO.

Government.—Porto Rico, by the treaty of December 10, 1898, was ceded by Spain to the United States. Its constitution was determined by Act of Congress of April 12, 1900 (known as the "Organic Act"), slightly amended on May 1, 1900, and March 2, 1901. It has representative government, the franchise being restricted only as to age (21 years), residence (one year), and citizenship (either Porto Rican or American). The Governor and the Executive Council, consisting of 6 heads of departments and 5 natives, are appointed for 4 years by the President of the United States, while the House of Delegates, consisting of 35 members (5 from each of the 7 electoral districts), and a Resident Commissioner to the United States, having a seat in Congress in Washington, are elected by the people for 2 years. The Council and the House of Delegates constitute the Legislative Assembly, with the veto power vested in the Governor. In each of the 75 municipalities of the island the mayor, city council, and other chief officials are elected by the people, and they, in turn, appoint their subordinates. The essential features of the United States civil service have been incorporated into a local law by the Legislative Assembly. The judiciary comprises an Attorney General and staff and a United States court appointed by the President; a Supreme Court of 5 members also appointed by the President; 7 District Courts appointed by the Governor; and 34 municipal courts, the judges and officials of which are elected by the people, and 59 justices of the peace appointed by the Governor.

A revised "Organic Act," designed to replace the Act of April 12, 1900, is before the Congress of the United States. The new act, in its projected form, grants American citizenship to the people of Porto Rico and a wholly elective senate; extends the appointive judiciary system; and establishes a co-ordinate and cohesive form of insular government, in which the legislative and executive functions are to be separated.

Governor.—Arthur Yager, 1913–17 (8,000 dollars).

Secretary.—Martin Travieso, Jr.

Area, Population and Instruction.—The island has an area of 3,606 square miles. The population in 1910 was 1,118,012 or 318 per sq. mile. The negroes in 1899 numbered 59,390, and mulattoes 304,352. In 1910, negroes 50,245, mulattoes 335,192. There were, in 1910, 732,555 whites and 20 Chinese and Japanese. The coloured population was 38·2 per cent. of the whole in 1900 and 35 per cent. in 1910. Estimated population on July 1, 1914, 1,184,489. Chief towns, San Juan, 48,716 inhabitants (1910); Ponce, 63,444; Mayaguez, 42,429. Of the working population, 63 per cent. are engaged in agriculture, fisheries, and mining; 21 per cent. in domestic and personal service; 8 per cent. in manufacturing industries; 8 per cent. in trade and transportation. In 1899 over 83 per cent. of the population could neither read nor write. In 1910 the percentage of illiteracy had been reduced to 66·5 per cent.

In 1899 the school system was reorganised and education was made compulsory. In 1916 there were 2,546 class-rooms in 1,506 school-buildings, with 151,562 pupils enrolled; and a well distributed system of night schools and kindergartens. There are also a number of private schools. The University of Porto Rico, established in Rio Piedras, 7 miles from San Juan, is open to both men and women.

Finance.—Revenues are derived from customs and excise, from the general property tax, a collateral inheritance tax, taxes on insurance companies and from various licences and fees. Receipts and disbursements for the year ending June 30, 1916:—

	Dollars.
Balance, July 1, 1915 . . . . .	2,672,495
Receipts, 1915–16 . . . . .	9,142,352

The assessed value of property on January 1st, 1916, was 180,776,142 dollars. The total outstanding bonded indebtedness is 8,480,000 dollars.

The police force consists of about 700 men, and the military force of about 590.

Production, Industry and Commerce.—The cultivated land in 1910 was divided into 58,371 holdings, having a total area of 2,085,162 acres, of which 1,570,304 acres was improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1910 was 102,377,801 dollars. The chief products of the island are sugar, tobacco, coffee, pine-apples, grape fruit, oranges, and other tropical fruits, sea island cotton, textile fibres, bat guano, phosphate, and vegetables, and the principal industries are manufactures of cigars, cigarettes, hats, embroideries, drawn-work, rum, &c. Sugar crops for 5 years : 1912, 371,075 tons ; 1913, 398,003 tons ; 1914, 351,665 tons ; 1915, 346,490 tons ; 1916, 483,589 tons. Sugar exported in 1916 amounted to 424,955 tons, valued at 45,809,445 dollars, being over 68 per cent. of all products exported. In 1916, 109,130,296 cigars were consumed and 159,248,855 were exported, or a total output of 268,379,151 ; while 308,025,865 cigarettes were consumed and 11,785,430 were exported, or a total of 319,811,295. Over 8,000,000 pounds of leaf and scrap tobacco, valued at 3,033,149 dollars, were exported in 1916. Coffee decreased from 51,125,620 pounds, valued at 7,082,791 in 1915, to 32,144,283 pounds, valued at 5,049,283 dollars in 1916, due to climatic conditions, the price received being nearly 2 cents per pound higher than the preceding year. Orange exports amounted to 790,797 dollars ; fresh pineapples to 1,176,406 dollars ; canned pineapples to 122,876 dollars ; grapefruit, a comparatively new product (7,586 dollars in 1907), amounted to 837,014 dollars, while cocoanuts amounted to 413,573 dollars. In 1910 there were 939 industrial establishments in Porto Rico, employing 18,122 persons (15,582 wage-earners), having a total capital of 25,544,385 dollars, with an output valued at 36,749,742 dollars. There is no established mining enterprise, but gold, silver, iron, copper, bismuth, tin, mercury, platinum and nickel are found in the island. There are very productive salt works.

In 1916 the imports into Porto Rico amounted to 38,951,156 dollars ; the domestic exports to foreign countries amounted to 5,778,805 dollars. Shipments of United States merchandise to Porto Rico, 35,892,515 dollars ; of foreign merchandise 3,058,641 dollars. Shipments from Porto Rico to United States, value 60,952,768 dollars.

Shipping and Communications.—In 1915-16, 1,739 American and foreign vessels of 4,718,087 tons cleared from Porto Rico to the United States and foreign countries. The vessels of 13 steamship lines (5 Spanish, the others being French, Brazilian, American, Cuban, and British) visit the island. The harbour of San Juan, the chief port, and naval station proper, is being improved to have an entrance 600 yards wide and 30 feet deep.
